IN AGONY OF LOCKJAW A YOUNG LAD DIED.

Malady Brought On By Rusty Nail Piercing Foot.

LAST MOMENTS TERRIBLE.

SUFFERED EXCRUCIATING PAIN FROM THE DISEASE.

Victim Was Otto Hansgen, the Eleven-Year-Old Son of Contractor Fred Hansgen, of Grove Street—Stepped on the Nail a Week Ago Last Friday—Gave Him No Trouble for a Week.

Otto Hansgen, the eleven-year-old son of Contractor Fred Hansgen, of Grove street, died last Saturday evening from the effects of lockjaw. He suffered exoruciating pains and his death was a terrible one.

One week ago last Friday young Hansgen was playing about his home when he accidentally stepped on a rusty nail that was fastened in an old piece of wood. The nail inflicted a small wound, but the lad paid little attention to the injury. In fact it gave him no trouble until last Friday morning. He then began to suffer terrible pains. His mother at once called Dr. Buchanan and the latter did all in his power to save the boy's life.

All efforts were useless, however, for the malady had been allowed to go to far. The doctor remained with the boy a good part of the time after he was called and he staid with him all of Friday night. On Saturday he was also with him, and was obliged to give the sufferer heavy opiates to overcome the terrible pains.

Toward night the worst came and and young Hansgen passed away. His parents are grief-stricken over the sad death of their son, who was taken away so early in life. They realize that all that medical skill could do was done for their son, but they are heart-broken.

SIPPED TEA AND CHATTED.

Miss Paterson Gave an Informal Affair to a Few of Her Friends.

Miss Patterson, of Central avenue, gave an informal but very pretty tea Saturday last. She was assisted in receiving by her guest Miss Harvey, of Wilmington, Delaware. Mrs. George D. Mellick and Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson presided at the tea table, which the Misses Katharyn Wood, Bowen, Pierson and Schuyler were assidious in their attentions to the guests. Notwithstanding the severe storm the attendance was quite large and the company had a merry time.

INSTALLED THEIR OFFICERS.

Howell Division Held an Interesting Meeting Last Night.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, held their election last night, and as they have not been able to hold a meeting for the past four weeks on account of the illness of several members, the newly elected officers were also installed last night. The officers elected are as follows: Worthy patriach, William B. Ayers; worthy associate, Miss Thompson; recording secretary, B. W. Hand; assistant recording secretary, Michael Armstrong; financial secretary, Miss Alice Scribner; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah A. Mattox; conductor, William E. Koyer; assistant conductor, Mrs. David Bush; inside sentinel, Harry Martin; outside sentinel, W. E. Koyer; chaplain, Mrs. Nestor Corwin.

Miss Glenn Sang.

The special Christmas service was given at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday evening and was rendered in a meritorious manner. Miss Glenn, soprano soloist, sang the solo parts, and Frederick Schilling, organist, was present, having fully recovered from his recent illness. Owing to the bitter cold weather, the attendance was not as large as hoped for.

Too Many Were Ill.

Owing to the fact that so many members of the choir of Grace P. E. church were absent Sunday with illness, and most of those present were suffering from colds and hoarseness, no attempt was made to repeat the Christmas music as had been expected.

Evangelistic Meetings.

Beginning with last night a series of evangelistic meetings is being held in Mt. Zion A. M. E. church which will be continued during the week. J. H. Christmas, of Rahway, is conducting the meetings and much good is looked for as the result of them.

Home From Honduras.

Thomas King, of West Front street, who for a year past has been in Honduras on business, has returned home. He says that he likes the country where he has been very much. Mr. King will not probably return.

JUNIOR MECHANICS TO TAKE PIZIE'S PART.

WHOLE LODGE AGAINST ROANTREE.

The Alleged Assailant Held in Middlesex County Jail Without Bail.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 3—Theodore Roantree, the young man arrested in Newark for atrociously assaulting George Pizie at New Market Saturday night, Dec. 24th, was brought to this city Friday and lodged in jail. Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which George Pizie is a member, intend to push the case against him.

Both the constable and justice in New Market thought that Prosecutor Voorhees wanted the man quickly, so the constable hurried here with him without awaiting to get a commitment. He had Roantree handcuffed. When he arrived here Deputy Sheriff Wesner would not receive him at the jail, it not being lawful to lock a man up without having a commitment. Roantree was then taken before Recorder Sullivan who, acting as a justice, committed him to jail.

He will be held there without bail. Friendship Council offered a reward of $25 for the man's arrest. This will go to the two Newark policemen who caught him.

HOPE CHAPEL KEPT OPEN HOUSE FOR ALL.

WOMEN SERVED LOTS OF TURKEY.

Mrs. Hall and Her Fair Assistants Made Everybody Welcome—Single and Married Men Bowl.

Hope chapel held its eleventh annual New Year's Day reception yesterday at which the usual turkey dinner was served. Preparations were made for 1,000 visitors, and between the hours of 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 10 o'clock at night the ladies of the church were kept busy waiting upon the many who took advantage of the invitations to come and partake of the feast.

No formal invitation to the board was necessary, for dinner or supper was served to everyone who came, whether members of Hope chapel or not. The dinner consisted of turkey and all its accompanying dishes, cranberry sauce, celery, cake, coffee, etc.

Mrs. W. W. Hall was chairman of the house committee. This committee saw to the spreading of the tables, the seating of the people and the feeding of them. Mrs. Hall's assistants were any of the ladies of the chapel who would volunteer to help. The ways and means committee, consisting of I. W. Travell, chairman; Messrs. Harris, Muir, Evans, Firstbrook and Weston, saw to providing the food needed. In the evening there was a little music and an informal social.

During the day there was a bowling match on the alleys between the single men and the married men, which was won by the single men by about 150 pins. The men and their scores are as follows:

SINGLE MEN.		MARRIED MEN.
Martin	175	Head	130
Mundy	150	J. Cose	136
Cose	160	F. Stewart	140
Stewart	166	Penny	142
Evans	165	A. Muir	139

Her Birthday Came Just Right.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. VanHorn, of 171 Duer street, held their annual New Year's reunion yesterday, and entertained ten at dinner besides their own family. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Schooley, the Misses Edna, Cornelia and Florence Schooley, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Drake and Frank Drake, of Elizabeth; Charles Greer, of Plainfield, and Mrs. David Harrison, of Bloomsbury. Yesterday was Mrs. VanHorn's birthday, and for the last ten years she has surrounded herself with her brothers and sisters at this season.

Agricultural Society Officers.

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Somerset County Board of Agriculture held at Somerville recently, the Board was addressed by Prof. John B. Smith, State Entomologist, who spoke at length about injurious insects. Among the directors elected were A. P. Voorhees and Charles F. Debele, of North Plainfield; E. E. Cooper and W. H. Rogers, of Warren township; representatives to State Board are E. C. Taggart, one year, and W. H. Rogers, two years.

Tea in Honor of Guest.

A charming tea was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Patterson at her home on Central avenue in honor of her guest, Miss Harvey, of Wilmington, Del. The drawing and dining rooms were prettily decorated with greens. Mrs. George P. Mellick and Mrs. Stuart Patterson poured tea and chocolate. They were assisted in the dining-room by Miss Pierson, Miss Katheryn Wood and Miss Bowen. There were sixty guests present during the afternoon.

NEW MAYOR IN TOWN.

MR. ROCKFELLOW ASSUMED OFFICE YESTERDAY NOON.

Former Mayor Fisk Was There and Welcomed His Successor—Pleasant Remarks Passed Between the Mayors.

Yesterday at exactly 12 o'clock noon Mayor-elect George W. Rockfellow became Mayor de facto by Charles J. Fisk, who was Mayor up to that time, presenting to him the seal of the city and the one lone single key that goes with the transfer of Mayoralty prerogatives.

Mr. Fisk, in a very happy speech, welcomed the new Mayor to office and spoke auspiciously for his future success. In reply Mayor Rockfellow thanked Mr. Fisk and said that he hoped to be able to give the city general satisfaction and he trusted that he would receive the support of all in performing the duties of his office. With these remarks Mr. Rockfellow assumed the duties of his office.

Among those present to witness the transfer were Councilmen E. T. Barrows, F. H. Andrews, Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, City Treasurer Wm. F. Arnold, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Sergeant Kiely, Lawyer William Newcorn, the two young sons of Mayor Rockfellow, and a representative of The Daily Press.

During the time that the officials were at the Mayor's office many other officials called and received a box of choice cigars from the retiring Mayor as well as his compliments for a happy New Year.

PYTHIAN HONORS FOR LATE ALONZO AYERS.

SERVICES HELD IN HOPE CHAPEL.

The funeral services of the late Alonzo Ayers, of Grant avenue, were held Sunday afternoon from Hope Chapel at 1:30 o'clock. Considering the weather there was a large attendance of friends and relatives. A large delegation of members from Crescent Division, No. 13, U. R. Knights of Pythias, and Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and Exempt Firemen's Association was present and the funeral service of the K. of P. order was carried out during the services. The services were in charge of Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of the chapel, who was assisted by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

After the remarks the officers of the Knights of Pythias took charge and conducted their service according to the rites of the order. This service was very impressive. The display of floral offerings was beautiful and large. Among those who attended the service were many prominent in business and political circles.

Interment was at Hillside. There was no service at the grave on account of the severe cold weather, although the members of the Knights of Pythias accompanied the remains to the last resting place.

Where are the Lights.

The people living on West Fifth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue, are complaining because the electric lights which the Council ordered placed on that street have never been put in position. They say that the Council ordered the lights in October. The poles were erected last month, but nothing further has been done with them.

The Way it Works.

Friday, W. Kilfoil, the Somerset street butcher, inserted an advertisement in the The Daily Press asking for the return of a lost fob watch chain. The advertisement was seen by J. T. Green, of the borough, who happened to be the finder of the lost article. Saturday morning the chain was returned and the finder received a reward of $5.

Train Was Too Heavy.

An unusually long freight train was obliged to stop in this city last Sunday evening owing to the fact that the engine could not proceed with such a heavy train. Another engine was sent for and the train was divided. The difficulty was occasioned by the intense cold weather.

Cleaning the Crosswalks.

The residents of the city and borough feel deeply grateful to the street commissioners of the two municipalties for the efficient way in which they cleaned the sidewalks and crosswalks of snow last Sunday, thus allowing them an opportunity to walk to church.

A Year's at Home.

A pretty at home was given yesterday afternoon at 39 Somerset street by Miss Kate and Miss Sadie Blimm, assisted by Miss K. Florence Brown, Miss Olive Brown and Miss Sadie Brown.

THE BACHELORS LOST MASCOT AND GAME.

BENEDICTS WON EASILY.

THEY LED FROM THE START AND WON BY 68 PINS.

The Bachelors Fell Short to Capture the Pig and Had to Be Content With Another Mascot—Great Array of Benedicts—F. O Ball Rolled the High Score—The Scores Given in Detail.

The Bachelors lay it all to the pig, their absconding mascot. Had his squealing majesty only timed up on the Park Club alleys along with the Bachelor rooters, there is no doubt in their minds but that they would have won. As it was, the Benedicts of the Park Club won the second of the bowling matches between Bachelors and Benedicts at the club alleys Saturday evening. The first match, a week ago, was won by the Bachelors by six pins. This time sixty-nine pins separated the two teams at the finish.

The Bacnelors had made elaborate preparations to have a nice little grunter on hand as a mascot. The Benedicts had also determined to have the same mascot. Then the piggy departed for parts unknown. In his place the Bachelors had a pasteboard darkey that danced and played the banjo through clever manipulation of a string. He was a veritable hoodoo, for every time he played a Bachelor would "break."

The Benedicts marched into the alleys with a magnificent array of talent. From the start there was no doubt in their minds as to the inevitable result. After the game was fairly under way there was no doubt in the minds of the audience either. Peter Matthews couldn't hit the head pin. Clarence Roome lost his nerve, and various other Bachelors fell down from the pedestal of glory. The Yale contingent, McCutcheon and Dupee, saved their own reputation. Dryden rolled well, but the Benedicts said that was because his sympathies were with them.

The Benedicts took the lead from the start and increased it to over 100 pins. The Bachelors were game to the last and made a strong finish. "Captain" Fred Ball carried off the honors of the match with a score of 204. "Doc" Thiers showed a marked improvement over the last game.

The individual scores were as follows:

BENEDICTS.		BACHELORS.
Lyman	118	McCutcheon	184
Douglass	135	Randolph	136
Head	135	Roome W	155
F. H. Ball	146	P. M. Ball	129
Rogers	130	Matthews	118
Brown	125	Dupee	149
Peck	124	Martin	126
Hibbard	133	Roome C	108
F. O. Ball	204	Dryden	146
Dr. Thiers	154	Mathers	117

HAPPY TIME FOR THE BOYS.

The members and friends of the Boys' Club had a happy time New Year's Eve when the annual entertainment and gymnastic exhibition was given. There were about sixty boys present. The exercises were in charge of Wm. B. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, who was assisted by Olaf Saugstad, superintendent of the club. The programme included an address of welcome by Mr. Wadsworth; violin solos by Hugh Gray; vocal duet by Martin Kane and D. Muldowney; jigs by D. Muldowney and C. Muldowney, with musical accompaniment by M. Kane and Hugh Gray; vocal duet by Thomas Kane and Robert Edmenson. This part of the programme was followed with the serving of refreshments by Stephenson and a phonograph entertainment.

Then came the tumbling exhibitions of William Bentiff, Bert Hanson and Joseph Seder. There were rope, ladder and spring-board contests. The first and second prizes in each contest was a knife and shinny sticks. In the rope contest William Lawlor won first and John Waring second. John Berry won first and William Reynolds second in the ladder contest, while William Bentiff and Hugh Gray won the first and second in the spring-board event. It was just 12 o'clock when the entertainment closed, and everyone departed carrying with them the best wishes for a happy New Year.

To Observe Week of Prayer.

The Week of Prayer will be observed this week in the First Baptist church. Prayer meetings will be held this evening and every succeeding evening of the week with the exception of Saturday evening.

JUDGE RUNYON NOW.

HAD HIS FIRST TRIAL YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Was Lenient With the First Offenders—Gave an Unruly Husband Ten Days in Jail—Other Sentences Were Suspended

It's Judge Runyon now. Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock William N. Runyon assumed his duties as City Judge and held his first trial in the dingy little courtroom in the city jail. Judge Runyon was visibly cold when he arrived, but he warmed up in the general handshaking that followed and under the congratulations that were showered upon him by the regular habitues of the City Court. There was a host of friends of the young Judge who were out hunting for him so that they might be present when he first assumed his authority, but Judge Runyon escaped them all but one.

Frank Mogeton was the first victim. He was arrested by Patrolman Totten for being helplessly drunk. Judge Runyon suspended sentence after delivering a seasonable lecture with the promise of a heavy sentence for future misbehavior. Sentence was suspended on Mrs McCleary, charged with being helplessly drunk Saturday night.

This morning William McConnell and Howard Doty were arraigned before City Judge Runyon and sentence suspended. They were arrested by Special Officers Mattox and Gallegher for disturbing a gathering at Washington Hall. Patrick Dunavan, alias "Cockney," was sent to jail for ten days for cursing at his wife and children and throwing crockery at them.

FUNERAL RITES BY KNIGHTS TEMPLARS.

VERY IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES.

Trinity Commandery, Knights Templars, Were in Charge of the Funeral of John Brooks.

The funeral of the late John Brooks was held from his residence, 517 Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The service was that of the order of the Knights Templars, of which Mr. Brooks had been a member. The services were conduted by Trinity Commandery, twenty-eight members being present in full uniform. Eminent Commander Nelson Y. Dungan was in charge. Generalissimo W. H. Freeman acted as his aide. Captain-General H. W. Marshall was in direct command of the Commandery.

The full Templar ceremony was given. Rev. E. M. Rodman, a member of the Commandery, acting as Prelate, assisted by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The Knights formed two lines, one on either side of the casket, while the pall-bearers, Jacob Kirkner, B. Frank Coriell, Asa Collier, H. B. Woodland, B. A. Meeker and John Ringleman, grouped about the head of it. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery. The funeral was very largely attended.

Sermon by Prof. B Rush Rhees.

Rev. B. Rush Rhees, of the Newton Theological Seminary, Massachusetts, preached a deeply interesting sermon Sunday morning in the First Baptist church. From the text "The Stone Which the Builders Rejected the Same has Become the Head of the Corner," he deduced many practical thoughts, claiming that our pride in Christian civilization and our hopes for a more thoroughly Christian civilization are proofs of the acknowledged supremacy of Christ

Saengerbund Society's Good Time.

Last evening in Saengerbund Hall there was a dance for the members and their wives in honor of the tenth anniversary of the society. The affair was largely attended and everything passed off pleasantly. The music was good, as was also the selections by the singing section of the Society. There were no special features in connection with the dance, but everyone had a jolly good time.

The Higgins' Won the Cake.

Eugene O'Reilly gave one of his most successful dances in Washington Hall last evening. There were over two hundred people present and everyone had a thoroughly enjoyable time. The cake walk was won by Miss Higgins and her brother, Michael Higgins. There were many out-of-town people present.

An Informal Dance.

Miss Clara Case, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Case, of Central avenue, gave a small informal dance at her home last evening. Music was furnished by Rogers.

POINTS OF LAW ABOUT THE CITY SEWAGE BEDS.

MRS. MILLIKEN'S DAMAGE SUIT.

Judge VanSyckel Hears Lawyers Argue as to the Liability of the City.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 3—In Supreme Court this morning Judge VanSyckel heard argument of the various counsel in the action of Mrs. Sarah Milliken, of Plainfield, against the city of Plainfield for $10,000 damage alleged to be done to her by the city sewage beds in the west end of the city.

Mrs. Milliken formerly ran a summer boarding house and had as guests a large number of persons from other places. After the sewage beds were put in operation it is claimed by her that the stench that arose from flow of sewage on the beds caused her to lose all her boarders, besides detriorating the value of her property.

The argument heard by Judge VanSyckel today was on questions of law in reference to the action. The first point raised was whether or not the statute under which sewage system was established was constitutional, and if it was if the city was not liable for damages any way.

The arguments lasted for over an hour and a half, and at the conclusion it was ordered that additional briefs be submitted. Upon the result of this suit will depend the question of whether the city will have to defend a large number of other suits of a similar nature, which will aggregate many thousands of dollars.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh represented the city, and Senator Reed, Codington & Swackhamer, of Plainfield, and Charles H. Hartshorn, of Jersey City, the plaintiff.

SIX YEAR OLD BOY IS WITHOUT PROPER HOME.

FLIGHT OF A LAD IN DUNELLEN.

Exposure Has Brought on an Attack of Diptheria—Father Lives in New York.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 3.—The good citizens here are very much worked up over the neglect of a six-year-old boy, the son of Frank Covey, who formerly lived here. The little lad has been handed from one family to another to be cared for until he took cold, grew ill, and now lies at the home of A. F. Warden with the diptheria.

When Covey's wife died he left Dunellen to live in New York. He had two children, a girl, who is now about eight years of age, and the boy. The little girl was adopted by a family here and has a good home. The boy lived away from here until a few weeks ago when he was brought back. Three dollars a week was the price that was offered anyone to keep him, and first he was taken by one family, then by another, until the poor little fellow didn't know what a home was.

His father, it is said, is only making $13 a week in New York, and as he has another wife and family to support, he claims that he cannot take care of the little waif until after this month, when he will have more money.

On Friday night little Covey was out until late. He became ill Saturday, and Dr. Brakeley, who was sent for, said that he had diphtheria. Mr. Warden kindly took the lad in, and will care for him until other arrangements are made. Meanwhile Covey, in New York, has been communicated with.

GRIP PROVED FATAL.

Death of Mrs. Willard After an Illness Lasting Two Days.

Mrs. Willard, widow of Stephen Willard, died Sunday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. Noyes, of La Grande avenue, after a short illness with the grip. She was seriously ill only two days and that was caused by a relapse which resulted in spinal menengitis. For twenty-five years Mrs. Willard was an assistant at the home of Dr. Frank Wells. She was a cousin of Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, and an aunt to Mrs. Craig Waldron. A sister, Mrs. Bird, also survives her. The funeral services will be held from the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

PLAINFIELD GREETS NEW YEAR IN WHITE.

Most Severe Cold Wave of the Season Was Here.

STREET DEPARTMENT BUSY.

THE CROSSWALKS WERE FIRST LOOKED AFTER BY THE CITY.

Then Street Commissioner Gavett Looked After the Enforcement of Sidewalk Cleaning Ordinance—No Arrests Were Made — Mercury Fell to Nine Degrees Below Zero Yesterday Morning.

New Year's came in like a roaring lion, only it was a decidedly chilly lion. Saturday morning saw the beginning of a steady downpour. In the afternoon it grew colder rapidly and the rain changed to sleet and then to snow. The wind came out of the north and drove the light, dry snow about in promiscuous fashion. It continued all through the night and Sunday, the first morning of the new year, saw Plainfield hidden under a covering of white, six inches deep. The wind had drifted it in many places, however. The mercury was not far above the zero mark.

Sunday saw a still further descent on the part of the mercury and Monday morning it broke all local records for many years and dropped down to nine degrees below zero. The wind kindly subsided as the mercury departed for the bottom of the thermometer.

This morning the cold wave had moderated slightly and the mercury stood at four degrees above zero. Today it will grow warmer and cloud up tomorrow for another storm.

Despite the fact that it was Sunday, the day after the storm saw Plainfield in good shape as far as cleaned sidewalks and crosswalks was concerned. Most of the property-owners looked after their walks at once. Street Commissioner Gavett had a full force at work early in the morning. Two snow plows were at work in the suburbs cleaning crosswalks and incidentally cleaning the adjacent sidewalks. Private plows were put on duty by Halstead Compton and James E. Martine and aided the city in its work.

Yesterday Street Commissioner Gavett went out prepared to bring those who hadn't cleaned their walks to justice. They were comparatively few and most of them had good excuses so the walks were cleaned by the street department gang and no arrests were made. A number of citizens followed the advice of The Daily Press and cleaned away the snow in the immediate neighborhood of the fire hydrants.

The sleighing was fair yesterday, but the snow was too dry to pack well. There were many sleighs and cutters out, however, and all the local livery stables found business brisk.

YOUNG OLD MEN WELCOME NEW YEAR

The members of the Asbestos Club, together with a few of their friends, assembled in their wigwam yesterday afternoon and celebrated the arrival of the New Year in a fitting manner. President Stephen Merritt was in charge of the exercises.

A feature of the programme was the appearance of Frank O. Bristol, of Fifth street, who entertained those present with short stories, witty remarks and some pathetic recitations.

Another feature was the playing by Fred VanEps on the banjo, accompanied by D. W. Littell, Jr., on the guitar. They were recalled time and again.

One very enjoyable part of the afternoon's celebration was the reading of the club's history for the past year by F. M. Bacon. This paper was filled with good words and kind remarks were made about the members.

After the rendition of the programme refreshments were served, and the menu was all to be desired. There were oysters, fruit, cheese, crackers, nuts, apples, oranges and soft drinks.

Another part of the programme that should not be forgotten was the gramaphone concert given by Andrew Love and Asa Collier.

Repeated Christmas Exercises.

Last Sunday afternoon at Warren chapel the Sunday-school repeated the Christmas service held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church one week ago. There was a fair attendance of members. Owing to the non-arrival of the presents the scholars who earned them by learning the golden texts for the year were disappointed in not receiving them. They will be given out next Sunday.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

"JENNESS MILLER" SHOES
Answer a Crying Demand.

THE introduction of the "JENNESS MILLER" Shoes is th answer to a crying demand for a comfortable, sensible, perfect-fitting shoe from women throughout the country. They represent a famous woman's idea of what her sisters should wear on their feet. They are made on strictly hygienic, anatomical principles, which give them the greatest amount of comfort and durability ever combined with a graceful shape.

ROOSEVELT GOVERNOR

'A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY'

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 3.--Governor Roosevelt was inaugurated at 11:30 o'clock Monday, taking the oath of office for the second time, having been sworn in on Saturday by John M. Palmer, formerly secretary of state.

Hundreds of persons saw the new governor sworn in and thousands more witnessed the ceremonies that attended the inauguration.

Ten o'clock was the hour set for the ceremony to begin, but long before that time the crowds had begun to climb the hill leading to the Capitol and the steps and approaches to the state building were thronged with an eager multitude.

At ten o'clock the staff of the new governor went to the executive mansion, and a few minutes later Major General Roe and his staff made their appearance.

At eleven o'clock the guard of honor, which was composed of Squadron A, in charge of Captain Bridgman, and the One Hundred and Tenth Battalion of Albany, under Major Hyatt, marched to the mansion to escort the governor and his staff to the Capitol.

At the western entrance to the Capitol the governor and his aides left their carriages and went at once to the executive chamber, where they were met by ex-Governor Black and his staff.

The incoming and outgoing state officers had also gathered in the room, and almost immediately after the arrival of Governor Roosevelt the party was formed into line by former Secretary of State Palmer, and the march to the assembly chamber was begun.

The route of the march, which lay along the southern corridor of the second floor to the grand western staircase, was patrolled by members of the 10th battalion.

The assembly chamber resembled anything but a legislative room when the state officials entered it. All the desks and railings had been removed and the entire auditorium had been used for the seating of visitors.

Over the speaker's desk at a height of about ten feet from the floor, a large platform had been built on which the ceremony of administering the oath took place.

The chamber was decorated elaborately in red, white and blue and gold. In the middle of the hall, directly over the platform, a large flag bearing the seal of the United States had been placed. In front and beneath the platform was a similar flag with the seal of the state of New York.

Behind the platform there were tapestry of crimson velvet lined with gold bouillon, on which at intervals were placed groups of flags arranged in the form of shields and fastened to the tapestry with brass eagles.

Each column was festooned with red, white and blue bunting, and the windows were draped with the Stars and Stripes.

A military band had been stationed in one of the balconies, and before and during the ceremonies it enlivened the proceedings with music. On the platform were the wives and friends of the state officials.

The secretary of state, Mr. McDonough, opened the proceedings. The Right Rev. William Croswell Doane, bishop of Albany, officiated at prayer, and then the new secretary of state administered the oath which made Theodore Roosevelt governor of the state of New York.

Ex-Governor Black, as he yielded the reins of government to Governor Roosevelt, made a little speech welcoming his successor.

After he had been sworn in the new governor advanced to the front of the platform and read his inaugural address. He said:

"I appreciate very deeply all you say, and the spirit that prompts you to say it. We have the same ends in view; we are striving to accomplish the same results; each of us, according to the light that is in him, seeking to advance the welfare of the people.

"A very heavy responsibility rests upon the governor of New York state, a state of seven million inhabitants, of great wealth, of widely varied industries, and with a population singularly diversified, not merely in occupation, but in race origin, in habits of life, and in ways of thought. It is not an easy task so to frame our laws that justice may be done to all alike in such a population, so many of whom have interests that seem entirely antagonistic.

"But upon the great and fundamental issues of good government there must always be a unity of interest among all persons who wish well to the commonwealth.

"There is much less need of genius or of any special brilliancy in the administration of our government than there is need of such homely virtues and qualities as common sense, honesty and courage.

"There are very many difficult problems to face, some of which are as old as government itself, while others have sprung into being in consequence of the growing complexity and steadily increasing tension of our social life for the last two generations. It is not given to any man or to any set of men, to see with absolutely clear vision into the future. All that can be done is to face the facts as we find them, to meet each difficulty in practical fashion and to strive steadily for the betterment both of our civic and our social conditions.

"We must realize on the one hand that we can do little if we do not set ourselves a high ideal, and, on the other, that we will fail in accomplishing even this little if we do not work through practical methods and with a readiness to face life as it is, and not as we think it ought to be.

"Under no form of government is it so necessary thus to combine efficiency and morality, high principle and rough common sense, justice and the sturdiest physical and moral courage, as in a republic. It is absolutely impossible for a republic long to endure if it becomes either corrupt or cowardly; if its public men, no less than its private men, lose the indispensable virtue of honesty; if its leaders of thought become visionary doctrinaires, or if it shows a lack of courage in dealing with the many grave problems which it must surely face both at home and abroad, as it strives to work out the destiny meet for a mighty nation.

"It is only through the party system that free governments are now successfully carried on, and yet we must keep ever vividly before us that the usefulness of a party is strictly limited by its usefulness to the state, and that in the long run he serves his party best who most helps to make it instantly responsive to every need of the people and to the highest demands of that spirit which tends to drive us onward and upward.

"It shall be my purpose, so far as I am given strength, to administer my office with an eye single to the welfare of all the people of this great commonwealth."

The ceremony was closed with the benediction pronounced by Bishop Doane.

As the procession again formed and started for the executive chamber, the band played "America."

In the executive chamber Governor Roosevelt presented the members of his staff with their commissions.

NEW YEARS IN SANTIAGO.

Gen. and Mrs. Leonard Wood to Hold a Reception To-day.

Santiago de Cuba, Jan. 2.--As the last day of the old year passed into history, the people of Santiago celebrated the birth of Cuban independence.

From that hour until dawn hundreds of persons marched the streets, singing and cheering for Cuba and the United States, while bands played patriotic tunes.

Yesterday morning Major Gen. Leonard Wood, military governor of Santiago, following an ancient Santiago custom, held a reception at the palace, appearing for the first time in the full dress uniform of a major general. He received the members of the supreme court, the city council, chamber of commerce, and other officials of the city.

Yesterday General and Mrs. Wood held a reception, at which all who chosse to come were received.

GEN. MILLER STILL FIRM

Critical Situation at Iloilo and Manila Leads to Prompt Action by War and Navy Departments. The Gunboat Helena Ordered to Join Dewey's Fleet.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 3.--Advices to the war department from Major General Otis do not report the situation at Iloilo to be so critical as is indicated in the press dispatches, but the conditions there are serious enough to cause the greatest concern.

According to a long dispatch received from General Otis, Brigadier General Miller was not landed at Iloilo, but is endeavoring, pending the receipt of instructions from General Otis, to conciliate the insurgents in every way possible.

When General Miller's expedition arrived at Iloilo, General Otis telegraphs, he found that the Spaniards had recently vacated the forts defending the town and the insurgents had taken possession.

It was indicated by the telegram that the Spaniards had evacuated Iloilo treacherously, in order to cause embarrassment to the Americans. The insurgent garrisons in the forts were in a very excited condition when General Miller arrived, and it was apparent to him that they had heard false reports about the Americans.

The belief of the war department, based upon something in General Otis' message is that the Spaniards before departing from Iloilo persuaded the Filipino troops that the American forces were not friendly to them, and that the Americans would massacre them or do something equally as bad.

When the vessel which brought the news from General Miller left Iloilo, the insurgents were parleying with General Miller over the latter's request or demand for their withdrawal from the defences.

General Otis, either in the dispatch whose substance is given above, or in a later one, said that he had sent an emissary to Iloilo to say in the name of the United States that this government had no desire to injure the Filipinos, but, on the contrary, was very friendly toward them, and desired to help them and show them every possible aid and comfort. This emissary was to explain that the United States had only the good of the Filipino people at heart, and that the desire to occupy Iloilo did not mean an act of unfriendliness. This message from General Otis is approved by the president and the secretary of war and instructions on the line of those sent to General Miller by the special emissary were telegraphed on to the war department.

While the military authorities will not admit that there is imminent danger of a conflict with the Filipinos, they are evidently of the belief that bloodshed is likely to occur unless Aguinaldo can be brought to terms. The disappearance of the troublesome Filipino chieftain is very embarrassing at this juncture.

He is wanted not only for the purpose of consultation, but because the government has reached the conclusion that it is about time to watch the wily agitator. Nobody knows where he has gone, but it is suspected here that he is preparing his followers in the interior of Luzon for resisting any attempt by the Americans to make them lay down their arms and disband.

The situation at Manila is as serious as that at Iloilo, for it is realized by General Otis that a conflict between General Miller's detachment and the insurgents at Iloilo would probably cause Aguinaldo to throw off his disguise and appear as an enemy of the United States.

In anticipation of just such an emergency, the war department has taken measures to reinforce General Otis as quickly as possible. To that end the six regiments of regular infantry recently ordered to prepare for service in the Philippines have been directed to get ready to move at once, and the quartermaster general's department is making a strenuous effort to obtain enough transports.

A dispatch was sent to General Otis yesterday afternoon announcing that the Twentieth infantry would leave San Francisco not later than January 7, and that the Fourth, Twelfth and Seventeenth regiments, that are to go by way of the Suez canal, would depart from New York not later than January 13, while two other regiments would be under way from San Francisco by January 15.

The necessity of increasing the United States military force in the Philippines has been apparent to the administration ever since Aguinaldo began to show his teeth. The insurgents in the island of Luzon alone are said to number thirty thousand, while General Otis has about twenty-two thousand men, regulars and volunteers.

About two thousand of these are at Iloilo. It is certain that no volunteers will be withdrawn from the Philippines when the regulars get there, as was intended, unless a solution of the present emergency is reached by that time.

The situation has brought the naval authorities to a realisation that few of the vessels in Admiral Dewey's fleet are suitable for service in rivers and shallow harbors, where the insurgents have fortifications.

About a month ago Admiral Dewey suggested that some light draught vessel be sent to him for use in the streams leading to the interior of Luzon and other islands.

The newly developed situation in the Philippines, however, has recalled to official attention the suggestion of Admiral Dewey, and steps were taken yesterday to comply with his desire as far as it lay in the power of the navy department to do so.

CUBANS ARE HAPPY.

Evacuation Ceremonies Marked by Good Feeling.

Havana, Jan. 3.—The first real Yankee sunrise that ever painted the skies of the West Indian archipelago came yesterday morning and kissed the Stars and Stripes above the palace of the departed governor general.

Evacuation ceremonies have created a great revulsion of feeling in the city. The Cubans are in a happier mood than they have been since the Americans landed here.

They had feared a snub. General Brooke's conduct toward them they thought a little arbitrary and sparks of discontent were smouldering and threatening to break into flames of disorder.

But at the last moment General Brooks had a happy thought. He invited the Cuban generals Mayia Rodrigues, Mario Menocal and Rafael de Cardenas to the feast and turned the tide of resentment into joy.

General Lee is the hero of the day. Where missiles and epithets had been hurled at him by a frenzied and misunderstanding populace, yesterday the missiles were flowers and kisses.

Major Russell B. Harrison is in command of the Cabanas fortress, next to General Uncleanliness. The place will be cleaned immediately. It is a pesthole.

Dr. Laine is in charge of the upper court of justice and Colonel Bliss has the keys of the custom house.

There have been no disorders in the city since the raising of the Stars and Stripes.

American School for Havana.

New York, Jan. 3.—Miss Francis Molina, a lady who has taken much interest in educational matters in the past sailed for Havana on Saturday to open "The American School" there. The school will be American in its methods, in its curriculum, in its text books, and even in the use of the language spoken.

Miss Molina belongs to a very old Cuban family but she has received a fine English education and is fully qualified to successfully conduct such a school as she has in mind.

The news of Miss Molina's undertaking has preceded her to Havana, and she will have at least fifty pupils as soon as she opens the school in that city.

Bank Cash or a Suicide.

Philipsburg, Pa., Jan. 2.—O. Perry Jones, cashier of the First National Bank, of Philipsburg, one of the most extensive coal operators in this section and interested largely in manufacturing enterprises here, committed suicide at his home Saturday night.

He had taken his family to the opera house, then returned to his home and shot himself. His body was discovered on the return of his family. It is supposed that recent hard work and anxiety were the cause, although as late as Friday evening he seemed to be in the best of spirits.

Gov. Tanner's Office Robbed.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 3.—It has just become known that the office of the governor in the State House was entered Saturday night by parties unknown and $540 stolen from a drawer.

The crime is a mystery, as all floors in the building are guarded by watchmen.

The theft was discovered by Colonel J. Mack Tanner and an investigation is pending.

Suspicion points to an employe in the state house.

Harvard Wins Again.

New York, Jan. 2.—Harvard again has demonstrated the superiority of her chess players by winning for the fifth time the intercollegiate chess trophy. In the seven annual meetings which have so far been held, the Cambridge players have always made good scores. Columbia won in the first two tournaments by very narrow margins. The total score of Harvard in the seven years is fourteen games ahead of her nearest competitor, Columbia.

Chief Te-Hes-La Dead.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Daniel La Forte, known by his Indian name as Te-Hes-La, president of the Six Nations, and a principal in the case of the Onondaga Indians against John Boyd T hatcher, in the supreme court, died Sunday afternoon at his farm house on the reservation.

He was sixty-six years old and is survived by a widow and grandson, which latter will succeed as chief of the Six Nations.

Admiral Sampson Ill.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A telegram received at the navy department yesterday from Glen Ridge, N. J., said that Admiral Sampson would be unable to attend the White House reception on account of illness.

His daughter, whose marriage is set for Wednesday, is also ill.

Chairman Dingley's Illness.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 3.—There was no material change yesterday in the condition of Representative Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, who is critically ill with the grip at his residence here.

He rested quietly, but it is still feared that the attack may develop into pneumonia.

A Successor to Peters.

New York Jan. 3.—Mayor Van Wyck has issued a proclamation calling the members of the Municipal Assembly for the Borough of Manhattan to meet at twelve o'clock on Thursday, January 5, to elect a president of the Borough of Manhattan to succeed the late Augustus W. Peters.

Senor Sagasta Recovering.

GREAT FLOODS IN CHINA

Thousands of Persons Reported to Be Starving.

APPEAL FOR AMERICAN AID

Crops on the Yellow River District Destroyed by Floods. Panic in Szechuen Province. Yumantze the Rebel Chief. Beholds the Black Flag.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 3.—Advices brought by the steamship Victoria say that merchants in Szechuen province, China, wired to Shanghai previous to the sailing of the Victoria asking that all shipments of merchandise into that province cease.

The Yellow river floods have destroyed the crops, famine has resulted and thousands of natives are reported to be in a starving condition.

Thousands of hungry and ragged refugees are moving down the river in boats only to find the walls of the cities closed against them.

The government appropriated three hundred thousand taels for their relief, but less than one-fifth of that money has been distributed.

It is said that dishonest officials have misappropriated the balance. A relief fund has been started for them in Shanghai.

The Rev. B. Craig Patterson of the Chin Kiang mission, North Kiangsu, appealed to Americans for aid.

A panic prevails throughout Szechuen province, caused by the reholsting of the black flag of rebellion by the outlaw Yumantze. After offering to refrain from further depredations, and receiving a compensation therefor from the Chinese authorities, Yumantze has reassembled his followers and started a new anti-Catholic crusade.

The French missionary Fleury is being held by Yumantze's band and hopes of rescuing him have been abandoned.

OUR FLAG ON THE MAINE

Havana, Jan. 3.—It developed yesterday that the company of the Indiana volunteer infantry which waved Cuban flags during the parade Sunday was not placed under arrest as at first reported.

Investigation proved that the flags were given to members of the company by Cubans in the crowd and that the flags were thoughtlessly waved by the cheering volunteers.

Twenty-five Cubans, well mounted and armed, joined the column at the Prado and rode to Central Park turning into a side street. They aroused much enthusiasm.

The seamen of the battleship Texas, at 12.30 Sunday afternoon rowed to the wreck of the Maine and hoisted the Stars and Stripes to the fore peak of the wrecked battleship. The flag was saluted by the ships in the harbor. A large American flag was also hauled to the top of the shears at the naval dock. It could be seen for miles.

Lord Dunraven Honored.

London, Jan. 2.—The New Year's honors include Lord Dunraven being appointed a privy councillor for Ireland and Sir Edward Chichester, R. N., being appointed a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in recognition of his services as captain of the British first class armored cruiser Immortalite, which was stationed at Manila during the war, which the Times points out afforded him the opportunity to display tact and judgment, of which he took every advantage.

Mr. Sadler, the former British consul at Chicago, is made a knight commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Connecticut Senatorship.

New Haven, January 3.—Fessenden men in this city are claiming that in the senatorship contest they have now secured the pledge for their candidate of ninety members of the state legislature out of 161 needed to elect. The Hawley men still claim a clear majority under the pledge, and that they have lately secured almost the solid delegation from Windham county, with the understanding that Representative Russell will be second choice.

All the indications go to show that the workers of the three candidates are trying to get votes by deals with Russell as a reversionary candidate.

Bonapartist Activity.

London, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Paris to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the Bonapartists, despite their denials, are actively employed in organizing their forces.

Committees have been established even in the small communes, for the purpose of ascertaining the number of citizens likely to favor the restoration of the Empire.

A Coal Mine on Fire.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 3.—A dispatch to the Post-Dispatch from Carlinville, Ill., says that the tipple and top works of the Carlinville coal shaft are on fire.

Ninety men are imprisoned under ground. The fire department seems unable to stop the flames.

Emperor William Has the Influenza.

Berlin, Jan. 3.—The emperor has been confined to his bed with an attack of influenza. He was better, at last accounts, his fever having abated considerably.

No Massacre of French in New Hebrides.

Paris, Jan. 2.—M. Lockroy, minister of marine, is informed that the report of the massacre of a French lieutenant and 113 men in the New Hebrides is false.

POPULISTS IN A QUANDRY.

A Railroad Bill Passed by Kansas Legislature Valueless.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 3.—The Populist leaders of Kansas are confronted by a serious problem. Both branches of the legislature have passed a railroad bill which railroad attorneys assert is not worth the paper it is written on.

It was announced yesterday that Governor Leedy had signed the bill, but as a matter of fact, he went to his home at Lawrence without doing so, and his failure to approve the measure, is prompted by a desire to confer with the steering committee with a view to changing it and having it re-enacted under a suspension of the rules.

The constitution gives the governor power to assemble the legislature in extraordinary session when a grave emergency demands it. The "emergency" set forth in Governor Leedy's call was the necessity of railroad legislation. Now, the legislature has passed a bill which does not meet that "emergency" until the first Monday in April next, and one month after a regular session of the legislature shall have adjourned.

The railroads intend to contest the new law on that ground, and have announced that they will carry the matter to the supreme court of the United States.

They will assert that no emergency exists, and that if it did exist the new law should have been made operative at once.

HELPLESS ON THE OCEAN

Efforts of the Newby to Aid the Steamship Dart.

Queenstown, Jan. 2.—The British steamship Newby, Captain Clark, from Philadelphia on December 4 for this port, has arrived here, and reports having passed the British steamship Dart, a vessel of 2,056 tons register, on December 2, in latitude 49 north and longitude 13 west, with her propeller carried away.

The Newby towed the Dart for an hour, when the hawser parted. She then stood by the Dart for twenty-seven hours, but was unable to get another hawser aboard the disabled ship owing to the heavy sea.

Her own safety demanded that she proceed, leaving the Dart in a helpless condition.

The cabin of the Newby was flooded and much interior damage was done. Her lifeboats were stove in and her deckwork was badly injured while attempting to aid the Dart.

The second mate and a seaman of the Newby were injured, all the provisions on board were destroyed and the crew lost part of their clothing.

Mr. Aldridge's Successor.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Many guesses are being made in connection with the appointment of the superintendent of public works.

It is said that this, that and the other man are strong favorites and that each is sure of the appointment. As a matter of fact, the question is not likely to be settled for a day or two at least.

Governor Roosevelt has been devoting his attention to other matters since his arrival here. He did not approach Henry H. Lyman and offer him the position, as has been reported, nor is Colonel John N. Partridge the leading candidate, as a morning newspaper said.

A high official saw the governor Sunday night and advocated Colonel Partridge's cause with him, but he received no answer.

As the case stands, the next superintendent of public works may be Gardiner Lyman or some one else, perhaps Charles Sooysmith. Each has an equal chance.

Victoria's Abhorrence of War.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The Journal has been informed by a personage in the suite of the ex-Empress Eugenie that, on the eve of her departure from England, in the early days of the Fashoda incident, the former empress took leave of Queen Victoria and when leaving, the queen said:

"If war should break out between France and England, I would ask God to allow me to die before hostilities begin."

Three days later, it is added, the secretary of the ex-empress communicated the words of Queen Victoria to the French foreign office.

Big Freight Wreck.

Bound Brook, N. J., Jan. 3.—A long freight train going east on the Lehigh Valley Railroad was totally wrecked early yesterday morning near New Market.

A hot journal on a heavily loaded grain car cut off the axle and let the car down on the rails.

Twenty cars piled up completely blocking the road and scattering the freight in all directions.

The Lehigh Valley trains are being run over the Central Railroad. No one was injured.

The President Receives.

Washington, Jan. 3.—President McKinley held his first New Year's reception at the White House yesterday. In the conservatory was posted the United States Marine Band in their brilliant scarlet uniforms.

The red parlor, which was set apart for the reception of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps, was handsomely decorated with potted plants and maiden ferns.

A San Francisco Blaze.

San Francisco, Jan. 3.—A fire which started in the business building at No. 917 Stevenson street Sunday caused a loss of fifty thousand dollars before it was extinguished.

The Krough Company, makers of pumps and hydraulic machinery, lose forty thousand dollars and the San Francisco Artistic Metal Works ten thousand dollars.

Anti-Tax Riots in Sicily.

London, Jan. 3.—A special dispatch from Rome says that a mob of four thousand people has destroyed the internal revenue sentry boxes and stoned the gendarmes around Niscemi, Sicily, as a protest against excessive taxation. A number of persons were wounded.

Pleased To Do It.

Plainfield Citizens Gladly Speak Publicly On This Subject.

A public statement
Given to the public, for the public good.
A citizen's experience,
Truthfully told for humanity's sake
Should find ready appreciation.
Plainfield people are pleased to do it,
Pleased to tell their friends and neighbors,
Tell them about the "Little Conqueror."
The good deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills
Are spreading o'er the city.
Lifting burdens from aching backs,
Curing the pains of kidney ills.
Read the proof in a Plainfield man's words:

Mr. Jepp Zenson, of 728 W. Front St., patternmaker by trade, says: "For a year I had symptoms of kidney trouble. A sort of grinding pain across my back at times extended up to my shoulders and there was a lameness over my kidneys and severe headaches. When I stooped I always felt dizzy and sometimes was fairly blinded. In the mornings I felt stiff and sore until I got some exercise. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised in my city paper and so highly recommended for kidney complaint that I went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They did me a great deal of good. From my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than endorse them."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A DAY WITHOUT BREAKFAST.

After the First Week or Two It Is Not a Difficult Custom to Observe.

The non-breakfast diet is one that has more adherents than is suspected. A woman was encountered the other day who said that not a morsel was cooked in her home any day in the year until the noon-day meal. Her children went off to school, her husband to his business, and even the maid, who had become a convert, went through her morning duties—all without breaking their fasts. The theory on which these two-meals-a-day folk base their conduct is that, no work being done after the late and hearty dinner, and little tissue waste following during the hours of sleep, the body has sufficient energy stored from the evening meal to meet the demands of the next forenoon's work. To take a hearty breakfast, they claim, is simply to provide a surplus of supply, and by just that much overtax the system. The elimination, therefore, of these 365 meals a year means conserving of energy, which, in the aggregate, is very valuable. They say, too, that after the first week or two it requires no effort to begin the day without food, and even the aromatic Mocha, steaming through the house, produces no effect upon their resolutions. This same woman is authority for the statement that the adherents of this diet or want of diet are numerous, a statement that is sustained by recent newspaper reports from various places.—New York Post.

HURT NO ONE AND NO ONE HURT HIM

He Willingly Stood a Target for the Enemy but Wouldn't Return Fire.

At the battle of Chickamauga a fellow was shooting straight up in the air and praying as lustily as ever one of Cromwell's roundheads prayed.

The Presbyterians of 1646 prayed loud and sang hymns in battle, but they shot straight at the cavaliers every time. This fellow was blazing away at the sky, and when Lieut. Killingworth remonstrated with him about it he paid no attention to him whatever. Capt. Joe Billingsley threatened to cut him down with his sword if he didn't shoot at the enemy, for the woods in front were full of them. He merely remarked to the Captain: "You can kill me if you want to, but I am not going to appear before my God with the blood of my fellow man on my soul."

He never flinched, but stood squarely up, exposed to every volley of the enemy's fire. When the sun set on the evening of Sept. 18, 1863, Capt. J. C. Billingsley and Lieut. Allen Killingworth both lay dead on the battlefield of Chickamauga, and R——went through without a scratch.—Galveston News.

Lee's Surrender.

When Hamlin Garland was gathering material for the life of Grant he spent a day or two in Atlanta, where he met an old Virginia negro who said that he had witnessed Lee's surrender, Garland was interested and questioned him closely.

"You say you were present when Lee surrendered?"

"Dat I wuz, suh?"

"Did you see Lee give up his sword?"

"No, suh, I didn't. Gin'rul Lee give up the sword? Not him! Dey tried ter take it fum him, but he made a pass at one er two of dem, en dey lef' off—I tell you!"

"And where was Grant all that time?"

"Oh, he wuz right dar, sur! En he, tol' em, he did: 'Well, boys, let him keep de weepon. He can't do much damage, kase he done whipped anyhow.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

Mr. Fisk's Public Service.

After seven years of service to the city—two terms in the Common Council and one term in the Mayor's chair—Charles J. Fisk retired to private life yesterday noon. Mr. Fisk has been one of the most influential and conspicuous public officials Plainfield has ever possessed. Independent in financial means, he has given a wealth of personal attention and work to city affairs that has aided materially in bringing Plainfield up in the front rank of New Jersey cities.

His service in the Council was one of activity and interest in advancing the city to a proud position among the municipalties of the State. In the two terms he was a Councilman he served on several committees, but it was as chairman of the finance committee during his second term that he accomplished excellent work. Mr. Fisk's intimate knowledge of financial matters qualified him particularly for the work that devolved upon that committee, and as its chairman he succeeded in putting the city's bookkeeping in model shape. But other than this work, he was also alert in every other public matter.

During his public service some of Plainfield's most important public institutions have been established—notably the street railway and the sewer system. It was largely through his efforts that the present street railway facilities exist in this city. In securing an adequate sewer system one of the greatest drawbacks to its success was the financial end. By Mr. Fisk's thorough personal work this disadvantage was overcome speedily and to the best interests of the people.

Of course, during his term as Mayor Mr. Fisk's acts have been simply executive, but his advice and experience has been of great value to all brances of the city government.

Want Better Local Government.

Following after Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, Summit and Westfield are the next towns in point of population and importance in Union county. But strange as it seems both of these communities are still under township government. Though from a commercial and social standpoint both places are up and doing always, they cling to the unprogressive form of local government with a devotion that is truly startling in the light of how much more satisfactory a borough government is to communities of their size and situation.

It is true, however, that some Westfield people have earnestly agitated the creation of a borough for that place, but some of the voters whose sight only extends in the direction of their pocketbooks have thus far prevented the formation of a municipality with laws and methods more convenient and auspicious to the town.

Summit seems to be tiring of the backwoods township ways, too, and last week an enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of that place was held to discuss the question of providing themselves with a better system of local government than the township plan affords. Summit has gone at the subject with an energy that augers well for a change in the not distant future.

Evidently Sheriff Litterst, of Middlesex county, doesn't know all that is to be known about jails yet, and the latest methods of managing the getting in and getting out part of them. It is with pleasure, therefore, that we are able to offer for his consideration the experience of an Arkansas Sheriff. It seems that four prisoners broke out of the county jail at Eureka Springs, the other day, to attend a dance given by some of their friends. The jailer spent the night in a fruitless search for his missing charges, and upon returning to the prison at daybreak, found them waiting to get in. He was disgusted when they asked him if breakfast was ready, and told them that "after the way they had acted they could stay out." Then the jailer went inside and locked the door, whereupon the prisoners forced their way into the jail and returned to their cells.

REAR ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY.

On Christmas day, December 25, 1898, George Dewey, the hero of Manila, was elevated to the senior rear admiralty of the American navy, Rear Admiral Bunce retiring. Rear Admiral Dewey is at present in command of the American naval forces in Asiatic waters, with headquarters at Manila.

"They threaten to bar from Congress a member-elect from Utah who is alleged to have four wives," says the Hawaiian Gazette. Give Roberts a show, at least. He is having trouble enough with his three better halves, but if he has four by the time the news reaches Hawaii what the number will be by the time it reaches Hong Kong is mere conjecture. Probably it will push the Sultan of Turkey very close for first honors.

Der Somerset Bote, one of New Jersey's best German papers, has this to say in today's issue about the calendar issued by the Daily Press for the new year:

The Plainfield Press, whose progressive proprietor is A. L. Force, has surprised its readers with a handsome calendar for 1899. On it are the familiar faces of its eighteen juvenile newsboys surrounding Circulation Manager C. F. Stout. It is a successful piece of work, adding more laurels to the always genial Press staff.

An Arkansas editor who read that a lady in New York "kneads bread with her gloves on" remarks: "We need bread with our pants on; we need bread with our boots on, and if our subscribers who are in arrears don't soon pay up we shall need bread without anything on."

The New York World points with shame to the fact that half the school teachers of that great and gorgeous metropolis gets a smaller compensation per diem than the street sweepers are regularly paid by law. The street cleaners are able to vote, however.

The Trenton Times, alone of all the capital city papers, has taken up the fight against the formation of trusts in New Jersey, and especially the pottery combination, which directly affects Trenton. More power to the Times' hot shot in this direction.

Richard Croker has gone into the insurance business in New York. Now if he can induce Tom Platt to take out a policy protecting him from being thrown down by Col. Roosevelt, the Tammany Boss will have made a masterstroke at the very start.

The New York Press, which is not altogether friendly to Senator Reed, admits this morning that the Somerset county man will undoubtedly be elected President of the Senate.

Well, may it be a Happy Turee Years to Mayor Rockfellow.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Plainfield trolley fight has ended in the passage of an ordinance granting a ninety-nine-year franchise on terms much better than were offered when the application was first made. This permits the construction of the connection link in the trolley line between Elizabeth and Plainfield, and is expected to benefit both cities, as well as the intervening territory.—New York Tribune.

* * * * *

The Plainfield Press man imagines Bayonne one vast goose pasturage as he rides through the city on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, a place where goats do thrive and geese make sad havoc on vegetation. Not so, my forceful lord, not so. The "West Side" and "Murray Hill" of Bayonne bloom with the roses—in their season—and there can be no place more beautiful. After all, Mr. Force, you have, in your own city, only a plain field, where geese and goats may roam at their leisure.—Bayonne Herald.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

The Ladies' Orchestra held a successful entertainment and reception in Apgar's Hall last night. The musical programme consisted of selections by the orchestra, and by the banjo club, vocal solos by Mrs. Decker, of Plainfield, a piano solo by Miss M. Potter, of Mt. Pleasant, vocal solos by Miss Mabel Jamison and a violin solo by Mrs. George Saums. A little play called "Changed Partners" was then given. George Richardson had charge of it, and the others who took part were Miss Grace Vail, Mrs. W. Hetfield, Miss Lulu Davis and Arthur Palmer. This was followed by the reception from 10 to 12. Dancing was the order of the hour, music for which was furnished by the orchestra.

The freight house is not yet completed, and was not ready for use by January 1, as was planned. However, the work is being pushed rapidly, and it will soon be finished.

Tonight the officers of William G. Holton Council, J. O. U. A. M. will be installed. There will also be one or two initiations, and a short programme.

Asa Merrill was out with his snow plow early Sunday morning and also yesterday, breaking paths so that people could get through.

On account of the storm Saturday night the Bound Brook cars did not run all day Sunday or yesterday until about noon.

Skaters on New Market lake yesterday were able to skate as far up the stream as the iron bridge.

Miss May Apgar has returned from a visit in Flemington.

Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Jamison are visiting out of town.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 3.—Rev. J. S. Braker preached his farewell sermon as pastor of the Baptist church Sunday morning. Mr. Braker preached a strong and touching sermon and at its conclusion gave a short review of the work done by the church during this five years as pastor. During the service Mrs Braker sang a beautiful solo entitled "When my life work is ended." A reception will be tendered this evening to Mr. and Mrs. Braker and an invitation is extended to all to come and meet them for the last time, before entering upon their labors in their new field.

Rev. Mr. Woodruff was called home Saturday by the death of his grandfather, consequently no service was held in the Methodist church Sunday morning and no Union service was held Sunday evening in the Baptist church, as Mr. Woodruff was to preach.

The annual election for chief, first assistant and second assistant of the fire department will be held this evening by the two fire companies in their reception rooms.

The residents of this town are beginning to imagine they hear the merry clang of the trolley bell and are consequently very happy in their imagination.

Mrs. Agusta Miller and daughter, Miss Cora, have returned from a pleasant visit with relatives in Newark.

William Bullman, of New York, spent Sunday and Monday with his friend, George Allen.

Mrs. Sarah Cochran and daughter, Miss Katie, visited old friends in town Saturday.

The Board of Education hold a meeting in the school parlors this evening.

WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, January 3—At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon occurred the death of Mrs Catherine Darsh, mother of John Darsh, one of Westfield's leading hardware merchants. Mrs. Darsh was eighty-three years of age and was an old resident of this place. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. N. W. Cadwell will officiate. Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Mrs. Laura Wilcox, wife of Albert Wilcox, died last night at 10 o'clock in the sixty-third year of her age. She leaves a husband and two sons, Cyrus and Edward, one of whom is away. The funeral will be held at the convenience of the family, when the absent son comes home.

A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying and exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. What is needed is that which is cleansing, soothing, protecting and healing. Such a remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. To test it a trial size for 10 cents or the large for 50 cents is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York. Druggists keep it. Upon being placed into the nostrils it spreads over the membrane and relief is immediate. It is an agreeable cure.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Every bottle guaranteed.

Andrew Carnegie is to give a $3,000 organ to the Presbyterian church in Boulder, Col. The pastor of the church the Rev. Dr. Netman, was born near Mr. Carnegie's old home in Scotland.

Mayor Rase, the first Socialist ever elected mayor of an American city, was installed in office Monday, at Haverhill, Mass., and in his inaugural address he gave an outline of his policy.

According to official figures, Great Britain expends ninety million dollars a year on the support of the poor, and Germany about twenty-five million dollars. This does not include private charities.

A fast mail on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad has just made the run from Omaha to Chicago, 502 miles, in ten and one-half hours. A speed of ninety miles per hour was attained.

Seven young people were injured, two fatally, while enjoying a new year sleighride near South New Berlin, N. Y., by being struck by an express train on the New York and Ogdensburg Railroad.

E. H. BIRD, P. M

DESIGNER OF OUR FLAG.

After years of search the grave of Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, U. S. Navy, who designed the present American flag, first hoisted on the Capitol in 1818 has been located beyond a doubt in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

When Capt. Reid designed the flag there was a dispute as to whether or not a stripe should be added for every State. He suggested the addition of a star, and also the words "E Pluribus Unum."

Capt. Reid also designed the code of signals, established the present lighthouse system and the Sandy Hook pilot system. He was at one time Collector of the Port of New York. He was given a vote of thanks by Congress and a sword and a vote of thanks by the State of New York for saving Gen. Jackson's life at the battle of New Orleans.—New York World.

Anecdotes of Whittier.

The following amusing anecdotes are told of Whittier the poet. A little girl, who was staying at the same house with him, and of whom he was very fond, asked him to commemorate in verse the death of her favorite kitten, Bathsheba by name. Without a moment's hesitation the poet recited solemnly, "Bathsheba, to whom none ever said 'Scat!'—No worthier cat Ever sat on a mat Or caught a rat. Requiescat!" The same little girl had a pony who broke his leg, and again the poet was called upon to comfort the child with some poetic sentiment. "I have written some lines myself," she said, "but I can't think how to finish the verse." "What did you write?" asked Mr. Whittier. "My pony kicked to the right, he kicked to the left, The stable-post he struck it. He broke his leg short off—" And then added Mr. Whittier, "And then he kicked the bucket." During the war a Quaker friend, who was a shipbuilder, asked Whittier's advice as to building warships. At first Whittier did not commit himself; but, as the shipbuilder was leaving, he remarked, "Thomas, if thee builds ships, I advise thee to use the best timber, and build them strong."

Sanitary Paris Barbers.

Paris barbers and hairdressers are now obliged by the police to take sanitary measures in carrying on their business. "Elaborate regulations have been sent out requiring them to use only nickel-plated combs, to substitute pluverizers for powder puffs, to cover the hair cut off with sawdust and have it removed at once, to wash their hands before tackling a customer, and to place all metallic instruments, razors, shears, combs, cutting machines, &c., in a solution of soap and boiling water for ten minutes before they are used.—New York Sun.

The Belled Buzzard.

For many years a buzzard has frequented the country around Buena Vista, Ohio, which has become famous as the "belled buzzard," from the fact that its movements were always accompanied by a tinkling sound, as from a small bell.

The other day the bird was captured, and securely fastened around its neck was found a brass bell, on which was engraved, "Hands off, 1841."

The bell was worn thin from long use, and was removed from the bird, after which the latter was released.—Golden Days.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on L. W. Randolph, Druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c. and $1 Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Need of Safety Valves.

A high pressure life calls for protective measures, and the woman who engages mind and heart in her purpose, even though she may not be classed among public workers, instinctively seeks her safety valves. These are peculiar to her individuality, and suit, as she imagines, her needs; but sometimes they are not altogether chosen wisely, and are often overused. The intense nature with the greatest need of letting off steam is the one who will make the mistake in this direction. Action and reaction will be equal with her. The home of such a woman is often a place where tragedy is frequently enacted. Her nervous system, wrought up to a point bordering upon frenzy, her mental and physical energies following its lead, there comes a moment when the strain must be relieved or mind and body will give way under the great weight.

It is not an easy thing to acquire the habit of withholding the worst from the dearest friend and showing him only the best, but is possible when the heart is right and the purpose has even a germ of strength. One brave, gentle woman, full of the fire that would have early consumed her but for her wise use of safety valves, confided to a friend her experience in trying to relieve the tension of mind and spirit without giving discomfort to those whom she loved. Her piano became her abiding friend whenever she felt the need of letting herself down from a too highly strung condition. She played off her feelings and gradually found herself calmed and rested. And, there were times when a favorite poet offered herself as guide into the realm of restfulness, and step by step led her on to the heights where she found repose. The woman with mental resources and with wise discrimination will learn to choose her safety valves with reference to the comfort and peace of the home, and will thus find a gain in self-respect and in strength of will.—M. E. Baldwin, in Home Life.

A Cheerful Room for Nursery.

The nursery ought to be the prettiest and most cheerful room in the house, says a writer in Woman's Home Companion, with ample receptacles for toys, some attractive pictures and a pleasant outlook from the windows. A small aquarium is an object that gives great enjoyment, and it is easily managed. I prefer a tightly drawn, well-tacked-down tapestry carpet upon the floor, if it can be taken up and steam-cleaned semi-annually, and properly cared for between whiles; for children are always tripping over rugs and hurting themselves. For the reason that sharp angles furnish dangerous points to fall against, tables and chairs should have rounding edges. The first considerations are health, safety and comfort, after that, prettiness. Clear space for running about is most essential, for there are many fall and winter days when outdoor exercise is an impossibility; and on these days it is well to put on the little one's bonnet and coat, open the windows for half an hour, and invite him to a brisk game that requires plenty of running and jumping. Provide a low table and chair, where he can sit at ease with his toys, imagining himself lord of a little realm. This conceit is one that children delight in, and it is a very harmless delusion—not altogether without opportunities for wholesome lessons in the way of hospitality and kindness to others.

Nervous Children.

A word about nervous children. Never scold them nor "make fun" of them. They suffer enough without your threats or sarcasm. Pretend not to see their awkwardness when in company, nor their grimaces when alone. A case was reported the other day of a boy of ten years who, on being vexed, and often without any apparent provocation, would clench his hands and make the most frightful contortions of the muscles of his face and head until his poor mother feared he was idiotic. By no means. He was the brightest boy in his class at school, but was of a highly nervous temperament, and had not been taught to control the little wires, so to speak, on which he was strung. This is no single case. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves in similar fashion. Talk to them about these curious little fellows that should be their servants, not their masters. Never whip them. The man or woman who whips a nervous child is on a level with brutes that have no reason. Encourage them. Help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at whatever they undertake. Brace up your own nerves first, and then be indulgent toward the capers of your over nervous children.—New York Ledger.

How Pens Are Made.

Pens are made by machines which seem almost to think. The steel is cut into ribbons as wide as the length of one pen, and these are fed to machines which cut out the blanks, then fashion, stamp them, split the points, and place the maker's name on the backs.

OUR YOUTHS' COLUMN

TEAR AND SMILE.

"What are you?" said a tear
To a smile playing near.
"With a flickering shimmer
You transiently glimmer
On the meaningless features of mirth;
But you nothing express
For she was his young mother,
And in her lap he lay,
And while she sang so sweetly,
He merely squalled away.
—Cleveland Leader.

Such a Surprise.

"This is our last nice day together," said Eric, disconsolately.

"But I can't see why it should be," persisted May. "She may be a very nice little girl."

"But she won't. She's a girl, and all girls are silly."

"I'm one, too," objected May demurely.

"But you're not like other girls. You like running about and building castles in the sand, and all that sort of thing. That one likes dolls!" with supreme contempt. "I asked papa, and he said she was very fond of dolls."

"But so am I, Eric. One can't always run about, and when I'm indoors I love my dollies."

Poor Eric could not remember his mother at all, and as his papa, though very fond of him and very kind, was almost always busy, his had been a very lonely life. But it was all to be changed now. A few weeks ago his papa had told him that he was going to have a new mother. Eric did not mind that. He had often longed for a mother. But what Eric did not like was that this lady had been married, too, and had a little girl. Eric did not like girls; he thought it beneath his dignity to play with them.

Then, about a fortnight ago, papa had told Eric that, after his wedding, he and the new mamma were going for a little journey, and Eric was to spend that time at the seaside. So he and his nurse had come here, and, living in the same house, they had found a little girl who was staying there with her governess. The two children speedily made each other's acquaintance, and were now fast friends.

Papa had in the meantime got married, and that very evening he and his wife were to arrive, to take Eric home with them in a few days.

After a short pause the boy began to speak again.

"It's not only the girl I mind, May; I'm a little tiny bit afraid of the new mamma, too. Perhaps she won't be as nice as a real one."

"Oh, but she will!" said May, quickly. "All mammas are nice. You should see mine."

"I wish I had seen her," Eric said wistfully; "then I'd know perhaps how to behave to mine. I do want so much to make her like me."

"I'm sure she likes you already. I'm sure she began to love you as soon as she knew you were going to be her little boy," May said, with the happy confidence of a child who had a mother and knew a mother's love. "All the same I wish mine were coming. I had a letter from her yesterday, and she says she is coming soon, and has got a great surprise for me."

That same evening Eric's parents arrived. Papa caught his boy in his arms and kissed him; and then Eric felt another pair of arms round him, and was kissed, oh, so tenderly; and, looking up, he saw such a sweet face bending over him that he knew immediately he should like the owner of it.

"I hope you and I will grow very fond of each other, Eric," she said.

"Yes," he answered. He longed to say more, but he was too shy; so, to change the subject, he asked:

"And the little girl?"

Eric went to bed a very happy boy that night. He felt that he would love his mother very much, and when he came to breakfast the next morning and found only his papa, he was quite disappointed.

"Where is mamma?" he asked.

"Gone out," said papa. "We are to meet her on the beach after breakfast."

Accordingly, after breakfast, papa and Eric set out together; and as they were walking along, papa said:

"You see, Eric, I was very sorry that you hated the idea of your new sister so much, and so I sent you here because I thought you would surely get to know some nice little girl who would cure you of your prejudice. Now, your friend May, whom you told us so much about last night, is a girl, and is nice, isn't she?"

"All girls aren't like her," Eric signed. "She is—oh, there she is, papa, coming to meet me."

May came running toward them, her long hair flying behind her.

"Eric, Eric!" she cried. "Just fancy! My mamma arrived in the night, while I was asleep. Do come and speak to her. She is sitting over there, on that bench."

Eric looked in the direction she pointed out. A lady was sitting on a bench, and Eric's papa had just sat down beside her. He said something to her, and then they both turned round and looked at the children.

"Why, that's my mamma," said Eric.

For a minute they stared at each other. Then, all of a sudden, they understood.

"Why, Eric!"

"May, are you——"

And then they flung their arms round each other's necks and hugged each other.

Local-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Prinzessin Friedrich von Württemberg, die Mutter des Königs, ist gestorben. Prinzessin Katharina, Wittwe des 1870 verstorbenen Prinzen Friedrich, war am 24. August 1821 geboren. Sie war die Schwester der wenige Tage zuvor verstorbenen Prinzessin Auguste von Sachsen-Weimar.—Das Projekt der Errichtung einer Handelshochschule in Württemberg ist aufgegeben worden. Man ist in maßgebenden Kreisen der Ansicht, daß es für die württembergischen Verhältnisse vorerst vollkommen genügen wird, wenn die hiesige höhere Handelsschule eine entsprechende Umgestaltung erfährt.

Friedrichshafen. Vor dem hiesigen Seehafen soll ein Leuchtthurm gebaut werden. Etwa 400 Meter südwestlich von der Hafeneinfahrt werden gegenwärtig die Fundationsarbeiten vorgenommen. Der Thurm, dessen Hauptaufbau in Eisenkonstruktion bestehen soll, wird eine Signalglocke erhalten, die hauptsächlich für den Dienst bei nebligem Wetter bestimmt ist. Die Kosten sind auf etwa 10,000 Mark veranschlagt. Durch ein 600 Meter langes Kabel wird elektrische Kraft für das Läuten der Nebelglocke und elektrisches Licht für einen Scheinwerfer zugeleitet werden.

Leutkirch. Kürzlich wagten sich hiesige Knaben auf das noch sehr dünne Eis eines tiefen Weihers. Da brachen zwei Knaben ein und ertranken. Die Leichen wurden erst am anderen Tage gefunden.

Loßburg. Ein hiesiger Flaschner machte sich dieser Tage an seinem selbstkonstruirten Acetylengasapparat im Keller zu schaffen. Dabei explodirte die Lichtmaschine, schlug den Besitzer todt und richtete außerdem bedeutende Verheerungen im Keller an.

Spaichingen. Für den kürzlich verstorbenen Dekan Krauß in Denkingen wurde in der Josefskirche in Hofen nach vorangegangenem feierlichen Gottesdienste Stadtpfarrer und Kämmerer Munz hier zum Dekan des Kapitels Spaichingen erwählt.

Ulm. Der Schreinermeister Lorch wollte auf seinem Dachboden an der Wand einen Haken einschlagen und stellte sich deshalb auf einen Stuhl. Der Bühnenboden, der morsche Bretter hatte, brach durch und Lorch fiel so heftig mit dem Unterleib auf die Lehne des Stuhles, daß er schwere innere Verletzungen erlitt und nach kurzer Zeit starb.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Im Frühjahr sollen die neuen Institute der Technischen Hochschule eingeweiht werden. Es gehören dazu vor Allem das schöne von Durm erbaute Aula-Gebäude, in dem sich neben der Aula, wohl einem der schönsten Festsäle dieser Art, die Hörsäle und Zeichensäle für Architektur, Kunstgeschichte und graphische Künste befinden, ferner das große zweckmäßig und elegant eingerichtete Elektrotechnische Institut, das von Warth, dem Erbauer der Straßburger Universität, erbaut ist, und das Botanische Institut mit zwei großen Lehr- und Sammlungsgebäuden nebst Gewächshäusern und großen Gartenanlagen.

Heidelberg. Die Baufirma Henkenhaf u. Ebert und der Heidelberger Baugesellschaft haben größere Geländekomplexe unterhalb des Philosophenwegs angekauft. Sie beabsichtigen die Herstellung einer Villenstraße in halber Höhe des Philosophenwegs. Die neue Straße, die ihre Zufahrt an der Restauration zum Schiff in Neuenheim erhält, wird einen der schönsten Blicke in's Neckarthal bieten.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Straßburg. Die Unteroffizierschule in Neubreisach feierte in diesen Tagen das Fest ihres zehnjährigen Bestehens. Man hatte bei ihrer Gründung erwartet, daß ihre Schüler sich hauptsächlich aus dem Elsaß rekrutiren würden. Das ist nicht eingetroffen. Von den 2166 Zöglingen, die die Schule seit ihrem Bestehen besucht haben, waren nur 256, also nicht ganz 12 Prozent, Elsässer. Man denkt deshalb daran, die Schule nach Altdeutschland zu verlegen und an ihre Stelle nach Neubreisach Fußartillerie zu legen.

Metz. Der italienische Maurer Giovanni Balmontone rief in der Wirthschaft Gallo zu Maizieres, als ihn der Wirth aufforderte, sich anständig zu benehmen: „Es leben die Anarchisten!“ Weil er angetrunken war, wurde er „nur“ mit zwei Monaten Gefängniß und 20 Mark in Geld bestraft.

PARKER'S WIFE.

BY BARD COURTLAND.

The place is a summer resort in the South. The time eleven in the morning. The sun is warm, but a soft breeze whispers from the mountains, and kisses the hills' purple quiver.

Under a widespread water oak is stretched a hammock in which reclines a woman. She is beautiful, in alabaster, her only color tints red lips and tawny hair.

Presently she gives utterance to a yawn; one hand, in which she loosely holds a book, falls negligently over the hammock.

Lil Parker—that is her name—throws first one ivory arm over her head then the other. As the tiny twins clasp she says,—

"Oh, dear!"

A man sitting somewhat concealed by clumps of flowering laurel starts at the mumurous sigh. For the last three hours he has seemingly been occupied with a book, but in reality stealthily regarding the golden tressed Titania under the spreading tree. He is swarthy, handsome, well endowed with physical nerve. There is love and passion in his glowing eyes, for Prince Parker has a volcanic nature. He is the recognized proprietor of the "tinted Venus" in the hammock.

Lil half rises and looks around. First toward the house, the long piazza of which is filled with summer guests. She generally has a coterie surrounding her immediate throne, wherever it may be, and at this moment is perplexed at the defection. For Lil Parker is a married belle and wonders that no cavalier is in attendance to restore her fallen volume. Another look backward; then a start and quick blush as she subsides on her air pillow, while the flush drifts even to her pearly neck.

Thirty minutes elapse. Then Prince Parker emerges from the crimson bower, his black eyes glowing like midnight stars.

"You wanted your book," he says rudely. "Why didn't you ask me to restore it?"

His tones are smothered fire.

"I didn't," falters Lil.

"Don't say you didn't know I was here, because you did!"

How cutting his voice.

"I saw you, certainly," answers Lil. "I didn't care to disturb you was what I intended to say."

"Wives are not generally so considerate of their husbands."

"Prince, are you my husband, really?"

"The law gives me that title, I believe."

He stands with arms folded over his broad chest, as if to keep down the raging fires.

"Ah! I had forgotten!"

Her voice, silvery and careless, drives him to exasperation.

"Do you want to know the reason?" he asks stormfully, "why no one was here to pick up your dropped trifles? Because I—your husband—was keeping guard, and those cold-blooded, shallow men will think twice before they thrust their attention on a wife in her husband's presence, even if he is only one in law. Yes, I have kept them from you—two, three hours," mockingly. "They are awaiting you, your admirers, up there; and you will whirl the night away in their arms. God! Why did I bind my life to yours? Cold? Arctic poles are warm, Lil, beside your heart."

He speaks in suffocated gasps.

"I echo 'Why?'" She is stung at last. "Let us sever these unhallowed bonds, cemented by wounded pride, which have grown hateful to us both."

Her eyes, wide and strained, gaze into his.

"Sever them?" he shouts. "As the Lord hears me, no! Do you covet the publicity? I don't doubt it would suit your plans admirably, but never mine.

* * * *

Prince Parker had married Lillie Blake under very peculiar circumstances. Lil was the betrothed of Chester Reynolds. Prince was the affianced of his cousin, Mattie Weyman. But the course of true love went decidedly wrong, and Reynolds and Mattie found that to be separated would be eternal misery. One night at a ball they solved the problem—in other words, ignominiously fled.

Two hours later a note was handed Prince. In the dainty, perfumed travesty Mattie implored him not to be angry. She was a weakling intellectually, and awfully afraid of Prince. Would he please not shoot Chester, and reconcile matters with papa, et cetera. As Prince read the satire upon woman's faith a sardonic smile distorted his handsome mouth. Ten minutes' reflection, then he crossed the ball room—it was thinning for the hour was late—to Miss Blake's side. He knew her only by reputation; indeed, this was the first time he had even seen her.

"Miss Blake," he whispered in an odd, suppressed voice, "excuse the liberty, but circumstances are imperative. Will you spare me a few minutes?"

Lil stared in surprise. He thought, "The fellow's a fool to leave such sweet eyes."

She quietly slipped her hand in Prince's arm. "How strange!" she thought. "What can he want?"

Under the star bright skies, away from the lingering scent of the ball-room's crushed roses, by the flicker of an expiring Chinese lantern, he silently handed her Mattie's note.

He anticipated a scene. He did not know Lil! She might endure the scalpel, but she would never betray herself. And he admired her for it.

"I hope, Miss Blake, you will not be offended at a request I am about to make. You will be startled, I know. My pride is humiliated. You also are proud. Will you marry me? Now? See, the day is breaking. No one can swear who took the initiative in 'Change partners' if we are silent. It is merely an arrangement. I claim nothing from you save to wear my name."

As yet Lil had not spoken. At last, as if the words were impelled, she said wearedly,—

"I agree."

But her words had the ring of a shattered icicle.

As he almost lifted her to the carriage, he stopped, for the chill of her hand startled him.

"Are you sure you will not regret?" he asked hurriedly.

"Quite sure. And you?"

"I am sure."

That was the "Wooing O't."

Six months passed, and Prince had learned to love with all the passion of his nature this cold, beautiful statue who had bound herself to him in a pique.

When he compared her to others and saw how she eclipsed them all, his heart was filled with wild longing, the lava tide would sweep through his veins like fire if by chance his hand fell on hers. They had been strangers—save to the world—since their fateful marriage. Prince fairly cursed the men in whose arms Lil circled night after night. For she knew she was beautiful, was conscious of her power, and with the knowledge that she was safe, indulged, as did others, in fashionable follies. Safe? Yes. For to Lil Parker these men were as moths that flutter for a night and die.

She rejoiced to meet Chester Reynolds this summer; was glad that of the old dream not one spark remained.

* * * *

"Aunt Chloe, I'm so weary!"

"Spec you is, honey; you bin in de sun too much."

And the old woman brushes away at the golden fleece, that, as Lil sits down, trails on the floor. She is dressing for dinner; her arms and neck, softened by webby lace, gleam whitely through the vail.

In confusion Lil reaches for a shawl.

"You needn't." He laughs meaningly. "You will be in no fuller dress to-night when you whirl in the arms of the multitude."

He draws a chair noisily to the window.

"An apology is due for my intrusion, but it is necessary that I should be seen occasionally in my wife's apartment. Watering-place gossip is scathing."

He worries his mustache as he regards her, with disheveled tresses, beautiful as the fairest picture, the dainty finish billowing even to the pearly ears.

* * * *

He has passed the window again and again. The ball with its kaleidoscopic whirl is at its height. In vain has he looked for the perfect face that makes his heaven. Lil is not among the waltzers, neither is she on the dimmer lit balconies. God! where is she! The woman who is eating out his life? An hour. No Lil! Now raging, tortured, he enters her room. It is empty, and has a deserted look. Two notes are conspicuous in a photograph holder. The first, in Lil's dainty, perfumed ink, he seizes and reads:—

"Prince, there is only one course open to you and me. We must part. We are wearing each other away. I am safe from harm. Chloe goes with me. You will not care. I give you back your freedom. "Lil."

"O my God!" he groans. "Where?"

His face is furrowed, as if tempests of grief have swept it these last minutes.

The other note, folded in a fantastic, crumbled bow, was written in crooked, misspelled capitals—Chloe's company hand—reads thus:—

"Fur de lub ob de Ark anguls, Mass Prince, git an engine an purspe. Miss Lil's clean 'stracted. Do nothin but cry an cry. We's gwine home fur one day; ater dat we's boun' fur de lan ob Canaan or he debbil. She mak me swar not tu tell; an I only jes writ it.

"Chloe Sweetwines."

With an oath he thrusts in his pocket a tiny, deadly toy. Yes; if he cannot have her living, he'll have her dead. No other man shall drain the sweetness of those lips.

* * * *

Softly with a night key he enters his house. Straight to Lil's room he stalks. A calm comes over him as he enters the door.

On her knees before an old cabinet, sobbing as if her heart would break, is Lil, in her hand a locket hugged tightly to her breast. Prince softly closes the door. With a passion spent face he kneels behind her—he will have the intoxication of her lips before they face eternity—and draws her to him savagely.

"This is done. Other men clasp you in their arms—while I—by the Lord, I say it's done! Lil, Lil, why have you treated me so? Whose face is it you steal away to mourn over? Tell me. I will know. He cannot love you as I do, my matchless darling. Do not be startled! He is safe—from me. I go on my last journey to-night. See!" He lays down the jewelled toy. "I thought to take you with me, but I can't, Lil, for I love you so. You shall be happy; I swear it."

"Love me?' she falters. "I thought you hated me, Prince!"

"'Hated' you? Lil!"

His swarthy face almost touches hers.

"What do you mean? Quick! I am mad, I think!"

"You must have guessed that—that—"

Her crimson face tries to find shelter on his heart, as he draws the locket from its warm resting place. With wild heart beats he gazes at his—Prince Parker's—handsome, strengthful face, glowing at him from the soft-hued ivory.

With an ecstatic cry of "Lil—oh, Lil!" he kisses her soft, flower face with a half-starved greed.

"Prince," Lil whispers shyly, "I have loved you almost since—well, quite a while, any way. I don't think I ever really loved Chester."

Will he ever loose her from his clasping arms?

It is hours after. Without the moon weaves silver arabesques across the trees; a mocking-bird trills his seductive song among the myrtles. Within is echoed the same love song whose notes, first set to music in the far off garden never to go out of fashion, but will still be new, even at the end of time.

HOW WORRY AFFECTS THE BRAIN.

Philosophical Reasons Given Wherein It Is Injurious.

Modern science has brought to light nothing more curiously interesting than the fact that worry will kill. More remarkable still, it has been able to determine, from recent discoveries, just how worry does kill.

It is believed by many scientists who have followed most carefully the growth of the science of brain diseases that scores of the deaths set down to other causes are due to worry, and that alone. The theory is a simple one—so simple that any one can readily understand it. Briefly put, it amounts to this: Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain, and the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some diseases of these organs, or a combination of them, arises, death finally ensues.

Thus does worry kill. Insidiously, like many another disease, it creeps upon the brain in the form of a single, constant, never lost idea, and, as the dropping of water over a period of years will wear a groove in a stone, so does worry gradually, imperceptibly, but no less surely, destroy the brain cells that lead all the rest—that are, so to speak, the commanding officers of mental power, health and motion.

Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant at certain points, which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or irregularly. Occasional worrying of the system the brain can cope with, but the iteration and reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against. It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain struck lightly with a hammer every few seconds, with mechanical precision, with never a sign of let-up or the failure of a stroke.

Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike or fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, and week by week diminishing the vitality of these delicate organisms that are so minute that they can only be seen under the microscope. —Pharmacentical Products.

Speaker Crisp and Old Tom.

The following story is told of the late Speaker Crisp, of Georgia: It was election day, and the Republicans had put up a strong fight. Prominent in their ranks was an old darky, Tom. All day long he hovered around the polls and in an impromptu procession carried a transparency. In the evening Mr. Crisp was standing in front of his hotel, when old Tom sidled bashfully up and requested the present of a dollar. "What, Tom," said Mr. Crisp, "you have the audacity to come here and ask me for a dollar after working hard against me all day?" "Well, but Massa Chawles, I'se known you eber since you was so high, and I suttinly do need a dollar bad." "Tom," said Mr. Crisp, looking sternly at him, "didn't you cast your vote against me to-day?" Tom looked cast down for a moment. "Dat so, dat so, Massa Crisp," but brightening up with an inspiration, "you know it gwine to count foh you, eanyhow. Please gimme dat dollah, Massa Chawles."

A Barefooted Bridesmaid.

At a very fashionable wedding in London lately one of the child bridesmaids was barefooted, though robed in silk. Children in bare feet are now often seen in summer in wealthy English and Scotch families. Gloves also for childish hands are omitted except in winter. On this point the Pall Mall Gazette recalls the comment of a West Indian negro soldier when he put on full uniform for the first time: "Barracks for de feet bad nuff; barracks for de hands too bad—too bad!"

HER CLUB.

"It is so long, dear, since I saw you—
We have missed you from soiree and ball;
And as for our clubs and receptions,
Why, we never see you at all.
You used to delight in the opera,
At a dance be the gayest one there,
And trampled o'er masculine heart-strings—
A queen of our vanity fair.

The paths of our world know you not,
And the follies and follies referred to
You doubtless long since have forgot.
Not so? Ah, then, Dora, do tell me
What made you drop out of our set,
And own that you think of past pleasures
With something akin to regret."

A clear ringing laugh was the answer.
"And do you not really know
Why I've given up balls and parties
And other attractions forego?
Why, I have given up flirting and dancing
And the other joys of our sex;
Cannot even be called a 'new woman,'
With her aspiration complex?

"Because I am wholly engrossed, dear,
In a club of at numbers just four;
And though it claims quite all my service,
'Tis not, I assure you, a bore.
The members? Myself and three others,
All masculine? Billiards? Oh, no!
Nor golf, lawn tennis, nor euchre—
Why do you not really know?

"'Tis a home club, where love is the umpire,
Equal suffrage? You might call it so,
And the members—my boys and their father.
And I'll tell you—but whisper it low—
That the best woman's club in existence
Is the one that includes our men too,
Do I vote? No Jack does that for me,
And the boys wear my colors—'true blue.'"

—Callie Bonney Marble.

THE RUBY HEART.

Aunt Jessica had been round the world more than once. She had been what is vulgarly called a "globe-trotter." In her day she had collected many rare and curious and beautiful things; but now she was an old woman, and her time was come to die in the great, silent house, filled with the furniture that had belonged to Aunt Jessica's forbears many scores years ago, and enriched by the spoils of many lands, brought home by the energetic hands of Aunt Jessica herself.

There was one treasure above all that I coveted, and that I would have sold my soul to have had for my own—my Cousin Edith.

As for the money, well, I am not more disinterested than most people; but I would rather have had Edith without a penny than all Aunt Jessica's money without Edith.

William and Bertram and I were sitting in the dining room. Edith was above, helping poor aunt in the hard work of dying. Three raps came on the floor. We knew they were a signal that we were to go up, and that aunt had asked for us; and up we went.

"I have left everything divided among you four," she said; "and the ruby heart is togo to whichever of you three boys can find it." She spoke slowly and with difficulty.

I remembered the jolly old days when she used to come to see us at school and fag us, and I wished that death and time could have been more merciful. She went on:

"You know it has a charm to make you happy in your love. It would have made me happy, but he died, and it hadn't a chance to do its work; and now my time's come—it has been weary waiting."

And with that—the first and last hint we ever had of a romance in my aunt's life—she turned her wrinkled old face to the pillow with a sigh like a tired child's, and there were only four of us left in the room.

After the funeral and the reading of the will we three men set to work to find the charm.

"I shall take the library and aunt's bedroom first," said Bertram. As these were the rooms she had most used, I imagine he thought he had made the best choice. "You other fellows can arrange as you like!"

William chose the drawing-room and the guest chamber, and they took the whole day searching systematically inch by inch for the ruby heart. I began to look in the dining-room, but Edith came in.

"Do you care so very much for the ruby heart?" said she.

"I confess I should like to find it," I answered.

"Shall I help you to look?"

She pulled out a book or two from the shelves in an aimless, desultory way, and then said:

"It's very sunshiny out of doors, don't you think?"

So he went on the river.

The next day I began to look for the heart again. Edith sent her duenna-companion (who had once been her governess) to ask me if I did not think it would be nice to drive. Of course I said I thought it would, and off we went.

That evening she asked Bertram and William if they would like to come out next day to see some ruins.

"Thanks," said Bertram, "but I think my first duty to poor aunt's memory is to find that heart."

"Besides," said William, who never had much sentiment, like Bertram. "It's worth thousands of pounds, I believe."

"To say nothing of the charm," I added.

"But you'll come, Wilfrid?" she said, looking at me with her soft gray eyes.

"Of course," I answered.

Bertram and William scowled at me. They would have given their ears, their lives, anything, in short, but their chances of a ruby heart worth thousands of pounds for the privilege that was to be mine to-morrow.

To be in love with Cousin Edith was a mode, a fashion among us. Besides, Edith was now an heiress.

"As good as I have fulfilled dear aunt' last wishes," said Bertram—he talked, the silly fool, as if aunt had wished him to find the heart—"I shall be only too glad to accompany my Cousin Edith on any excursion she may propose."

"So shall I," said William.

So Edith and I went to the ruins alone together.

"I hope it does not seem like disrespect to poor aunt's memory," she said, as we drove snugly back in the dogcart that evening, "our going out like this. But I couldn't bear to stay in the old house alone where she was so kind to me. It's better to go out, and I'm sure she would have wished it."

I felt that it was foolish of me not to make an effort to find the ruby heart. So next morning I got up very early and came down before the servants were called. I had pulled out half the drawers of the Chinese cabinet and looked into them, when my heart leaped into my mouth at the touch of a hand on my shoulder—Edith's!

"Still after that wretched ruby!" she said. "How you waste your time!"

"Why? Don't you think I shall find it?"

"I don't know," she said, looking at me with her eyes wide open; "but I don't think you will find it there, because Bertram has been through that three times already. Did you ever eat strawberries before breakfast and gather them yourself?"

So we went into the kitchen garden and ate strawberries till the gong rang for breakfast. Bertram and William were getting quite sulky and savage from the non-success of their search, and the little time I had devoted to it annoyed them.

"I believe," said Bertram, with an air of gayety, a little over done, "that Wilfrid thinks he knows where the heart is, and that he can put his hand on it at any moment."

"I wish I could," I said.

"So do I," said Edith, almost in the same breath.

"You wish Wilfrid to find the heart!" said William. "Why?"

"Oh, no, I don't mean Wilfrid; I meant—at least—— Well, we shall all be glad when it's settled one day or the other, shan't we?"

I had never told Edith I loved her, because I didn't know how my aunt intended to leave her money, and if Edith were to be the heiress of the whole—but any one will understand my reasons.

It was a week after aunt's funeral that I went into the rose garden where Edith was snipping roses into a basket.

"I've been looking for the heart again," I said, "but I haven't found it."

"No," she answered, "and I don't suppose you will. Would a Gloire de Dijon be any compensation?"

She began to stick one in my coat as she spoke. Her slender waist, in its black gown, was very near my left arm where she stood.

"I will take the bud," I said, "but not as compensation for the heart."

"Don't you think," she asked me, "that it might be possible to live happily without a charm to help you?"

"No," I said, "not without a charm to help you. But ruby hearts are not the only charms in the world."

My arm fell on her waist.

"Let them find their ruby heart! Let them chop it in pieces and divide it between them and sell the bits," said I.

"And you are content with what you have?" she asked.

"I am content with what I have," I answered and my other arm went round her.

They never found that ruby heart, though the poor old house was tapped and tested from top to bottom. At last, wearied out, they took the portion of goods that fell unto them and went, fortunately for us, into a far country. And Edith and I were married.

We didn't go on a wedding tour, but came straight back to the dear old house.

On the evening of our wedding day we walked in the moonlight through the rose garden to listen to the nightingales. I stopped to hold her in my arms on the very spot where I had first kissed her, and the light shawl she wore round her head and shoulders fell back.

"What's that you have round your neck?" I said, for something darkened amid the white laces on her breast.

She did not answer. I put up my hand, touched with a thrill the whiteness of her neck, and found in my fingers the ruby heart!

"Then she gave it to you," I said; "it is yours?"

"She gave it into my keeping," answered Edith, dropping her chin till her lips rested on my hand, "but she left it to the man who should find it."

Prohibition Poll This Parrot.

Chicago has the record-breaking freak parrot of the century.

She is an elderly bird of severely self-contained habit of speech and awe-inspiring sternness of manner.

But that is not her chief peculiarity. She is unalterably opposed to the pernicious habit of drinking.

Not only do wines and spiritous liquors fall under the awful ban of her disapproval, but water itself she has renounced.

She even goes so far as to deliver monologues on the subject of temperance.—New York Journal.

A WONDERFUL PIE.

Children Pulled a String and Out Popped a Present.

Instead of the customary Christmas tree the little folks at All Souls' church were treated to a surprise yesterday in the shape of a Christmas pie. A large pie made of pasteboard, paper, etc., was placed on the table around which the children sat. From the middle of the pie and running to each one's plate was a ribbon which, when pulled, drew forth from the depths of the pie the present intended for that one.

The entertainment was a novel one and a great success. The gifts were useful ones, books, games, etc., and and the entertainment lasted from 4 until 7 o'clock. The parents of the children were treated to ice cream and cake, and all had a share of candies. Much credit is due to E. Burr Smith, the superintendent of the Sunday-school, and the teachers for the success of the affair.

Y. M. C. A. at Home.

The usual New Year's Day "at home" was held in the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon and evening. A large number of men were present. A gymnastic entertainment was given in the gymnasium in the afternoon and another entertainment in the hall in the evening.

Hateful Old Man.—"And when your wheel broke down several miles from home," said the old man, "you repaired it all by yourself, did you?"

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

It was a delighted audience that left Music Hall last night at the close of a most elaborate production of "Darkest Russia," given by the Bennett-Moulton Company. It cannot be recalled when a more complete performance in every detail has been given in this city by a popular priced company. The play, "Darkest Russia," is in itself a fine one and it was staged in a manner seldom seen, even by a regular priced attraction. The acting company is a competent one and is headed by J. Frank Burke, James F. Kelley, Joseph Harris, James K. Appleby, Jr., Arthur Evans, Miss Isabel Pitt Lewis, Dorthy Kent, Lara Rogers and Miss Beth Sommerville. The specialties are all very clever and consist of the popular entertainers Dan Simons, James F. Kelly and Dorothy Kent. The company carry their own orchestra, which is no small feature of the show. One of the biggest hits of the evening was the excellent set of views shown on the wargraph. These are some of the best moving pictures ever seen in the city and are worth going to see. The great tunnel scene was perhaps the best of the lot and will be shown again tonight when "A Daughter of the South" is announced as the bill. New specialties will also be introduced. The company made a most favorable impression at their opening and will no doubt do a large business the remainder of the week.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A very important meeting of the Sons of Veterans will be held this evening.

—The week of prayer will be observed every evening this week, excepting Saturday, in Trinity Reformed church. Tonight the subject will be "Prayerful Confession."

—The Swedish Missionary Society will hold meetings Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week in the chapel of Grace P. E. church on Seventh street.

—The Christmas entertainment at the Filmore Baptist church will be held Thursday evening. There will be singing and speaking and Miss Hattie Mitchell will give a cantata.

—Last Sunday morning at the First Baptist church, Prof. Rush Reese, of Newton Theological Seminary, preached a powerful New Year sermon. The music by the choir was a feature of the service.

FACING THE THIRD YEAR.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES OF THE MONROE AVENUE METHODISTS.

Celebration Commenced With a Watch Meeting Saturday Night—Former Pastor Spoke—Large Growth of the Society.

The members of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal church have entered on the third year of their existence as a church, and beginning last Sunday they will continue to celebrate their second anniversary the remainder of this week. The anniversary exercises began Saturday night with a watch night service, which was continued all day Sunday.

The storm Saturday night interfered with the attendance but little, for despite the gale there were a good many present for such a service. It began at 9:30 o'clock with devotional exercises and closed just after the birth of the new year.

The annual report, a historical sketch by the pastor, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, Ph. D., was one of the features of the evening. Beginning where the late James McGee, who was the last historian, had left off, and quoting the closing words of Mr. McGee's paper, which were, "Who can tell to whom death will come in this coming year of 1898," Mr. O'Donnell said that the death of James McGee was the one occurrence that overshadowed them. One hundred and thirty nine members were enrolled on the church books at the April conference, including full members and those on probation.

The pastor read the financial reports of the different organizations attached to the church.

The Sunday-school received $304 19 during the year, spent $265.25, and has a balance of $38.84 with which to start the new year on. The Ladies' Aid Society raises money for the current expenses of the church. They raised $1,291 58 last year, paid to the church treasurer $1,159.06, and have a balance of $87.56, after deducting enough for their own expenses.

A King's Daughters Circle, known as "Mizpah Circle," has been organized as the result of a hint given in the last report by Mr. McGee. The pastor alluded also to the loss by death of Mrs. William C. Burt and Mrs. Taft.

During an intermission, cake and coffee were served, and a chance given the people to converse with one another until 11 o'clock, when Mr. O'Donnell began a review of the important events in this country's history during the year just past.

This was followed by a love feast led by Rev. W. C. Nelson, of the borough, and was continued until a few minutes before 12 o'clock, when the singing of hymns was begun and kept up until after midnight, so the old year was sung out and the new year greeted with songs of praise.

The services Sunday were of a congratulatory nature. In the morning a communion service was held and seven new members, one from probation and six by letter, were received. At 8 o'clock the anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Herbert B. Munson, a former pastor of the church, when it was only a chapel, but who is now pastor of the Methodist church at Amityville, L. I.

Mr. Munson preached from Isaiah, "And the man shall be as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." In his sermon Mr. Munson alluded to Mr. McGee in tender terms.

Tonight there will be a union rally of the Plainfield Chapters of the Epworth League with addresses by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, Rev. G. W. Gardner and Rev. W. C. O'Donnell.

F. L. C. Martin is still sick with the grip. He has been confined to the house since Christmas.

A Cemetery Story from Maine.

In a quaint old cemetery at Bass Harbor, Me., lies an aged couple who were noted in their life for their piety and their active interest in meetings and other good works. The old gentleman in his exhortation would often speak of wearing the crown, while the old lady often spoke of blossoming as the rose. After the tombstones had been erected at their graves with their names and ages duly chronicled thereon, there appeared on his tombstone distinctly outlined the figure of a crown, while on hers appeared the figure of a full blown rose. The fact is well authenticated by many people who have visited the cemetery on purpose to see this wonderful sight.—Deer Island Gazette.

As He Said It.

A son of a dignified Hartford man, although not old in years, has a good bit of age in his brains. The family observe the custom of silent blessing at the table, and at dinner recently the six-year-old spoke up: "Why don't you say it aloud, pa?" "You can say it aloud if you choose, my son," replied the father, and, bowing his head solemnly, the little fellow originated this unique grace: "God have mercy on these victuals."—Hudson River.

LATEST ABOUT W. W. ASTOR

Rumors That He Is to Be Knighted by Queen Victoria.

About millionaires there are always rumors of one kind and another, and there have been many of all varieties concerning Mr. Astor. He now moves in the best English society, and all the gossips of America declare that he is to be the first anglo-American who will be honored with a title. It is suggested that Her Majesty will bestow upon him a knighthood "in recognition of his social, literary, and artistic services."

Although Mr. Astor has renounced his own country, he evidently thinks we do some things better here than in England. Many of his goods come across the Atlantic.

Catalogues are sent over to him, and he orders what he wants from them.

On one occasion it was a new carriage that he wanted, and he is said to have waited for it until an American firm had sent him its new catalogue.

"Yes," Mr. Astor replied, "they are in one way. They wear as well, but they wear you out at the same time. I want springs, and cushions, and rubber tires, and all up-to-date appliances. The old way is hardly good enough for me."

Mr. Astor became a sorrowful widower three years ago. Mrs. Waldorf Astor was a lady of good family, a Miss Paul, and her husband was passionately devoted to her. He wanted her to be the ruler of American society, for which distinction she was eminently fitted; but her own inclinations stopped short of this, and he was disappointed. A story is told that one day Mr. Astor happened to pass a post-office and heard the name of Mrs. Astor mentioned. He promptly stopped his carriage, alighted, went into the postoffice, and inquired if there were any letters for his wife there. The official in charge replied that several had arrived there for

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR.

"Mrs. Astor," but that he had been directed by Mrs. William Astor—a lady belonging to another branch of the family—to preserve all such letters for her, she being the principal Mrs. Astor.

"Not at all," replied the millionaire, with some warmth. "Mrs. William Waldorf Astor is Mrs. Astor." Just at this moment who should come up but the Mrs. William Astor referred to. "I am the head of the house of Astor," she said to the official, "and all letters addressed to Mrs. Astor come to me." Mr. Astor was very much incensed at this, and for a few days was disposed to fight the matter. His wife, however, had no desire to contest such an extremely personal question with the other lady, and so the matter was allowed to drop. This, of course, was in America; but it was only a little while before the family came to England.

A lady so circumstanced might do almost anything; but Mrs. Astor is declared to have loved her home better than she loved society. When she died, Mr. Astor stopped a magazine she was very fond of. On the front page was a picture of a lady lowering a curtain, and the meaning words "Good-bye!" were printed underneath. She was buried in New York, and when Mr. Astor left there he gave a standing order to a New York florist for a blanket of flowers to be spread over her grave every day, winter and summer, and each day fresh lilies of the valley are laid upon it.

Such are his riches that his annual income reaches the colossal figure of $1,500,000, and the business property he owns in New York city alone is sufficient to afford office room for 52,000 people. Owning so much, there is a danger of confusion and error, and it is told of him that he has often visited buildings in some portions of New York, and, upon inquiry, first learned that they were his own. There is a vast amount of property which belongs to him which he has never seen, and it is only through the agents who colect his rents that he knows of it.

An Average Stride.

A man who has a penchant for such things says the average stride of an American soldier is 31 1-2 inches, and the distance an average traveller can cover at this rate at 7,158 yards an hour, or 119 yards a minute. The number of strides would be 7,500 an hour, or 125 a minute. The length of the stride in the various European armies is as follows: In the German army it is 31 1-2 inches, with a cadence of 112 steps per minute; in the Austrian army 29 1-2 inches, with a cadence of from 115 to 130 per minute; in the Italian army, 29 1-2 inches with a cadence of 120 per minute; in the French army 29 1-2 inches, with a cadence of 115 per minute; in the British army 30 inches, with a cadence of 116 per minute.

THE MOST COSTLY LEATHER.

It Is Used for Pianos, and Only One Family of Tanners Can Make It.

The most costly leather now in the market is known to the trade as "piano leather." American tanners years ago discovered the secret of making Russia leather, with its peculiarly pungent and lasting odor, but the secret of making piano leather is known only to a family of tanners in Thuringia, Germany. This leather has but one use—the covering of piano keys. A peculiar thing about it is that the skins from which it is tanned are prepared almost entirely in America. It is a particular kind of buckskin.

The skin of the common red or Virginia deer will not make the leather, a species of the animal known as the gray deer, and found only in the vicinity of the great northern lakes, alone furnishing the material. The German tanners have an agency in the west, which collects the skins of this deer from the Indians and the half-breed hunters, who supply the market. When the skins are returned to this country as piano leather they cost the piano manufacturers from $15 to 18 a pound. The world's supply of this invaluable and necessary material is supplied by the Kutzchman family of tanners who have six establishments in Germany, the largest in Thuringia.—Washington Star.

FIREPROOF TREES.

The Natives Believe the Chaparro Grows Only Where Gold Is Found.

A government report from Colombia contains a description of a tree, known as the chaparro, which is said to possess the quality of being fireproof. It grows on the vast plains of Colombia and the north of South America, called savannas, extensive districts which are parched with heat except during the rainy season. It has long been the custom to clear the ground for the new vegetation which springs up so luxuriantly on these plains after the rainy season by means of fire—and such fires, miles in extent, kindled by the herdsmen, destroy everything in the shape of vegetation except the chaparro tree, which survives to afford a welcome shade in an almost treeless region.

It is a small tree, seldom growing to more than 20 feet in height, with a girth of about 3 feet, and it owes its protection from fire to the nature of its hard, thick bark. The bark lies on the trunk in loose layers, which do not readily conduct heat to the more delicate parts of the structure. It is a general idea among the natives that this tree grows only where gold is abundant in the soil below. That it is common in auriferous districts is indisputable, but there is no ground for supposing that it does not grow elsewhere.—Boston Transcript.

Reading the Signals.

The captain of one of the big schooners that bring ice from the Kennebec to Washington tells a story of an Irishman he shipped. Pat wanted to get from Washington to Norfolk and had no money. His story excited the sympathy of the shipmaster, who finally agreed to let him work his passage.

Pat was willing, but densely ignorant of all things maritime, and no real sea duty fell to him until the vessel was sailing down Chesapeake bay with a fair wind and plenty of sea room. The captain then told Pat to take a turn at lookout forward and instructed him to promptly report anything he might see. It was a clear night, and soon after the lookout took his position, he sang out:

"Ah, captain."

"Well, Pat."

"There's something out here foreninst the boat."

"What is it," said the captain to test Pat's seafaring knowledge, the lights of an approaching steamer being visible.

Difficult Retrospection.

"My friends," exclaimed the eloquent minister, "were the average man to turn and look himself squarely in the eyes, and ask himself what he really needed most, what would be the first reply suggested to his mind?"

"A rubber neck!" shouted the precocious urchin in the rear of the room; and, in the confusion which followed the good man lost his place in his manuscript and began over again. —Puck

The Object of Envy.

Maggie—"Nelly, wot's all the crowd a-waitin' for?" Nelly—"There's a ambulance a-comin' wot's a-goin' ter take Bessie to the horsepittle!" Maggie—"My! She'll be fed on soup to strengt'en her, an' she'll git chicken an' beef an' vegetables, an' maybe ice-cream. Wot made yer tell me for? It makes me feel desperick!"—Truth.

Not One of That Kind.

"No, Mr. Hankinson," said Tommy to the young man who was waiting in the parlor for Tommy's sister, "I ain't the kind of a little boy you're always readin' about in the papers what begs candy from the fellers that comes to see the'r sisters. Still, if you've got any in your pockets I'd be willin' to take it."—Chicago Tribune.

NEW COUNCIL TAKES HOLD OF CITY WORK

Mr. Andrews Elevated to the Presiding Place.

COMMITTEE SELECTIONS.

CHAIRMANSHIPS ABOUT THE SAME AS LAST YEAR.

The New Council Called to Order by City Clerk MacMurray—No Opposition to the Choice of Mr. Andrews—Little Business Besides Reading of Mayor's Message and Appointing Committees.

Promptly at 8 o'clock last evening City Clerk James T. MacMurray called the City Council of 1899 to order, and from the start there was an air of business depicted in every city official. After Clerk MacMurray called the meeting the first business transacted was the election of a president of the Council. Frederick H. Andrews was nominated by Mr. Buckle and it was the unanimous choice of all for the secretary to cast the ballot. Messrs. Liefke and VanHerwerden were appointed to escort President Andrews to the chair. Mr. Andrews heartily thanked the members for the honor conferred and promised to make his rulings as fair as possible. He said that in the selection of the ten committees he would appoint such members as he thought would best serve the city on the particular committee to which they were assigned.

At this time Mr. Hetfield was excused from the meeting on account of illness at home. The next order of business was the reading of the opinion of the Corporation Counsel regarding the term of the city clerk. In his opinion the clerk's term expires January 4th, 1900.

The new Council is seated as follows: Messrs. Barrows, Coriell, Homan, VanHerwerden, Mellick, Tolles, Hetfield, Buckle, Smith and Liefke. The arrangement is such that the new faces are well scattered about the semi-circle.

According to a resolution offered by Mr. Barrows The Daily Press and News were made the official papers of the city. The same member also moved that the rules for 1898 govern the body for 1899, and that the laws and ordinance committee be consolidated with the printing and stationary committee. Mr. Barrows also gave notice that at the next meeting he would move that the rules of order for 1898 be made the by-laws for 1899. He moved also that all unfinished business from last year be referred to the proper committees.

W. V. Mundy was elected janitor of the Council rooms for the sixteenth time, he having served fifteen years in that position.

The only unfinished business was that regarding the petition of J. G. Bicknell relating to a reduction on his tax bill. This matter was referred. A petition was received from A. Kane and others asking the Council to lay a crosswalk at Fillmore avenue and Third street, and to locate a light on Fillmore avenue.

The next business of importance was the reading of Mayor Rockfellow's message.

After the reading of the message Mr. Barrows moved that all parts that referred to standing committees be typewritten and referred to the proper committee.

A communication was received from S. A. Cinna and others in which the Council was asked to take hold the garbage disposal business for the city or to regulate the business so that a uniform service could be given. This matter was referred.

The report of Former Judge Stillman for the month of December showed that sixteen cases had appeared before him, of which number ten were fined. Forty-three dollars was received in fines, of which amount $11.44 was paid to Chief Grant for expenses, leaving a balance of $30.46, which amount had be turned over to the City Treasurer. Mr. Stillman spoke in disconsolate tones about the present city jail and urged the Council to seek other quarters which would not be a disgrace to the city.

Mr. Barrows moved that $2,000 be appropriated for the use of the streets and sewers committee, as that amount is necessary until the regular appropriations are made. Mr. Barrows stated in connection with this that no sum is designated to tide the committee over till the appropriations are made as is the case with other committees.

MINISTER IN OFFICE NOW

DR. RICHARDS A MEMBER OF NEW BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Board Held at Mr. Lovell's House Owing to His Illness—Dr Probasco Again President and F. C. Lounsbury Secretary.

The Board of Education held its first meeting for 1899 last night at the home of Leander Lovell, on Crescent avenue, who is too ill to leave his house. The full board were present, including Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., the new member who takes Dr. Jenkins' place.

Nothing important was done last night at the regular session except to organize for the new year, and elect officers. Dr. Probasco was re-elected President and F. C. Lounsbury Secretary. Dr. Probasco said that he was not able to announce his committees at the meeting but would do so later.

The tax collector reported that $31,702.69 had been collected and placed to the credit of the school fund in the bank.

The medical inspectors, Drs. Tomlinson and Murray, reported 100 examinations of pupils during the month of December, and Dr. Murray, in a communication to the board, said that he had attended the convention of the New Jersey Sanitary Association at Lakewood a few weeks ago, at the suggestion of the board, and heard of many things that may in time be adopted by the Plainfield board.

Dr. Murray also explained to the convention the work of the medical inspectors at the Plainfield schools, and they were very much interested in all he said, for the schools in this city are the first ones in New Jersey to establish medical inspectors, and as a result there were no contagious diseases in the schools here last year to amount to anything.

This ended the regular business and at 9 o'clock the board went into executive session to listen to Drs. Tomlinson and Murray give a talk upon vaccination among the pupils.

HUGE FLAMES SHOT UP FROM GASOLINE STOVE.

SMOTHERED BY USE OF A RUG.

Happened in Kitchen of George VanBoskerck's House—Ill Son Fainted Away.

Just before noon today an alarm of fire was sent in from box 34, corner of West Fifth street and Liberty street, for a fire that broke out in the basement of the house occupied by George VanBoskerck and family, corner Seventh street and Central avenue. The fire was caused by a gasoline stove which the laundress was using to heat irons. Suddenly a hugh flame shot up in the air and the girl was greatly frightened. A workman in the vicinity, who happened to notice the fire, rushed into the basement and securing a rug threw it over the stove and smothered the flames, but not before damage to the amount of $40 resulted, chiefly to clothes.

Mr. VanBoskerck's son arrived home from New York ill about the time the fire occurred and the excitement caused him to faint away. He was soon resuscitated.

Owing to the snow on the ground the department was unable to make as good time as they ordinarily do.

Study of Life of Christ.

The meeting in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian chapel this evening will be a service preparatory to a year's study of the Life of Christ. Dr. Richards will speak on "The Needs of Bible Study," F. H. Andrews on "Why Should We Study the Life of Christ," and W. D. Murray on the course of lessons to be followed. An opportunity will be given for any to enroll as members of the class, which is to meet each Wednesday evening.

Entertained at Whist.

The Monday Evening Whist Club was delightfully entertained last evening by Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, of Park avenue, and the meeting was, as usual, one of great pleasure to all. The full membership was in attendance. Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., and Mrs. William A. Pinto secured the first and second prizes for the ladies, while for the men Charles E. Brooks and E. H. Booth were the successful contestants for first and second prizes.

Rooster, Even, Has the Grip.

The family of J. H. VanHorn, of Duer street, have been victims of the grip during the past few weeks. All five of them have had it and recovered. There is still one invalid, which Mr. VanHorn numbers among his family, a pet rooster, that now is unable to crow because of an attack of something he thinks is the grip. Mr. VanHorn has administered regular doses of quinine to the biped, and it is on the road to recovery.

—There will be a meeting of the Helping Hand Society of Grace P. E. church this afternoon.

A JOLLY GOOD TIME FOR FIRE LADDIES.

TWO GOLD BADGES PRESENTED.

Former Chiefs Bodine and Fairchild Receive Handsome Recognition of Their Services.

Among the last, but not the least, of the Christmas entertainments was the one given last evening in Warren Engine Company's house on Somerset street, when the members and a few invited guests assembled and enjoyed a fine programme. The whole affair was arranged by Borough Electrician Julius Stahl, who was assisted by ex-Chief David Bodine.

Mr. Stahl was master-of-ceremonies and distributed the gifts. Among those of note present were: Mayor Wilson, Councilman Geo. T. Rogers, Former School Commissioner S. B. Joseph, Borough Clerk Arnold and several other prominent officials, in addition to the members of the company. Everyone received a present of a humorous character.

An unlooked-for event was the presentation to George R. Fairchild and David Bodine of handsome badges in recognition of their services. They are inscribed for ex-chief's, and were from the members of the company.

It was announced during the evening that a prize of a handsome rubber coat would be given to the member of the company who sells the greatest number of tickets for the fair to be held by the company February 6th to 11th for the benefit of the uniform fund.

During the rest of the evening the time was passed in listening to a phonograph entertainment given by Whitfield Frazee, and banjo selections by W. C. Force. Before the affair came to an end refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served in abundance. Before Mayor Wilson retired from the room three rousing cheers were given him.

SAY IT IS A NUISANCE.

West End Residents Complain About the Sanitary Company.

A complaint signed by a number of property owners in the vicinity of the Plainfield Sanitary Company, and sworn to by two of them, was received by the Board of Trade of Health last night at their meeting. The complaint sets forth that the plant is operated in such a manner as to make it a public nuisance, and they pray of the Board of Health that they take some action in regard to it.

The communication will be heeded at once, and the Board will investigate the matter and notify the company to abate the nuisance if it proves to be such. The two members of the Board whose terms of office expire this year are Dr. W. H. Murray, secretary, and A. J. Gavett.

There was no business of importance transacted last night. The Board feel well pleased that despite the numerous cases of grip and other diseases prevalent in town, there is no contagious case reported.

HE WILL DO BETTER NOW.

Alfred Springer Gets a Bondsman and is Released From Jail.

Attorney William G. DeMeza went to Elizabeth yesterday and secured the release of Alfred Springer, one of the gang of boy burglars, who were captured three weeks ago. Sentence was suspended on Springer when he was arraigned before Judge Vail, but was held until a bondsman could be found who would furnish a $200 bail bond for his good behavior. Jacob Voehl went on Springer's bond.

A Prosperous Business.

Under the watchful management of John J. Crouse, manager for the Grand Union Tea Company, 138 West Front street, the business of that company has so increased that he is enabled to cater to the most fastidious taste. The goods sold by him are of a very superior quality. Mr. Crouse guarantees satisfaction or money refunded. All this week he will give to each one making a purchase of a fifty-cent can of their baking powder a handsome jardinier or statue stand. There is no better baking powder sold than that sold by this company.

Death of John Fitzgerald.

The death of John J. Fitzgerald, aged 48 years, son of Stephen and the late Mary Fitzgerald, occurred yesterday at his home in the borough after a long illness. The deceased was a brother to Mrs. Andrew Carney, also of the borough. Requiem mass will be said for the repose of his soul at St. Joseph's R. C. church, Friday morning next at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

To be Married in Dunellen.

This afternoon at St. John's church, Dunellen, will take place the marriage of Miss Powers, of Samptown, to Philip McQuire, of this city. Mr. McQuire is one of the popular employes of the Plainfield Street Railway.

MAYOR ROCKFELLOW'S ADVICE TO COUNCIL.

New Executive Explains His Views of City Affairs.

WANTS NO NEW BONDS.

UNLESS THE EXPENSE IS OF IMPERATIVE NEED TO CITY.

Advocates Municipal Ownership of Water Works—Would Like to See Time of Collecting Taxes Set Forward Several Months, and Date of Fiscal Year Changed—Sewage Question Important.

The following is the full text of the first message sent to the Common Council last night by Mayor Rockfellow:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Gentlemen—Since the law was changed so that the terms of office of all members of the Common Council do not expire at the same time, and especially since the custom was established for standing committees and heads of departments to make full reports at the close of the year, it is no longer required that a newly-elected chief executive of the city should, in his inaugural message to the Common Council, submit any elaborate review touching municipal affairs. It is appropriate, however, that pursuant to the charter requirement, I should at this time make certain general recommendations, reserving for future occasions such special recommendations as may be called for by the course of events or a more accurate knowledge of the city's needs.

I am opposed to the issue of any more bonds in this city, except in case of absolute necessity. While I recognize the justice of extending time for payment of permanent improvements over a series of years, whereby those who hereafter obtain the benefit of the improvements may contribute toward the expense of the same, yet in view of the burdens upon taxpayers in recent years necessarily imposed for the city's good, it is my judgment that further public improvements involving large expense, including a bond issue, should be held in abeyance until additional burdens upon taxpayers will be less felt than at the present time. This conclusion is the more readily reached, because it is likely that during the present year the city will begin to reap the benefit of the proceedings taken under the Martin Act to enforce collection of arrears of taxes on lands. The importance of these proceedings cannot be easily overestimated. From the outset the Common Council and my predecessor in office stoutly resisted any such application of the Martin Act as would harm innocent purchasers in good faith, and the court has, in substance, declared that law and justice are synonymous in this respect. The duty of the city government to invoke the powers of the law so as to compel delinquents to pay up their just share of the expense of government, is plain, and this city will not be deterred from the rigorous enforcement of its rights in this particular by any suggestions respecting the high standing or the great number of those who are delinquent. No action taken by the city in recent years redounds more to the credit of the city government, or is calculated to do more lasting good than the action taken by the last Common Council to compel the city's debtors to square up their accounts.

WATER.

The present contract for fire hydrants will expire on the second day of May, nineteen hundred and two. This flourishing city should be the owner of its own water works. The question of ways and means should not be left until so late a date that the city would be put at a disadvantage for want of time, either for deliberate negotiations with the present Company or the adoption of such measures as the law provides to enable cities to own and control their own plants. I recommend that the whole matter be referred to the appropriate committee, with request for an early report.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The admirable report of the Chief of the Fire Department will doubtless receive early attention. The questions presented in that report, especially those respecting the proposed plan of reorganization of the fire department, are vital questions, and I recommend that no change be made until time and opportunity shall have been afforded for most mature consideration. There is a body of men in this city who have, in years gone by, given their best thoughts and efforts to the service of the city, and the Common Council has from STOVE EXPLODED AND WRECKED THE KITCHEN.

ACCIDENT WAS A PECULIAR ONE.

A peculiar but dangerous accident occurred at the home of Mr. Hamilton, of 215 Church street, yesterday morning, by which the kitchen range was blown to pieces and the kitchen itself nearly demolished.

Mr. Hamilton went away to spend Christmas with some relatives near Somerville. He was delayed by the illness of his wife and didn't reach home until yesterday morning. Mr. Hamilton lighted a fire in the kitchen range at once and then went up stairs for a few moments to take a cup of coffee with the family who live above, when he was startled by a terrific explosion which shook the house from top to bottom.

Hurrying down the stairs Mr. Hamilton found that the range was lying in fragments all over the room, and the the walls and ceiling of the kitchen were ruined. An investigation showed that the waterback, a little arrangement inside the range by which the water in the tank is heated, had exploded. The extreme cold Sunday and Monday had frozen all the pipes and the water in this waterback, and when the fire was lighted the ice began to melt and this, generating steam, caused the explosion. A plumber was called in to shut off the water. Mr. Hamilton is thankful that he went upstairs when he did, otherwise he would probably have been killed.

ROSE SEGAL WANTED IN COURT.

Her Father Ordered to Produce Her, But Says He Can't Find Her.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 4—Louis Norton, of Newark, will be given a hearing before Justice Collins at this place this afternoon. Norton, it is alleged, is one of the persons who, with Rabbi Segal and his two sons, of Newark, broke into the house of John M. Reiner, at Elizabeth, and took Miss Rose Segal out of the house.

Miss Segal is an important witness in the case to identify Norton, and an order has been served upon her father to produce her at the hearing. Rabbi Segal declares that he cannot produce her, for he does not know where she is.

Mrs. Runyon Chosen Superintendent.

The annual business meeting of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last evening at the home of the secretary, Thomas A. Cuming, of Putnam avenue. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Superintendent, Mrs. D. M. Runyon; assistant superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; secretary, Thomas A. Cuming; treasurer, Joseph M. Hawkins; organist, Miss Elma H. Runyon.

Young Mr. Patterson in Business.

Beginning with the first of the new year, Stuart H. Patterson, of this city, has become a member of the firm of Patterson & Corwin, certified public accountants, of which his father, A. S. Dr. Rodman to Go Abroad.

Rev. Dr. Rodman, of Seventh street, expects to go abroad in February. Will visit many points of interest including Italy, Greece and the Holy Land.

Arthur W. Lederer, of West Front street, returned to Princeton University today after spending the holidays at home.

BRIEF, BUT TO THE POINT.

ONLY FIFTY WORDS IN JUDGE VANSYCKEL'S GRAND JURY CHARGE.

January Grand Jury Called in Elizabeth Yesterday Morning—The Plainfielders Who Were Drawn On It.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 4—The regular January Grand Jury was charged by Justice VanSyckle yesterday. The official life of this Grand Jury, like the charge of the justice, will be the shortest on record in Union county.

Justice VanSyckle's charge was as follows: "There is one case, a charge of homicide, which you are called upon to investigate. There is some question as to the man's sanity, but this, gentlemen, is not for you to decide. There are no other matters to which the court wishes to call your attention. Gentlemen, you will choose your own officers and proceed with the investigation.

The following is the list of grand jurors: Edward C Woodruff, foreman, Rosewell Sanford and William R. Sattler, of Elizabeth; Albert V. Nolan, Edward Van Buren, and Henry B. Chapman, of Plainfield; Carroll Bassett, of Summit; William J. Bogert, of Westfield; Eugene V. Austin, of Cranford; William H. Brower, of Plainfield; Dr. Thomas Dolan, Patrick J. Ryan, Jacob Bruchlacher, Jacob Hamner, William McCulley and Frank J. Vogel, of Elizabeth; Ogden Woodruff, of Union; John A. Holliday, of Clark; Eugene Badgley, of New Providence; Frederick Deiner, of Springfield, and Edward Slater, S. Rusling Ryno and James Birkett, of Rahway. The homicide case which the grand jury is investigating is that of John Dwyer, who is alleged to have beaten his sister-in-law to death.

FLYNN, OR WHOEVER HE IS, WILL PROBABLY DIE.

NEVER REGAINED CONSCOUSNESS.

The man at the hospital who was supposed to have been Thomas Flynn, and who was picked up unconscious along the tracks of the Central Railroad, Christmas Monday, is rapidly sinking and hopes of his recovery have been given up. The authorities in charge at the hospital are not perfectly sure that the man's name is Thomas Flynn, as no one has come to the hospital to identify him except Overseer of the Poor Corcoran, of Raritan.

From the time the man was found lying along the tracks to the present time he has not been conscious once and has not been able to tell anything about himself. He has completely lost the power of speech. Every possible effort has been made to learn who he is and where his home is, but without success.

A New Year's Sociable.

A New Year's sociable was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Windham, of Fairview avenue. The evening was passed in dancing and singing, after which refreshments were served. Those present included Miss Bertha Philpitt, I. Gaston, Miss Mamie Philpitt, Miss Carrie Dentz, Frank Dentz, Charles Case, Miss Lulu Windham, Charles A. Windham, the Misses Windham.

Kline Gets the Plum.

At a meeting of the Union County Republican executive committee held last Saturday at Elizabeth, Plainfield succeeded in securing one appointment, that of one doorkeeper. The fortunate person is William Kline, of Fourth street. Mr. Kline has always been a faithful party worker and deserves the recognition. Assemblyman Murray was instrumental in securing the appointment.

Masonic Officers Installed.

The members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., held a regular communication last evening, at which time the officers-elect were installed by Past Master H. O. Hance. The work was performed in a highly creditable manner. After the business of the evening a banquet was served. Among those present were many Masons from out of town.

Miles Says He Can't Get His Money.

Dr. Long, assisted by the staff at Muhlenberg Hospital, performed an operation at 10 o'clock this morning for the removal of a tumor from Mrs. Harry G. Adams, of 222 East Front street. The operation was in every way successful and the patient is doing well.

CITY TO BATTLE OVER SEWAGE BEDS.

Arguments Pro and Con in the Milliken Suit.

SUES CITY FOR DAMAGES.

Argues That Otherwise the Act Authorizing Beds is Unconstitutional—Corporation Counsel Marsh Quotes Law in Defence of the City—Infers Mrs. Milliken Has No Remedy for Loss.

The sewage disposal beds are once more a topic of conversation. This time it is a lawsuit against the city that brings them prominently before the attention of the people of Plainfield. The suit was instituted some time ago, when it was duly noticed in the columns of The Press. Yesterday The Daily Press told of the hearing before Judge VanSyckel in the Supreme Court at Elizabeth yesterday morning, in the case of Mrs. Sarah Milliken against the city of Plainfield for $10,000 damages.

The counsel for the plaintiff, Mrs. Milliken, were Senator Charles A. Reed, of Reed & Coddington; S. S. Swackhamer, of Codington & Swackhamer, of this city, and Charles O. Hartshorne, of Jersey City. They held that the city was taking private property for public use without compensation which was in conflict with the provisions of the Federal and State Constitutions. The destruction, partial or entire, of private property or the lessening or diminishing of its value, they construed to come within the meaning of those provisions of the two constitutions.

It was contended by the defence that this was a public improvement carried on by a municipal corporation under a special act of the Legislature and that the injuries to the plaintiff's property, if any, were simply incidental, being only such as were unavoidable with the exercise of due care and skill by the city, and therefore did not subject the city to suit.

S. S. Swackhamer, one of the attorneys for the plaintiff, was interviewed by a Press reporter yesterday afternoon regarding the case as presented by the plaintiff. He contended that that the injuries to Mrs. Milliken's property were not incidental but direct, and he cited a case in the Supreme Court in which a county was held liable to an action for injuries caused by the freeholders making an excavation in a street and leaving it unguarded, whereby the plaintiff in the case was injured. The Court, in that case, held that while the County or Freeholders were a municipal corporation, yet the wrong complained of, while a public nuisance, was still an active wrong whereby the plaintiff was injured, and although an indictment would lie, the plaintiff could recover.

The two principal points taken by the plaintiff's counsel were first:—that if the act that permits the city to build the sewer beds is constitutional, there being no provision for compensation in the act, it was intended by the Legislature that a party injured should have his remedy by suit. And second:—if that were not the intention of the Legislature and if the act was not so construed, then the act is unconstitutional and void and furnishes no justification to the city.

When a Press reporter called at the law offices of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh to learn the city's side of the case, Mr. Marsh declined to discuss the case but handed the reporter two decisions of the Court of Errors and Appeals from which the following appropriate sections are given:

"When property has been incidentally injured, no matter to what extent, as an unavoidable result of a public improvement, such loss has always been deemed remediless and it has never been supposed that property so injured was taken in the constitutional sense for public use. All public improvements in the State have been built and are resting on this foundation.

"The courts of this State have said in conclusive form that the neglect of a municipal corporation to perform, or its negligence in the performance of a public duty imposed on it by law, is a public wrong to be remedied by indictment and cannot constitute the basis of a civil action by an individual who has suffered particular damage by reason of such neglect."

Honoring New Mayor.

Mayor Rockfellow had many callers yesterday who wished him a happy new year.

RAVISHING KLONDIKE WHOLESALE.

A stupendous scheme has been started for the wholesale ravishing of ing themselves of umbrellas, overwater courses of Alaska and the Northwest Territory. A company is building one of the great earth and mud-eating machines that convert tidelands into blocks of redeemed building lots, which are familiar on the Pacific slope. An exceptional feature in the proposed dredger will be its power for self-propulsion and its extremely light draught. The power will be supplied to a stern wheel, as in light-draught river steamers. The dredger will be built at the mouth of the Yukon, whence she will start on her tour of investigation up the river, putting her long black beak into the sand and gravel of the bottom and doing a great deal of prospecting in very short order. When a rich streak is found, she will churn away with her centrifugal pumps and toss up the gravel and nuggets as well as dust and mud by the bushel. The enormous possibilities of the enterprise are seen when it is remembered that a day's work in that region is 2,000 pounds per man, and the new machine is expected to do from four to five hundred times as much work as one man daily.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WAS NOT ASHAMED.

He Informed the Congregation that He Did the "Licking."

A San Francisco manufacturer hasadvised his little son, not once but fifty times, to avoid contentions with other children, but if a quarrel is forced upon him to defend himself at all hazards.

The boy is a member of the Plymouth Congregational Sunday school, and it is the custom of the pastor of the church to give every child in the Sabbath school a nice little Bible on the Sunday following his seventh birthday. Last Sunday it was Master Kerr's turn to receive a Bible, and when his name was called he marched forward with a black eye he had received in a fight with another urchin the day before. The pastor eyed the boy's face narrowly and the whole congregation tittered. The little fellow flushed with embarrassment, but accepted the Bible as gracefully as possible, listened to the few words of commendation and advice and started for his seat. The tittering was renewed, and when half way down the aisle the boy's pent-up feelings could be restrained no longer. He resented the imputation conveyed, first by the pastor's searching gaze and then by the congregation's amusement, and, stopping in the aisle, he turned around and shouted:

HULL BILL IS FAVORED

President Prefers It to the Miles Measure.

COST OF A STANDING ARMY

War Department Estimates It Will Cost Between Fifty-five and Sixty Million if Mr. McKinley's Ideas Are Adopted

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Now that it is certain the peace treaty will be ratified by the Senate, the anti-expansionists will level their heavy guns of opposition against the bill to increase the army.

This bill probably will be the hardest fought and longest debated of any measure during the next two months. The anti-expansionists will throw obstacles in its path at every opportunity.

During the recess the president has talked to senators and representatives, and openly has stated his preference for the Hull bill, as against the one prepared by General Miles.

The Hull bill aims to increase the present army in numbers rather than regiments, with very few officers. The Miles bill, on the other hand, increases the number of regiments and the number of officers.

It is acknowledged to be a good one, but not one to meet the favor of Congress, and those who are anxious for legislation to increase the army say it never could be passed, and as the necessities of our changed territories make it necessary for an increase of the army, they are willing to take the Hull bill rather than to lose all.

A calculation has been made at the war department in regard to the increased appropriations necessary for the maintenance of the army under the Hull bill, and it is found that it is twenty to thirty per cent. lower than expected.

It would require only between fifty-five and sixty millions. It was estimated that it would be nearer one hundred millions than fifty.

The anti-expansionists are relying upon the public sentiment against a large standing army to help the bill for an increase.

The president, however, feels assured that Congress will pass a bill, giving the government the necessary force to protect and garrison the new territory required during the war, and also a force large enough for duty in the United States.

In talking about what Congress is likely to do in the matter, a prominent army official said:

"It is my opinion that before Congress adjourns it will authorize the continuance of the army as it at present exists, numbering sixty-two thousand men, and provide that the president at his discretion and when he thinks it necessary for the good of this country and the territories, to increase this army up to one hundred thousand. This will not only meet the approval of he conservative men who do not want a large standing army, but it will give the president the power to increase the army to the number now asked for, if he thinks it necessary. It would satisfy the people, for it would put the responsibility for the increase on the president's shoulders, giving him the discretion to decide what number is necessary.

"If, during the year, the president finds it necessary for a large force to be sent to either the Philippines or Cuba, he will have the power to enlist enough men in the regular army to meet this necessity.

"In other words, this is all the president asked in his annual message. The present army is now, as stated, sixty-two thousand men, and if he has the power to increase it to one hundred thousand men that is all that is required."

Sloan May Succeed Andrews.

He called a conference yesterday to discuss the candidates for superintendent of public works. The latest candidate for the place is George B Sloane of Oswego, N. Y.

Mr. Sloan is a member of the Canal Union and an active promoter of canal improvements. It is said that the nine million dollar appropriation was obtained in a great measure through his efforts.

Mr. Sloane was himself one of the conferees that met in the governor's private chamber to-day.

Trains Race for Contract.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 4.—The race between the Burlington and Northwestern fast mail trains concluded at Omaha yesterday morning.

It was the fastest time for a five hundred mile stretch ever made, and the trains ran as fast as one hundred and ten miles an hour for fifteen miles. The Northwestern wins the first prize of the great $750,000 contest.

Six more must be run, and the Northwestern must win at least three more to get half the mail contract and four more in order to ask for the whole.

This brings the time between Omaha and Chicago down to nine hours and fifty-seven minutes.

A Destructive Storm.

London, Jan. 4.—Incoming steamers at different ports report that the frightful weather continues along the British coasts and in the Bay of Biscay.

The channel steamer Anvers, of 1,689 tons, trading between New Haven and Dieppe, has been wrecked at the entrance of Dieppe harbor.

State Troops Disbanded.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Governor Roosevelt, through Adjutant General Andrews, yesterday directed Major General Roe to issue an order disbanding Troop C C of Brooklyn and the One Hundred and Seventy-first regiment of New York city.

GOV. HASTINGS SPEAKS PLAINLY.

The State Treasury Scandals. Better Ballot Law Wanted.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 4.—Governor Daniel H. Hastings, who will retire on January 17, sent his annual message to the legislature yesterday.

The message shows the state revenues for the year ended November 30, 1898, to have been $13,825,120, and the expenditures $13,978,803. The public debt is $6,815,290, to the credit of which there is a sinking fund of $5,789,317. The net debt of the state is, therefore, only $1,025,952, no part of which can be paid until 1912.

Concerning the state treasury the governor says:

The management of the state treasury has for many years been the subject of public criticism. While it may be true the state has lost no money deposited in the various banks throughout the commonwealth, it cannot be questioned that in the past the public funds have been used for political purposes by depositing them in favorite banks, where such deposits were expected to yield returns in the shape of political influence. This system cannot be defended. It should not be in the power of any man to say that banks shall handle the millions of dollars that are annually paid into the state treasury. It would be far better for the state to receive no interest upon deposits rather than to suffer a system to continue which can be used for political purposes, and it is submitted that the evil will never be corrected until the state keeps its own money in its own vaults, as do many of the states and as is done by the United States.

The governor criticises the new state capitol. The new building, he says, in its present condition "is hardly fit for human habitation, much less the official abode of the representatives of the great commonwealth.

"There are scores of farmers' houses in Pennsylvania more attractive in appearance than this building. It is made of common brick embedded in cheap mortar, looks like a hastily erected factory building and is repulsive to the eye. Although the act of the assembly requires that the building shall be 'made as nearly fireproof as possible,' the roof and most of the interior fittings are as combustible as

EX-GOV. BLACK TURNS TO LAW.

He Comes Here Prepared for Practice of His Profession.

New York, Jan. 4.—Ex-Gov. Frank S. Black started in yesterday on his career as a New York lawyer. Immediately after Governor Roosevelt had been installed in office, Mr. Black began preparations for his momentous departure in professional life. He telegraphed his partners, ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott and Abraham Gruber, that he would be on hand yesterday ready for work.

Yesterday morning he left his old home on Ida Hill, in the city of Troy, and boarded the 10.30 train for New York. After a lunch at the Holland House, where he will make his home for the present, he came down town and at 3 o'clock was ready for business.

It is the ex-governor's intention to return to Troy every Friday evening during the winter and spring. Four days of the week he will be at the Holland House. Mr. and Mrs. Black live during the summer in the Berkshire Hills.

The new firm, the title of which is Black Olcott, Gruber and Benynge, have a handsome suite of offices on the fifth floor of the Singer building, No. 149 Broadway. The ex-governor's room faces Broadway.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 4.—More money has been coined during the past year at the Philadelphia mint than any time since 1890. The total coinage during 1898 was 100,268,433 pieces, valued at $27,654,452.89. Of this there was coined a subsidiary coinage valued at $11,770,359.75.

Besides this, the mint coined for the government of San Domingo during 1898 511,873 pesos, a coin about the size of an American dollar.

Orders have been received to turn out two hundred thousand more of these coins. Superintendent Boyer started yesterday to coin $40,000,000 of the gold bullion which lies in the vaults of the mint.

Of this three million dollars will be coined into double eagles and the remainder into such denominations as the treasury department may order.

Gulf of California Storm.

San Francisco, Jan. 4.—A communication has been received by the Merchants' Exchange from Captain Von Helms of the steamship Ciracao telling of a storm in the Gulf of California.

It began on December 23 and lasted through Christmas day.

Three hundred feet of the breakwater at Santa Roselya was washed away, and some damage was done to the ships Star of France and Falkland Bank.

The Mexican schooner Rebecca, formerly of this port, sprung a leak on Christmas day and had to be run aground in La Defensa bay. She will probably be saved.

Fatal Locomotive Explosion.

Reading, Pa., Jan. 4.—The boiler of an engine on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway blew up near Bowers Station, a short distance from this place, yesterday morning, instantly killing William Weaver, engineer, and probably fatally injuring Joshua Robeson, a conductor.

The engine was drawing an extra freight at the time of the explosion and the injured men, together with two others, were on the locomotive at the time of the explosion. None of the cars were wrecked.

The Nebraska Legislature.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 4.—The Republicans will organize and control both houses of the legislature. After a midnight caucus, which terminated in an apparent split among the House Republicans, a second caucus was called which continued until nearly daylight.

The five recalcitrant members came in after concessions had been made to them in the way of appointments to offices.

NO FIGHT YET AT ILOILO

Gen. Otis Thinks a Conflict Can Be Avoided.

NO AMERICANS YET LANDED

At the time of the departure of the Bolinao the insurgents were still in control of the city and no American troops had been landed.

The First California regiment embarked here at four o'clock yesterday afternoon on board the steamships Campania and Martima, presumably to report to General Miller at Iloilo. The steamships were convoyed by the gunboat Concord.

Though it has not been officially announced, it is supposed that the extension of American occupation will now be systematically begun in the southern islands.

General Rios, the Spanish governor of the Visayas, who arrived here yesterday from Zamboanga, on the island of Mindanao, where he took the Spanish troops when he evacuated Iloilo, visited General Otis in the afternoon. General Rios denies the imputation of his collusion with the insurgents, saying that he gave up only when he was ordered to do so by the government at Madrid.

Aguinaldo is evidently organizing his followers to oppose the Americans. Yesterday he hastily summoned the Filipino cabinet and congress to assemble.

Washington, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from Major General Otis, dated at Manila, was read at the meeting of the cabinet yesterday morning, giving reassuring information in regard to the situation among the insurgents at Iloilo, island of Panay.

General Otis said that he believed the disquieting reports from the scene of the disturbance had already proved unwarranted, and he believed that a conflict of arms, at any rate, could be averted.

The dispatch was evidently based on direct and recent information from General Miller, the officer in charge of the United States troops sent from Manila to the Panay capital.

The belief now is that the moral effect of the presence of the United States soldiers will be sufficient to impress the insurgents with the folly of provoking an actual encounter with General Miller's forces, and that the native troops will therefore submit quietly to the authority of the United States.

In response to a suggestion from Admiral Dewey, and on account of the serious situation in the Philippines, the navy department yesterday ordered the gunboat Castine to Manila for use in shallow rivers and harbors. The Castine is at Havana and will proceed to the east by the Sues route.

Alleged Heiress Arrested.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 4.—Mary Barson Foster, claiming to be one of the heirs to the estate of George Washington Newton Yost, the inventor, has been arrested here on a charge of obtaining $1,500 under false pretences from John C. Fredericks of No. 12 City Hall avenue.

The allegation was that Miss Foster called upon Mr. Fredericks about a year ago, represented that she had a quarterly income of $1,500 from Ward and Cameron, trustees of the Yost estate at Albany, N. Y., and wanted a loan.

Another warrant was issued on a similar charge, the amount being $1,200.

The Hartford Evening Post.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 4.—The Times yesterday afternoon announced that the negotiations which have been pending for some time for the sale of the Hartford Evening Post have been practically completed.

An agreement is said to have been reached by which the controlling interest in the paper is to be transferred to E. L. and H. D. Clark of of New Haven.

The new officers of the company will be as follows: President, E. L. Clark; vice president and treasurer, H. D. Clark; secretary, Henry E. Tainter of Hartford; business manager, J. A. Spaulding, recently of New Haven.

Fatal Fire at Providence.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 4.—A fire broke out in the building, No. 6 Rome street yesterday morning, and before all the eight families who were tenants in the house, could be rescued, Frank McDermott, twenty-four years of age, was suffocated, and Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien were overcome by smoke.

McDermott was rescued alive, but he died on the way to the hospital. Mrs. O'Brien is in a serious condition.

Cartridge Making in England.

London, Jan. 4.—It is announced that the Kynoch Company of Birmingham has begun making ten million cartridges for the United States, at the rate of one million weekly.

An American inspector examines the work, and profiting by the war experiences, a special metal is used to prevent the cases from jamming in the barrels.

Drawing Trade to New York

New York, Jan. 4.—The Merchants' Association has made arrangements with the railroads by which round trip tickets can be bought for country merchants at one and one-third the single fare rate.

It is hoped that this will bring a flood of spring buyers to New York city.

THE UBIQUITOUS STREET PIANOS.

How They Are Made, What They Cost, and What They Earn.

Street pianos, as possibly not every one knows, are in principle a combination of the music box and the upright piano. They are technically called "cylinder-pianos," and while formerly imported from large factories in Berlin and Florence, are now chiefly manufactured here. The cylinder, which is turned by the crank, resembles that of a music box greatly enlarged and made of wood. In transcribing a composition to this instrument, a sheet of paper is tightly pasted around the cylinder, which is placed in a frame supporting a keyboard consisting of small wooden keys, on the under side of which small sharp-pointed bits of steel are screwed. The operator puts the music to be transcribed on a rack in front of him, and proceeds to play it on the keyboard, carefully revolving the cylinder so as to get the proper intervals between the successive notes. This silent music punctures the paper on the cylinder full of holes.

Another mechanic now takes the cylinder and drives small brass nails in these holes. This was formerly done tediously with a hammer, but the elder Molinari has greatly simplified and expedited it by a scheme for pressing the nails in with a beam worked with a treadle. The nails protrude about an eighth of an inch, and vary in shape according to the length of the note to be played. Thus a quarter-note is represented by a nail with a head on it, an eighth-note by a sharp pointed tack, and a succession of sixteenth-notes by a strip of brass toothed like a comb. A half or a whole note resembles a double-headed carpet tack. On each cylinder ten tunes are placed, the position of the cylinder being slightly shifted for each tune. Once filled, the cylinder is put into the piano frame, where the nails release the hammers, which fly against strings as in a piano.

Stree-pianos are rather expensive, considering the sort of capitalists that own them. They vary in price according to range and brilliance rather than the number of their tunes. A piano with forty hammers costs from $150 to $190. They can be had with forty-four, forty-eight, and even sixty-four hammers, these last costing $350. The panoramas which accompany some of them, cost from $10 to $30. Each cylinder costs from $40 to $85. Owing to the roughness of their usage, and the short life of popular airs, they require constant tuning and an occasional change of cylinders.

How these Italian street musicians accumulate the necessary capital, it is hard to imagine, but they certainly have the art of living luxuriously upon nothing a year. They usually own their piano, and it is very hard to rent one without renting the owners, too. While a decent upright pianoforte can be rented for $4 a month, a street piano costs from $4 to $10 a week.—Rupert Hughes, in Godey's Magazine.

WHERE PULLMAN GOT HIS START.

Simeon Mayor Gave Him Credit for Lumber to Build His Sleepers.

George M. Pullman received his first real start in life from a man known all over the United States in the lumber trade. This man was once one of the largest lumber merchants in the United States.

His name is Simeon Mayo.

Early in the 60s Pullman was a bookkeeper in Chicago, where Mayo was one of the solid men. Mayo knew Pullman's employer, and thus met the young man when he was struggling with his sleeping car idea. It was then very crude, but Mayo believed in it. Pullman perfected his scheme and wanted to build some cars, but he had not the money to pay for the lumber. Mayo gave him all the credit he wanted, after Pullman had failed to get it elsewhere. Thus the man who has just died worth millions was able to develop the idea that made him rich and carried his name all over the world.

It is a coincidence that Mayo employed Lyman J. Gage when he was a young man just getting a start.—New York Journal.

A Friendly Bar Examination.

A Georgia correspondent sends us this account of a young man's oral examination for the bar by a local committee before an old judge, who was also an old acquaintance of the candidate: Being asked, "What is arson?" he scratched his head and finally said, "I believe that's pison, ain't it?"

On this, the old judge, to help him out, says, "Tut, tut, Jim. Suppose I were to set fire to your house and burn it down, what would that be?"

With quick and emphatic reply, Jim says, "I think it would be a dad dratted mean trick."

But although this answer was not technically accurate, Jim was in the hands of his friends and was honorably admitted.—Case and Comment.

A Mystery Explained.

"Your business seems to be booming. Is it caused by an anticipated cold winter?" remarked Pete Amsterdam to his coal dealer.

"No, it's not that. There has been a growing demand for more coal ever since these new patent fuel-saving stoves were put on the market," replied the coal dealer with a grin.—New York World.

Photography and Shooting.

A miniature photographic camera attached to the barrel of a gun, is the invention of Mr. Lerchner, of Vienna. By an automatic shutter, working in unison with the trigger of the gun, the sportsman is able to obtain a perfect photograph of the bird or animal immediately before the shot or bullet has reached it.

THE CONNECTICUT LEGISLATURE.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 4.—The state legislature, which meets to-day, will contain a Republican majority of four in the Senate and 108 in the lower house, with the seats of Senator Callahan and Representative Bree of this city contested.

The latter had a majority of several hundred votes, and his seat is contested under an almost forgotten but explicit law disqualifying a candidate who takes part in the count of the ballots.

It is reported on good authority that the state commission on expenses will recommend to the legislature the abolition of a number of the lower state courts on the ground that they are unnecessary, and the pay of court clerks by salaries instead of by fees, which in the larger counties now amount to two or three times what the highest paid judges of state courts receive.

The new governor will have two judicial nominations to make for the places on the supreme and superior court benches now filled by the temporary appointment of Judges Hall and Roraback. But both will probably succeed themselves.

A more interesting question is that of the reappointment of Insurance Commissioner Betts, who was a strong Porter man, and whose nomination will be regarded as a test of the relations of Governor Lounsbury with the Republican machine.

Applications for new trolley roads now call for nearly four hundred miles of tracks, or about the whole length of operated trolleys in the state.

Quay Carries Caucus.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 4.—Despite the efforts of the opponents of Senator Quay to obtain a postponement of the senatorial caucus, the adherents of the senior senator carrried their point last night and secured the indorsement of their favorite by 109 of the 184 Republicans of the Pennsylvania legislature.

This is nineteen less than the number necessary to elect a United Stotes senator on joint ballot, the total membership being 255, of which 128 is a majority.

Senator Martin was not present, but Senator Magee was, and it was on his motion that the nomination was made unanimous.

The anti-Quay leaders are jubilant over the result of the caucus and assert that the man they are fighting can never succeed himself in the Senate.

Borrows Beats Pingree.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—Governor Pingree has given up hope of defeating Senator Burrows for re-election, and is now bending every effort to save his candidate for speaker of the house.

Seventy-three legislators have signed the Burrows call for a caucus tonight, and there is no question that all the signers will vote for him. Sixty-seven votes are all that is required to elect.

Pingree is trying to arrange an open ballot for the speakership when the house is organized, hoping to swing the votes of Democratic members for his candidate, John J. Carton of Flint. Representative Adams of Grand Rapids is supposed to have the support of Burrows members.

New Horticultural Buildings.

New York, Jan. 4.—Ground was broken for a range of horticultural buildings at Bronx Park yesterday. Park Commissioner August Moebus dug the first spade full of earth, and members of the Botanical Society delivered addresses.

The city granted the lands in Bronx Park for a botanical garden, and the buildings were designed by Lord and Burnham.

John C. Sheehan has the contract for building the buildings, and it is expected the work will be completed in eleven months.

The city has appropriated $375,000 to complete them.

To Manufacture Corduroy.

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 4.—The Charlton Manufacturing Company of this city, which has a mill at Ingrahamville, has leased a mill of the United States Cotton Company at Central Falls, and will fit it up for the manufacture of corduroy, and will considerably increase its production.

The mill will accommodate several hundred hands.

Connecticut Labor Statistics.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 4.—The annual report for 1898 of the Connecticut Bureau of Labor Statistics, just issued, gives returns from 564 manufacturing establishments, which in 1898 employed 65,589 persons, an increase of six per cent. over 1897.

Wages disbursed were $32,498,659, or 14.6 per cent. more than in 1897.

Senator Allison Out Again.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Senator Allison of Iowa, who has been confined to his home with the grip, was able to be at the Capitol yesterday afternoon.

BITS OF NEWS.

General Isaac S. Catlin of Brooklyn has been awarded a medal of honor for bravery at the battle of Petersburg, by President McKinley.

Russia has ordered a payment of seventy-five million roubles to the Imperial Bank, and it is denied that the government has been seeking loans.

Governor Roosevelt of New York has refused to pardon Decker, the Tottenville wife murderer, and he will be electrocuted at Sing Sing next week.

The main sewer at Blevres, France, burst Monday and much alarm is felt in Paris on account of the danger to the exposition buildings from recent rains.

Reports from Paris say that opponents to Dreyfus' revision declare that the court of cassation has waived its intention of recalling Dreyfus from French Guiana. It is stated that the fear of lynching and riots caused this determination.

A GRAND DUKE'S VISIT

Cyril of Russia Talks Interestingly of the World's Affairs.

AMERICAN WOMEN LOVELY

The Partition in China Certain and England, France, Russia and Germany will Get the Spoils. Not Disturbed by England's Attitude.

New York, Jan. 4.—The Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, cousin of the czar of Russia, who arrived in New York Monday night on his way to Europe after two years' duty in Chinese waters, visited the Russian Orthodox church, at No. 323 Second avenue, yesterday.

The grand duke's stay will be brief. He sails on the Fuerst Bismarck today, to attend the wedding of his sister, the Grand Duchess Helena, to Prince Maximilian of Saxe. The duke received the representatives of the press in the state parlor of the Waldorf-Astoria, which was profusely decorated with palms and roses. Lieutenant Koube was in attendance.

The duke looks to be 26 or 27 years old. He is six feet tall and good looking. His face is rather feminine in feature. It is almost too perfectly oval for a man, and the high cheek bones of the typical Russian are absent. His eyes are large and very intelligent. His mouth is small, and he wears a little brown moustache that is not at all Russian. His hair is straight and brown and he wears it short.

The duke thinks that the American success in the late war with Spain, while it is a source of congratulation, will also bring about new obligations and burdens not easy to bear.

He believes that we will have much trouble with the natives in the Philippines, in fact, will have war with them sooner or later.

The presence of the United States in the Far East, he said, was entirely satisfactory to Russia, and would lead to peace in the Orient. The opposition of England to all Russian possession in China did not disturb his people. He thought the partition of China is only a question of time, and France, England, Russia and Germany will share the spoils.

The grand duke spoke enthusiastically about the Trans-Siberian Railway, and thought that it would be of the greatest value in colonizing Siberia, and also in affording easy access for troops to the Pacific.

The American women will be happy to hear that his highness considers them "the most beautiful in the world."

Bishop Nicholas, retiring prelate of the Russian church in America, who will take ship with the grand duke, to-day, presided at the church service yesterday and made an address. The little church, which occupies the front and back parlors of a residence house on Second avenue, was decorated especially for the occasion.

The church, by the way, is the gift of the czar to the Russians of New York in return for the sympathy expressed at the death of his father. He sent the clergy over and pays the rentals and expenses to a great extent.

Shortly after 11.30 the duke and his aides arrived from the Waldorf in a carriage. He was escorted up the steps of the house and into the hallway.

There Basil Pankevitch, president of St. Mary's Russian Orthodox Brotherhood, advanced with a salver and a loaf of brown Russian bread, with a little gold salt cellar upon it. He presented it to the duke, and invited him, after the Russian custom, to taste of the bread and salt, welcoming him on behalf of the orthodox Russians.

Then Bishop Nicholas stepped out from the inner chancel as the duke approached and greeted him. He bowed and handed the cross for the duke to kiss.

He then addressed to the duke a welcome on behalf of the church and of the people present.

This was followed by the Litany and prayers.

Gen Wood Comes to Washington.

Santiago de Cuba, Jan. 4.—Major General Wood, American military commander, has cabled for permission to go to Washington, and has been granted leave of absence. He left on the United States transport Mississippi last night.

The reason of the general's departure is the order received from Havana to transmit the customs receipts each week to that city. Compliance with these instructions, he believes, would involve the abandonment of many necessary public improvements, throw ten thousand Cubans out of employment, send them to the hills to become bandits and revive Spain's practice of monetary centralization.

It is believed that General Wood is desirous of seeing the president on this subject. There was a mass meeting here yesterday afternoon of business men of all kinds to protest against the Affairs of Paper Company Settled.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 4.—The Cleveland Paper Company, which was placed in the hands of a receiver a year and a half ago, with liabilities of over three hundred thousand dollars, has been absorbed by the Standard Paper and Bag Company.

Since Receiver Horr assumed charge of the property 87 1-2 per cent. of the liabilities have been settled.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—Ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh's condition is about the same as yesterday, and he continues to hold the improvement shown.

MISS SAMPSON'S WEDDING.

The Marriage of the Admiral's Daughter to be a Social Event.

New York, Jan. 4.—Great preparations have been made for the wedding to-day of Miss Olive Farrington Sampson, daughter of Admiral Sampson, to Henry H. Scott, a wholesale coal dealer of San Francisco. The ceremony will be at 8 p. m. in the Glen Ridge Congregational church. It was to have taken place last month, but owing to the absence of both Miss Sampson's parents, was postponed.

The maid of honor will be Miss Nannie Sampson, and the bridesmaid will be Miss Annie Davis, daughter of Major Davis of West Point, and Miss Perkins of Connecticut. There will be a reception in the Sampson house in Clark street, Glen Ridge, after the ceremony.

One of the features of the banquet will be the display and use for the first time of the loving cup just presented to Mrs. Sampson by the commanding officers who served under Admiral Sampson during the war.

MISS OLIVE F. SAMPSON.

The cup is twelve inches in height and, as might be expected in nautical in character. The handles are composed of dolphins, and in connection with these are two mermaids, one displaying the laurel wreath of triumph and the other proclaiming this memorable victory of the sea.

Upon one face of the cup the action off Santiago on that glorious third of July is etched in a very artistic manner, pictures of the flagship New York and of other famous battleships being adequately displayed.

Upon the other face is etched in quaint and graceful lettering the inscription setting forth for whom, from whom, and the occasion calling for the presentation. The base is formed of representations of the bows of the Spanish armored cruisers Oquendo, Viscaya, Maria Theresa and Cristobal Colon—the whole effect being in its artistic presentation worthy of the occasion and of the tribute which evolved it.

LYMAN ABBOTT'S SUCCESSOR.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 4.—It is not unlikely that the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of the Central Church of Chicago, will succeed the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott as pastor of Plymouth church.

It is very probable that the advisory committee of Plymouth church will recommend that Dr. Hillis be called. It is generally believed that he will accept and that by spring the celebrated Chicago divine will be preaching in historic Plymouth.

Dr. Hillis is a native of Iowa, and is forty years old. He was educated at Grinnell Academy, at Lake Forest University, and at McCormick Seminary.

For three years after leaving his theological studies he was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Peoria. From 1890 to 1894 he preached from the pulpit of the First church in Evanston, Ill.

In December, 1894, he succeeded Professor Swing at the Central Church. Dr. Hillis, like his predecessors of Plymouth and Central churches, is a writer. The four books he has published are: "Foretokens of Immortality," "How the Inner Light Failed," "A Man's Value to Society," and "The Investment of Influence."

Slain by Desperadoes.

St. Paul, Jan. 4.—John Wellmer of Lafayette, Nicolette county, was shot in the head and hip by two tramps whom he had given shelter.

Mrs. Wellmer began gnawing at the rope with her teeth, and after several hours of struggle succeeded in biting the cord in two and liberating herself. In the yard she found her husband dead and his body frozen.

A posse of farmers, armed with the rope with which Mrs. Wellmer had been tied, have gone in pursuit of the desperadoes.

Chinese Troops Fled.

London, Jan. 4.—According to a dispatch from Han Kow, there are alarming reports from the upper Yang-tse-Kiang region. Disturbances are increasing in the provinces of Szechuan, Hunan and Hupe.

A body of Chinese troops was sent to attack the rebels, but they are said to have fled before the enemy.

The viceroy has been reinforced by three gunboats and three thousand men.

The dowager empress, it is asserted, is curtailing the authority of the viceroys, especially in the Yang-tse-Kiang districts.

Washington in the Grasp of the Grip.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 4.—The grip is now raging here with all its force. Following are some of the prominent persons who are ill:

Justice Gray of the supreme court, former Secretary of State Foster, Justice Weldon of the United States court of claims, Chief Justice Alvey and Justice Morris of the district court of appeals, Chief Justice Bingham and Justice Fox of the district supreme court, Senators Allison, Carter, Sewell, Cockrell and Turpie, and Colonel Schuyler Crosby.

JAPANESE WOMAN WRITER.

Otano Watanna Writes Clever Stories of Life in Japan.

Kitashima Kata Hasche is the real or family name of the clever Japanese girl who is winning fame by writing for the magazines and newspapers of Chicago and the east under the pen name of Otano Watanna, while more dollars come from her work as stenographer. Miss Hasche, or as she prefers to be called, Miss Watanna—the two names meaning the same thing, but belonging to different Japanese dialects—although scarcely past her twenty-first birthday, has seen more of life and experience than the average woman of twice her age. The realism which makes her fiction so true to life and so keenly interesting is based on a knowledge of life and the world which has been acquired in the most practical way.

Born in Yokohama, Japan, she was taken by her parents, and in company with the three brothers and nine sisters, who shared with her their care and supervision, to Liverpool, England and from thence to Manchester, before she was eight years of age. The journey from Japan to England was made by sailing vessels and occupied an entire year.

From Manchester the family emigrated to Canada, settling in Montreal, and it was in this city that Miss Watanna received most of her education. Shortly after entering her teens she taught herself shorthand, totally unaided except by a book on the Pitman system of shorthand, and she left Montreal when only sixteen to go to the West Indies as court reporter and correspondent for the News Letter of Kingston, Jamaica. While filling this position she was the only woman allowed to be present at the sessions of the British parliament, and her reports, differing from those of her fellow workers in that they were unofficial, were witty and sarcastic enough to call general attention to their writer.

A severe attack of yellow fever, with its consequent weakening of the entire system, made necessary her return to New York, and Miss Watanna's older sister now occupies her former position in Jamaica. Another sister, also a writer, is married to one of the best known philosophical and scientific writers in America.

At present the Japanese writer is busily engaged with stenographic work during a portion of every day. The remainder of her time, including many midnight hours, she devotes to the writing of short stories and poems.

Some of these stories, nearly all of which deal with Japanese life and customs, and which are peculiarly fresh and unhackneyed in treatment, have been recently accepted by the editors of Munsey's Magazine, the Ladies' Home Journal, the Black Cat, and the Iroquis Magazine. The Metropolitan Magazine was the first to bring out a bit of the Japanese writer's work, and she has also contributed to some of the leading newspapers in eastern cities—Chicago Times-Herald.

PUMPING OIL FROM THE SEA.

At Times the Wells Are Surrounded by Water and the Men Work on Platforms

The only spot in the world where oil is pumped from the sea is on the Pacific coast below Santa Barbara, Cal. The oil-bearing strata reaches out into the ocean, and the drill scaffolding, looking like windmills without the wheels, crept nearer and nearer the edge until finally many of them were planted in the water. The work was started at extreme low tide, and finally the tail scaffolding appeared twenty or thirty feet from the shore, seemingly rising from the sea. Three wells at low tide are in the water, and at flood tide are completely surrounded, the men working on platforms of various heights, which they ascend when working as the sea rises. The drill is worked in the water by an engine on the beach, the fuel being the oil pumped up, this engine working several weeks. At present the most daring well scaffold stands in six feet or more of water at high tide, and there is a rumor that others will be pushed out into the shallow water. Undoubtedly the entire coast in this vicinity overlies an oil producing stratum. Off what is known as Moore's wharf, half a mile out, oil rises to the surface in several places.—Scientific American.

Queen Bess' Handwriting.

Queen Elizabeth wrote often to Catherine de Medicis and her sons. Elizabeth's signature was always majestic, and, so to speak, in full dress. But when she was on some crooked scheme intent the body of the letter was the merest shorthand. It must have been trying to read her letters. They had to be read to be answered. But they generally beat about the bush, and were involved, unless she was in a passion. Then she went straight and swift to the point, and the handwriting was as clear as her words.—London Truth.

An Ambiguous Term.

Tommy: "Pa, teacher wants us to give a definition of a patriot."

Mr. Fogg: "Well, a patriot is a man who does something for his country, or does his country for something. I am not just sure which."

Mr. Martin's Fine Example.

Our journalistic friend, James Martin, of the New York Tribune, who is one of the members of the State Board of Arbitration that didn't arbitrate during the last year, has taken a commendable stand in reference to the position. In aiming to arrive at some plan whereby the work of the Board in settling labor disputes can be of some practical value, Mr. Martin has agreed to resign his position to make a place for a representative of the labor unions. The trouble with the Board in the past seems to have been its failure to engage the serious attention of disputing employers and employes. With a representative laboring man as one of its members it is thought that it will be brought into closer touch with at least one class of people whom it is intended to aid.

Mr. Martin has acted sensibly and practically in his attitude by conferring directly with the recognized principal trades union organization in the State. Even if his offer of resignation is not accepted with a view of providing a remedy for the present condition of affairs surrounding the State arbitrators, Mr. Martin's position will show that he has acted in the right spirit.

Obviously it would be to his personal interest to retain his position as a member of the Board at a good salary, but his willingness to subserve his own opportunity of gain for the public weal is an example that is too often absent in the makeup of public officials, and which is very creditable to Mr. Martin.

The Mayor's Message.

In his first message sent to the Council last night, Mayor Rockfellow exhibits a comprehensive view of city affairs in a general way and well defined opinions on some very important municipal subjects.

His expression of aversion to the city floating any more bonds not imperatively required for its general welfare is in line with the general ideas of economy which the people have become imbued with since the tax rate has reached its present size.

In suggesting that municipal ownership of the water works system is the proper thing, Mr. Rockfellow is expounding gospel that his predecessor took a hand in propounding in his last message a year ago, and which certainly strikes a responsive chord in the minds of the people when they realize the profit that is accruing to the present exclusive right of furnishing water to both the city and its residents. It is considerable of a problem to bring about municipal ownership of such an institution, but as there are three years for agitating and studying the subject it is proper that as often as possible the subject should be brought to the attention of the people in an official way.

Mayor Rockfellow indulges in many other observations on the public business which he will have to deal with as the chief executive of the city, and which indicates that he will watch city affairs with a close and discerning eye.

The officials of South Orange have reached the point in their dealings with trolley companies where patience has ceased to be a virtue, and they have decided to try something else in the effort to get decent service on the street railways. The North Jersey Traction Company controls valuable public rights in South Orange, but the way they operate their road is very aggravating to the people from whom they secured those concessions. At the meeting of the Township Committee last night an ordinance revoking the franchise to operate a trolley line on Springfield avenue was progressed to second reading and will be passed in a few days. The thoroughfare is known as the Irvington-Millburn bicycle course. The township officials have also determined to discipline the trolley company in other directions unless they cease violating their agreements with the township.

THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN NOSE.

Patrick J. Lanphear, of Lexington, has been selected to represent the whisky interests of Kentucky at the Paris Exposition. He is called the man with the golden nose, because of his remarkable ability in telling the age and other points in the history of any sample of whisky by simply smelling it.

Congressman Pitney, who is also a Senator-elect in this State, was in Washington yesterday and said that he would send his resignation as a National legislator to the Governor in a few days. Some of Mr. Pitney's close friends have expressed a wish that he might retain his position in both Houses till his term as Congressman expired, dividing his time between Trenton and Washington. Mr. Pitney declines to do any such thing, however, as he says he cannot discharge the duties of both offices. He thinks he can best be spared from the legislative body having the largest number of members, and consequently he will bid adieu to Congress. Mr. Pitney would probably rather be a big man in a little body than a little man in a big body of lawmakers.

A writer in the Newark News says that the close of the year shows a decided falling off in the number of trolley causalties as compared with the previous twelve months. That speaks well for the agility of the people. Who can tell but that the trolley juggernaut may, in the course of a few hundred years, become so harmless that people will jump in its way just to see how near it can come without hitting them. That view, of course, does not take in Brooklyn, for there lots of persons are trying the trick now and have been for some little time. It is not reported, however, that Brooklyn people have yet become adepts at the practice.

Mr. Voorhees' aversion to having a spectacular display at his inauguration as Governor is commendable. In these days of hifalutin' things, when many persons fly in the clouds at the slightest opportunity, a little Jacksonian simplicity at an affair like a Gubernatorial inauguration is relished by the plain people.

Col. Dickinson, of Jersey City, says that he will retire as Republican leader of Hudson county. The astonishing part of this information is to know that there are any Republicans in Hudson county to retire. We thought that the only political party in Hudson county was the Bob Davises.

In making up the Councilmanic committees for the year President Andrews has exhibited careful judgment in apportioning the various solons to positions where their natural qualifications as private business men will come into good play in handling the affairs of the public.

Summit is glorying over $1 75 gas. But like Plainfielders, who pay about the same. Summitites are getting down to a fair gas rate by piecemeal. Sometime in the distant future we are hopeful that dollar gas, and even less, will be here, but it seems a long ways off.

Assuredly there can be no politics in the Common Council of 1899 when there is complete unanimity in the selection of the president. The minority failed even to take advantage of its prerogative and name a candidate for the honor there is in it.

Not so many months ago Uncle Sam commanded the Dons to halt. The latter turned a deaf ear to the command. The other day the old fellow told the Castilians to "git," and they got. Will we have to give the Filipinos the same medicine?

A match box is the only thing the New York police have to work on in running down the guilty party in the latest metropolitan murder mystery. There ought not to be any trouble in striking a good clue on that.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest to Plainfield.

Every large city and town in New Jersey is agitating the matter of cheaper gas. A little reduction in the price of that commodity in Plainfield would be welcomed.—Plainfield Press.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The calendar crop is never short, as the post office people will testify. We always get our share and begin the new year with a great assortment, but the one we select "for keeps" is that of N. W. Ayer & Son, the keeping everlastingly at it advertising men of Philadelphia. This one spends the whole year in our company. It is a piece of fine printing, but its good looks do not constitute its sole charm. It is clear and plain. Utility has been put first. He who seeks the date can find; he who writes may read. The matter on it interests more people every year, but the edition is limited. While they last a copy can be obtained postpaid by sending 25 cents to the publishers.

WHAT DO THE CHILDREN DRINK?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the members of the Seventh-day Baptist church met to act upon the resignation of Rev. F. E. Peterson. After asking Mr. Peterson to re-consider his action, which he refused to do, the resignation was accepted. Rev. Mr. Shaw, of New York, who has preached in New Market before, will probably be chosen to succeed Mr. Peterson.

The week of prayer this week is being observed by the Methodist and Presbyterian churches together. Sunday and Tuesday nights the services were held in the Methodist church, and the service tonight will also be held there. The rest of the week the services will be held in the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. William H. Cole met with a misfortune Monday that came near burning her severely. She went down in the cellar to put some coal on the stove, and the flames, shooting into her face, burnt her badly, and if she had not had her glasses on would have burned her eyes.

Union services are being held in the Baptist churches in New Market this week. They are being held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Miss Ethel Jamison presided at the organ in the Methodist church Sunday morning in place of the regular organist, who was absent.

Joseph Lake and sister, of Somerville, were entertained Monday by Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Gray.

Peter Winfelt, of Adam Dealaman's store, has been visiting relatives in Oxford Furnace, N. J.

Albert Apgar spent Monday with his brother, Charles Apgar, of Westfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Naylor are visiting their parents here.

Mrs. C. M. Bowyer is spending the winter in Beverly, N. J.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, January 4—It was a unique gathering that assembled in the parlors of the Baptist church last evening to bid goodbye to Mr. and Mrs. Braker before they left for their new field of work in Waltham, Mass. Unique, because it combined sadness and joy—sadness because of the church's loss, and joy because of the recognition by a larger field of the work done by Mr. Braker as pastor of the Scotch Plains church. Addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, of Plainfield; Mr. Crausse, of Cranford, representing the Union County Sunday-school Association, of which Mr. Braker was president, and Prof. John R. Morey representing the public school. All paid glowing tribute to Mr. Braker as a minister and as a citizen. Dr. F. W. Westcott, on behalf of the church, then presented Mr. Braker with a set of resolutions handsomely engrossed, unanimously adopted by the church at the church meeting when his resignation was accepted. A. D. Beekon, on behalf of the trustees, presented another from the board of trustees, and last, but not least, George E. Hall presented a purse of gold to Mr. Braker as a gift from the church and congregation. Mrs. Braker was remembered with a check for about $50. Mr. Braker starts for his new field Thursday, while Mrs. Braker will remain in town with some friends for a few days.

The Saturday Night Club, of Fanwood, held its usual New Year's Eve gathering in the Firehouse Saturday evening. Each member was supposed to provide a gift for some favored one, and the distribution of the presents afforded no little amusement as they were more funny than useful.

The annual election for chief, first and second assistants was held by the fire companies in their rooms last evening. Charles Frentz was elected chief; Henry Cook, first assistant, and W. R. Buckley, second assistant.

Charles Reick, who has been suffering from throat trouble for some time, has been taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, for treatment.

Miss Nancy Wade, who has been spending the holidays with her parents, has returned to her home at Mawah, this State.

Miss Emma Adams, who has been visiting at her home in Middletown, N. Y., has returned.

News in Short Paragraphs That are Interesting to Read During the Spare Moments of Many Busy Plainfielders.

—Begin the new year right by using A. L. Kaerth's & Co's. extracts.

—Special meetings will be held in the First Baptist church every evening week except Saturday.

—Collector James Martin was kept busy all day Monday with business associated with the work of the Martin Act Commissioners.

—Next Friday afternoon from 2 until 5 o'clock the members of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will meet.

—The subjects for the meetings to be held in the Congregational church, during the week of prayer, are as follows: Wednesday, "Christ the Saviour"; Thursday, "Christ the Intercessor"; Friday, "Christ for the World."

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Every bottle guaranteed.

WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 4—The new officers of Central Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., are: Councilor, Martin H. Pickell; vice-councilor, John Winslow; assistant recording secretary, George A. Clark; warden, Ross Edwards; conductor, Harry Winslow; inside sentinel, John Dingee; representative to State convention, Edwin S. Wall; representative to Funeral Benefit Association of New Jersey, John Winslow; representative to United States Funeral Benefit Association, John S. Winslow; trustee, Frank W. Wells. They will be installed Friday evening.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Baptist church will hold a business session, followed by a sociable, at the home of Mrs. Rea on Westfield avenue Monday evening.

WASHINGTONVILLE.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

A strawride party chaperoned by Harry Ackor and James Walker went to Summit last Monday evening and called on their friend, Elmer Compton. Sam. Frazee was taken along and before the young people returned they enjoyed a jolly dance.

Miss Rosa Bartell has returned from Jersey City, where she has been spending the holiday season.

The ice in the various ponds in this vicinity has now reached a thickness of nine inches.

Ephraim Ackor's new house is rapidly nearing completion.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

GRILL MOORGHI, OR SUDDEN DEATH.

Travelers in Hindoostan Are Greeted in a Most Vociferous Manner.

An Indian officer in telling of his experiences in Hindoostan has a great deal to say in regard to cookery. The standard dish there is grill moorghi, or "sudden death." It recalls, in its earlier stages, the old-fashioned Long Island summer boarding houses. At these the arrival of a sojourner was greeted with the yells of the proprietor and his family and the shrieks of fowl, in pursuit of which all except the bed-ridden members of the household took part preparatory to serving the bird at dinner. The same thing occurs in Hindoostan when a traveller reaches a wayside rest house. His approach is announced by human shouts, barking dogs, and cackling fowl, the last leading the others a hot chase in ditches, through hedges, and over the roofs of bungalows. The bird when captured is promptly transformed into grill moorghi, which is made as follows: Open a fowl through the back, cut off the legs at the first joint, wash well in water, lay the bird spread out on a flat board and beat hard with a rolling pin. Put two ounces of butter with some shreds of onions into a frying pan, place it on a red-hot fire till the grease begins to crackle, then put in the fowl, turning it occasionally; remove to a hot dish, sprinkle with the fried onions, and dust with pepper and salt.—New York Sun.

Why a Chameleon Changes Color.

Until recently no one has understood the process by which the little lizard effects his changes. Now it is known.

Certain colors through the medium of the optic nerve produce a contraction or expansion of the pigment or color cells. The result is a protective tint or one which resembles that upon which the animal is resting. The eye receives the stimulus or impression, which passes from the optic nerve to the sympathetic nerve, so reaching the various series of the lizard's little color cells under the skin.

The pigment cells are distributed all over the body with more or less regularity, and upon their contraction and expansion depends the prevailing color of the animal.

The scientist discovered this by blindfolding a lizard, and found that when it couldn't see the color of the surrounding foliage it ceased to change its own color.

A Doubtful Compliment.

During the Prince of Wales's journey through the provinces thirty-seven years ago, a large number of petitions and addresses of welcome were presented to him from every class and society. One address sent by the lumbermen and raftsmen of the Ottawa Valley concluded with the words: "Long may you remain Prince of Wales!"

This very doubtful compliment was no slip of the pen, for when the foreman of the raftsmen was questioned on the subject, he declared that the address meant exactly what it said:

"We are perfectly satisfied with the queen, and want her to remain on the throne as long as she can."—Youth's Companion.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on L. W. Randolph, Druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c. and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

HITS WOMAN'S CLUBS.

BUT IT WAS ONE OF HER OWN SEX WHO DID IT.

She Says Members Are to Blame for Inaccurate Reports and Cites Cases in Point—A Breezy Paper by a Woman Reporter—No Sympathy With Theories.

The address given by Mrs. Josephine Woodward before the Ohio Federation of Woman's Clubs has aroused considerable interest throughout the country. Mrs. Woodward is on the staff of "The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune," and her subject was "Women's Clubs from a Reporter's Standpoint." She said in part:

"Newspapers lie so much—you all say we do; we all know that we do—that the prospect of being permitted to speak the truth for twenty minues looms up before me with all the seductiveness of a wild dissipation—a mad orgy—a debauch. I shall revel for a few moments and then hereafter I shall know whether you mean what you say, when you wish from the bottom of your hearts that newspaper reports could be depended upon.

"I would like to call your attention to the fact that the title of my paper is "Woman's Clubs from a Reporter's Point of View"—not the reporters'. I don't wish to interfere with the influence of my sisters of the press by making them in any measure responsible for my own opinions. I will only use one prop for support—the expressed belief that the Cincinnati clubwomen, to whom I am indebted for so many courtesies, but more than everything else, whose friendships I enjoy—will at least guarantee that malice has no place in my heart. I m only a poor, stupid fool who believes in the doctrines of laziness and the religion of happiness, and who believes that the greatest success in life is to love everybody worth loving, and to have everybody worth being loved love you, who believes that it is better to eat a piece of your cake every single day of your life than to save it up until the end of the year and find it stale—only a poor, weak-minded person who would rather be pleasant than president—even of a woman's club.

"Don't mind what I say, and particularly when I say that newspapers do lie shockingly and never more so than about woman's clubs. Once a long time ago before clubwomen had taught me how to lie cheerfully and glibly, and before I had taught myself the value of silence, I undertook to give in print a true report of some club proceeding or other. I have never tried it since. The truth crushed to earth that day now rises for the first time. Since that tragic day when I was led from the path of truth and duty by a clubwoman, I have made it a practice in reporting club proceedings to simply find out what the president of the club or the chairman of the department would like to have said, and then say it. It simplifies matters immensely.

MRS. JOSEPHINE WOODWARD.

"The club reporter is apt to incline to the belief that women's clubs take themselves too seriously. The difference between women's clubs and men's clubs is that men's clubs were never intended to be serious, but have always been taken seriously by women, while women's clubs are serious, but have never been taken seriously by men. Most women's club meetings are like most American dinners and afternoon teas and offer set pieces of our social system—absolutely lacking in a certain quality of gay, good-humored daring and full of a conventionalism that is both material and dull. You find chairmen of departments of sociology and municipal government presiding as if they were serving little cakes and weak tea. The club reporter has to do something every single day of her life, and so she must be excused if it sometimes seems to her that the clubs are satisfied with infinite nothings—that they miss opportunities that the members fritter conversation, and stare superciliously at all expressions of original thought. The club circle doesn't always seem to her so broad and voluminous as it does to you; but as I said before, there may be something wrong with her eyes.

"To confess the whole truth, the object of women's clubs bewilder me, and their solemnity appalls me, and I don't know why they want me to tell so many fibs about them. I have been reporting club meetings for four years, and I am tired of hearing reviews of books I was brought up on. I am tired of amateur performers at occasions announced to be for purposes either of enjoyment or improvement. I am tired of suffering under the pretence of acquiring culture. I am tired of hearing the word 'culture' used so lavishly. Culture seems to me like the nut which sheds its burr. I am tired of the essays that let no guilty author escape quotation. I have been unhappy over the spectacle of celebrities—men of genius—converted into club women while being entertained as guests of honor. You must pardon a club reporter if she hasn't much sympathy with theories; she has to practice so much, and she is often so tired that she cannot understand how anybody can even contemplate the doing of anything that involves labor not absolutely necessary to the support of life. She may be pardoned if she sometimes wonders why you havn't learned the restfulness of silence, and, paradoxical though it may seem, why you don't more quickly learn the value of open discussion; if she wonders why you are afraid of each other and why you are so seldom gay; if she sometimes thinks that you glory in achievement without any regard to the value of the achievement.

"But whether I have been able to discover women happier, honester or more content, or better cooks or more agreeable companions to their families and friends, I will concede that I have watched the evolution of the timid, shrinking woman, who had been snubbed at first by her father and brothers and later by her husband, and have rejoiced to see her spread her wings and soar in the sky of appreciation; and I have watched the involution of the woman accustomed to the flattery of an over-fond mother and foolish sisters, and have rejoiced to see her get the dust rubbed off her wings—for is was artificial dust; not the real black and gold and pink. But I have not been permitted to tell about her."

SHE DARNED HIS SOCKS.

But the Omipresent Mother-in-Law Had a Hand in It.

The wedding day of this young couple was far enough in the distance to show a decided linear perspective, and the husband had come to know his wife sufficiently well to feel that, though she might be a very good little wife, she was not the wingless angel he had at first supposed her.

"Jennie," he said one day, coming into the parlor, where the little wife was warbling a love song at the piano, and exhibiting an altogether care-free enjoyment of life which grated upon the feelings at that moment. "Jennie," he repeated, "there's a hole in one of my socks, and I don't believe that you mended them at all." "No?" queried Jennie in an enigmatical tone and continued her music apparently without further thought upon the subject. But inwardly she was angry, and very angry.

"I'll let him know whether I mend his socks or not," she said to herself the next morning, the insult still rankling, though she had kissed her husband good-bye with wifely affection. Then she put on her hat and coat and hied herself to the nearest dry-goods shop, and there she purchased a goodly quality of bright, scarlet darning cotton. "I won't miss a hole, either," she murmured to herself, vindictively, as she sat down that afternoon to attend to the small family mending. She didn't. If there was a suspicion of a break in a thread it was a sufficient excuse to put in a stitch of the bright scarlet. "His feet'll look just like a pair of parokets," she said, smiling wickedly as she completed her task.

Whether the young husband had not an eye for color, or whether his conscience smote him for his former harshness will never be known, for he never said a word concerning this bright embroidery on his hosiery, and it might have been continued indefinitely if his mother-in-law had not made her appearance on the scene.

"Is it possible, Jennie," she said in grieved tones "that after all the instructions I have given you, and all my efforts to make you a good housekeeper you should go and darn your husband's socks with red cotton? Give them to me. That must be all taken out and they must be darned over again, each with the color of the sock." Mamma-in-law heaved a deep sigh as she sat down to her self-imposed task, while her daughter with a wicked twinkle in her eyes went to the piano and began to sing carelessly the chorus of an old song: "And Adam, the very first man the very first woman obeyed."—New York Times.

A certain man made a display of dense ignorance the other day when he went into a restaurant and asked the waiter if he had any eggs. "Yes," said the waiter, "we have." "Well, bring me some." "How do you want them cooked?" "Oh, any old way." "My dear man," said the waiter, "that order will hardly do. We have over 500 different ways of cooking eggs, and you will be pleased to make a suggestion or mention a choice." This astonishing fact had the effect of paralyzing the customer's tongue for a while, and he finally recovered enough to whisper in awe, "Scramble 'em." "Yes, sir," replied the astute waiter, still lingering, "which way?" "Oh, any old way." "Sir," said the waiter in a determined way, "I must insist you will make a choice—there are seventy different ways of scrambling eggs in this establishment." "Well, then, fry them for me." "Which way? We have forty ways of frying eggs here?" "All right," said the customer slowly as he reached for his hat and arose, "you have one way here that I can find myself, and that is straight out of that door. Good-day.—Philadelphia Record.

New Use for Glass.

The latest use for glass is instead of gold as a material for stopping decayed teeth. It answers splendidly and is far less conspicuous than the yellow metal. Of course it is not ordinary glass, but is prepared by some new patent process, which renders it soft and malleable. Glass, too, is being extensively used for church bells. It can be toughened so that there is no risk of it cracking, and the tone is said to be beyond anything yet invented, perfect, soft and sonorous.—

Local-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Der Buchdruckereibesitzer Tintner verständigte die Bezirksvorstände von Margarethen und Wieden, daß er anläßlich des Kaiserjubiläums Armenstiftungen von je 50,000 Gulden errichtet habe. Die Familie widerrief die Stiftungen, da Tintner nur 80,000 Gulden Vermögen besitzt, und schickte den offenbar unzurechnungsfähigen Stifter auf's Land.—Ein mit Hagelschlag verbundener Gewittersturm hat hier dieser Tage großen Schaden angerichtet.

Agram. Der vielgenannte Lieutenant Mattasiez Keglevich wurde zu sechs Jahren Festungshaft verurtheilt wegen Wechselfälschung im Betrage von einer halben Million auf den Namen der Prinzessin von Koburg.

Böhmisch-Kubitzen. Hier hat, wie czechische Blätter frohlockend melden, der letzte Deutsche den Ort verlassen. Dieser letzte Deutsche war ein Schmied, der an der Straße ein kleines Häuschen besaß und es nun einem Czechen verkaufte und auswanderte.

Innsbruck. Der Tiroler Landesausschuß gibt alljährlich Prämien für im Lande Tirol getödtete giftige Schlangen, deren Köpfe an ihn eingeschickt werden. In 1898 betrug die Zahl der eingesandten Köpfe 955; 395 Schlangen waren giftig; davon entfielen 566 auf den italienischen, 129 auf den deutschen Landestheil. An Prämien wurden hierfür 208 Gulden 50 Kreuzer ausbezahlt.

Lemberg. In der Gemeinde Horodyszcze-Cetnarskie überfiel eine Anzahl Bauern des Ortes das Ortswirthshaus, zertrümmerte Fenster, Thüren und Möbel und raubte Branntwein und einen Geldbetrag von 80 Gulden. Dann drangen die Bauern auf fünf Juden ein und schlugen sie. Die Gendarmerie stellte die Ordnung wieder her und verhaftete acht der Excedenten.

Schöllnitz. Die Bäuerin Katharina Franneck begab sich kürzlich nach einer Brünner Advokaturskanzlei, um sich dort ein Gesuch an den Kaiser um Verleihung einer Unterstützung verfassen zu lassen, in welchem darauf hingewiesen wird, daß sie in einem Zeitraume von 20 Jahren 21 Kindern das Leben geschenkt hat. Zweimal kam sie sogar mit Zwillingen nieder.

Schweiz.

Bern. Die Vorstände der Verkehrsvereine des Berner Oberlandes und der Städte Bern und Biel haben ein Gesuch an den Großen Rath des Kantons Bern beschlossen um Ausrichtung einer jährlichen Subvention von 30,000 Francs für die Propaganda im Ausland zur Hebung des Fremdenverkehrs gegenüber der überaus thätigen auswärtigen Konkurrenz.—Durch Abstürzen in den Schweizer Bergen haben diesen Sommer 16 Personen den Tod gefunden.

Zürich. Seit der Abbüßung der gegen ihn wegen Gotteslästerung („Das Liebeskonzil") verhängten Strafe weilte der frühere bayerische Militärarzt und jetzige Schriftsteller Dr. Oskar Panizza in Zürich. Er hatte jedoch keine giltigen Papiere, weshalb ihm der Aufenthalt hier nur auf Widerruf gestattet war. Die Behörde scheint nun Anlaß gehabt zu haben, die gewährte Aufenthaltsbewilligung zurückzuziehen. Panizza wurde nämlich aus dem Gebiete des Kantons Zürich ausgewiesen.

Uri. In Seelisberg wurden letzter Tage noch prachtvoll blühende Alpenrosen gepflückt. Aus Bristen wird ebenfalls das Vorkommen vollblühender Alpenrosen berichtet.

Wallis. Der Beginn der Tunnelarbeiten am Simplon hat eine Unzahl italienischer Arbeiter nach Brieg und dem gegenüberliegenden Naters geführt, welch' letzteres namentlich schon halb „italienisirt" erscheint. Die Polizei der beiden Orte wäre irgend welchen stärkeren Ausschreitungen der italienischen Arbeiter gegenüber, die sich nicht gerade durch Friedliebe auszeichnen, so gut wie machtlos und der Staatsrath des Kantons Wallis hat deshalb beschlossen, aus den Wehrpflichtigen der Umgegend von Brieg und Naters eine eigene Sicherheitswache zur allenfallsigen Unterstützung der Polizeiorgane zu bilden.

"How does fright affect you? It always makes me cold all over, and shivery, like water down one's back, you know."

"You just do!" corroborated another of the pretty conclave round the fire, with a laugh. "I never heard anything like it; when that tramp we met yesterday in the avenue at dusk suddenly addressed us, you made the welkin ring, and pinched my arm black and blue, until I made you understand the wretched creature had only asked his way."

There was the usual desultory chat and exchange of confidences, between mouthfuls of muffin, concerning alarms past, present and future, when a handsome woman with mischievous eyes, who had not hitherto spoken, exclaimed,—

"Were none of you girls ever struck dumb with fright?"

"What a question?" they chorused. "Why, Mrs. Treherne, were you ever taken like that?"

"On one memorable occasion," was the reply, while a comical expression settled about the corners of a mouth which Venus herself might have envied for its outlines, "I lost the entire faculty of speech during fully ten minutes. I was struck dumb, and only found my tongue too late to be of any use."

The speaker looked across at her hostess. She was met by an amused air of incredulity.

"Let us hear the story, Kitty. I can't believe in your being frightened; but unbosom yourself, dear. I intend keeping you until the men come in to introduce my brother, so you've plenty of time."

Amid murmurs of excited anticipation Mrs. Treherne began,—

"It was an evening like this—dark and dreary, with a thick, white fog. But I'd better go back to the beginning, or you won't understand. We were living in Highfordshire during the last years of my husband's lifetime, and my dream was to become an artist. I'm sorry to say it has never been realized.

"There was even at that time a school of painting near us at Treeleigh, and I soon found a lady artist willing to teach me the rudiments. A drawback to complete happiness in my newly-adopted vocation was the distance between our house and this woman's studio, for Mr. Treherne, much as he disliked my painting craze, as he called it, objected to my being alone about the roads still more; and I must admit they were uncommonly dark at times. I may add also"—and the droll look crept up to her eyes—"he had two special bugbears. These were the artists and the models.

"He declared they were all scamps, and that, if I escaped from the artifices of the one, I should sooner or later be garotted by the other. The male sex he more particularly referred to, but I must confess he had no very high opinion of the women, either.

"Therefore, much as he hated his horses being out at night, he insisted on sending the carriage for me in all weathers, and I firmly believe the coachman had orders to give a receipt for my person every evening.

"Whether the presence of a good-looking young fellow who used to go about with one of the artists, and whose, no doubt well intentioned glances my husband had surprised in church contributed at all to this frame of mind, I never knew. But I had my suspicions, although, as a matter of fact, I never as much as spoke to the man, or heard his name.

"One day in the winter, I had been working in the life class till after five, and owing to a dense fog the carriage was late. I suppose I ought to have waited for it, but the tempter in the shape of a girl friend persuaded me to take tea in her rooms. Nor am I quite clear if directions were left at the studio to enable the carriage to find me.

"I dare say you imagine the party included men. If you do, you are wrong. Whatever Mr. Treherne thought, morals were very strict, I can tell you, in Treeleigh.

"We were half a dozen girl students of whom one played divinely on the 'cello, and it must have been quite an hour later before I started, my bodyguard not having turned up, to trudge home in the mud alone.

"I have said that the roads could be very dark, but I never knew them so bad as they were on this particular evening. Lamps were few, even in the village, and the fog obscured such as there were. I felt very sorry for myself on leaving the comparative illumination of the street for the utter blackness of the lonely road that lay between me and home.

"I wondered where the brougham could be, and for once missed its comfortable cushions, and the inspiriting presence of our fat coachman. The fog penetrated eyes, nose and ears. It blinded me and made me cough.

"With difficulty, by aid of my umbrella and the palings, I was able to keep upon the apology for a sidewalk, though in places I literally had to crawl along as best I could.

"Just at first there were people about, grown large and indistinguishable in the mist. A boy passed me whistling a popular air. I envied him his courage, and would have liked to imitate it. He passed on, and I felt more lonely than ever. The tree trunks loomed like huge phantoms in the murky stillness, and the whole world seemed dead.

"Then I remembered an encampment of gypsies, of whom some had posed as models, and nearly all had been up before my husband in his capacity as magistrate, during the past month. Supposing one of them had noticed my watch or rings during a sitting? The thought was appalling.

"Footsteps behind me made my heart jump into my mouth, but they died away in the distance. I shuddered, stepped in a puddle up to my ankles, and, had I been a man and not so frightened, should undoubtedly have used bad language.

"I had reached a hollow, the very darkest part of the road where the fog lay thickest, when all at once I was conscious of a presence beside me. It was exactly as if the very mist had taken shape and put its arm round my waist. The shock was so sudden that, for an instant, I felt as if struck by a dagger. My tongue clave to the roof of my mouth, and how I didn't faint on the spot has always been a mystery to me.

"The spirit of the fog, or the highwayman, kept a firm hold on me, but did not change the direction of my foot steps. When the first intense fright gave place to a sort of semi-consciousness, I found myself being guided in a fashion which gave me to understand that the ghost, gypsy or garotter, whichever it might be, at least knew the road. I no longer stepped into puddles, or scratched my hands in the hedges, but was assisted along, apparently without an effort.

"Why I did not cry out is the inexplicable thing. It was doubtless that first shock which had paralyzed my tongue, yet I was being taken to some lonely spot, there, I presumed, to be robbed or murdered, or both, by one whom I could recognize only as a blurred shape, if indeed it was of this world at all.

"And all this while terror kept me dumb, while the thing neither relinquished nor tightened its grasp, so far not a rough one, but held on the even tenor of its way up the hill which, unless fright had sent my wits wool-gathering altogether, should lead, I knew, to our own avenue.

"Of course I was fully aware that some terrible design was in the mind of my ghostly companion, and feared lest every moment should be my last. Still with life there was hope, though I specially dreaded the by-lane which branched off toward the gypsy encampment, and which we must pass directly.

"Then a new, strange feeling crept over me. I was dreamily conscious of leaning heavily on the garrotter's arm and finding it a strong one, wondering at the same time if this awful experience was the punishment of my disobedience. How fervently I vowed that if I got safely out of this scrape, nothing on earth would ever again tempt me to risk my life after dark among the lanes of Treeleigh.

"Suddenly we stopped. I gasped, still mute as a fish, and shut my eyes tight. Already, in anticipation, I felt the murderous knife at my throat, the robber's hand rifling my dead body. The arm around me perceptibly tightened its grip; my heart stopped beating, when a deep, musical voice whispered in my ear,—

"There really are footpads about, but you have no reason to be frightened. All I want from you is one kiss to last me my lifetime."

"Before I could recover my senses the highwayman had pressed his lips to my cheek. The spell was broken, I opened my eyes with a piercing shriek. But he had vanished as silently and adroitly as he had come. All I saw was the indistinct light of a lantern as our lodge-keeper opened the gate and hastened toward me.

"In a dazed kind of way I reached the house without further adventure. Who my assailant had been I never knew. I assumed him to be a gypsy impertinently retaliating on me for some of Mr. Treherne's judgments. The voice was one I had never heard before, but so remarkable was its low and peculiar quality, that I should recognize it again among thousands. I may add that my husband was so vexed at my missing the carriage, which had returned without me, and also at my making a show of myself by shrieking outside our own gate, that I had to give up the school and my artistic dreams forever."

The door opened, and following the host, there entered a tall, good-looking, sunburned man of about thirty-five.

Mrs. Treherne, still immersed in her reminiscences, was gazing at the fire, when her hostess' voice aroused her,—

"Kitty, here is my brother, who is dying to be introduced to you. He has only just returned from South Africa, where he has been ever since he left Treeleigh many years ago."

Mrs. Treherne looked up with the half-interested air of a woman to whom a stranger has just been presented. She held out her hand.

"Indeed," she said, carelessly; do you also know that little artist colony? We were just mentioning it."

"I thought no one ever remembered Treeleigh but me, Mrs. Treherne. Ten years ago I carried away from there a memory that will last my lifetime."

This remark, innocent enough in itself, was uttered in a particularly deep musical voice. Something quite unusual in its timbre arrested the attention of everybody present, who, as if impelled by a common impulse, looked across at Mrs. Treherne, and it must be admitted that that lady gave abundant cause for curiosity. At the first sound of the new comer's voice she started violently, and stared at the owner thereof with an expression of mute dismay. She made an effort to speak, but without success, and falling back in her chair, covered her face with her hands.

For an instant there was silence, then came a burst of laughter.

"The Phantom of the Mist!" they cried.

BABY'S CAT.

Want to see me, boy, old chap?
Want to curl up in my lap—
Do yer Jim?
See him sit and purr and blink,
Don't yer bet he knows I think
Lots of him?

Little kitten, nothin' more,
When we found him at the door,
In the cold.
And the baby, half undressed,
Picked him up, and he was jest
All she'd hold.

Put him up for me to see,
And she says, so cute, says she,
"Baby's cat."
And we never had the heart
For to keep them two apart
After that.

Seems if I must hear the beat
Of her toddling little feet,
Round about;
Seems to see her tucked in bed,
With the kitten's furry head
Peekin' out.

Seem if I could hear her say,
In the cunnin' baby way
That she had:
"Say goo night to Jimmie, do,
Cos if oo fordetted up
He'd feel bad."

Miss her dreadful' don't we, boy?
Day don't seem to bring no joy
With the dawn;
Looks 's night was everywhere,
But there' glory over there
Where she's gone.

Seems as if my heart would break,
But I love yer for her sake,
Don't I, Jim?
See him sit and purr and blink;
Don't yer bet he knows I think
Lots of him?

—Joe Lincoln, in Good Roads.

A BROKEN CHAIR.

There he stood a moment between two doors which faced each other, gazed longingly on that on the left, took out his key said opened that on the right; turned once more toward the door on the left, heaved a deep sigh and slowly entered the room on the right.

Once inside, he removed his coat, donned a smoking-jacket, placed a chair near the wall, took his favorite position astride it and, leaning over, applied his ear to the partition, evidently anxious to hear from the other side. Then he lighted a cigarette and watched the smoke as he blew it into fanciful shapes toward the ceiling.

He had already smoked several cigarettes and repeated the listening operation many times when his face, dark until now, suddenly brightened. He could hear some one moving. "She is in!"

A clatter of knives and crockery was now heard.

"She is getting her dinner!"

And leaning still farther forward he strove to catch every move of his unconscious neighbor.

Never seeing her he still felt happy to feel that she was living there so near him.

That he saw her no more was indeed a cruel fact and a cause of much grief. At one time he used to see her almost every day. He would plan accidental meetings so cleverly that they really appeared a pure favor from a kindly fate. They were the result of much scheming, no doubt, and it required a great deal of patience to bring them about. For instance, Jacques would watch for hours in front of the house to see her coming home. As soon as he caught a glimpse of her approaching form he would quickly run up the stairs, wait an instant to give her time to reach the house, then slowly go down as if chance alone brought him thus to meet her as she was climbing up to her room. Unfortunately at that important point his self-possession would always desert him. Her modest, unconcerned mien as she passed by so upset him that he would find himself bowing awkwardly, casting down his eyes and feeling like a bashful schoolboy.

After such failures he would remonstrate with himself severely, vow to be less timid next time, practise graceful bows, invent pretexts for addressing her and study subjects of conversation. But all preconcerted arrangements would tumble confusedly to the ground the moment he stood near her, and the consciousness of defeat but increased his nervousness. One day he clumsily dropped his hat and then he determined to never see her again.

"Thus," thought he, "I may at least avoid making a bad impression, as I can't make a good one."

Her name was Charlotte; he had learned that somehow, and her occupation that of a seamstress. She generally was out all day. She was a good, honest girl, to that he could swear, for he knew she often worked late into the night. How he admired the brave, beautiful girl who alone in the world had so well resisted its temptations!

He wondered when and how he began to love her! She had come to this house the year before. At first he had noticed she was pretty but for a long time had given her no further thought. Then by degrees this sentiment had entered his heart and finally possessed his whole being. How had it come? Through the walls, as it were. It is the attraction of the woman one feels living near. At night we wonder, Is she in? In the morning, Is she up? until all our thoughts are of her.

Be it as it may, Jacques had not the least doubt as to the nature of his feelings for Charlotte. Had she allowed him to speak, and admitting such a possibility, had he but had the courage to address her, his declaration would have been short and to the point:—

"Mademoiselle, I love you; will you be my wife?" would have been the speech to convey all he thought, felt and desired.

But, then, one cannot offer one's empty hand to a woman! Jacques was poor. He was a painter—one of those aspirants whose wealth is still a matter of hopes and dreams. Just at present he found no sale for his canvas and in order to pay the last quarter's rent the room had been relieved of several pieces of furniture. In fact, a bed and a chair were about its sole ornaments. Upon this chair our young artist spent his evenings, ever on the alert and interpreting every movement of the unconscious girl in the next room. The rustling of her dress, the moving of a chair, the noise of the dishes, all spoke of her occupation at that particular moment.

"She is laying the cloth—she is clearing up—she is sitting down—now she is going to sew. I wonder what she thinks of me? Does she suspect I am so near? If only she knew how I love her!"

Often he felt tempted to attract her attention, even though it were silly, but again the fear of displeasing her held him back.

"And yet she must think of me sometimes. She knows I live here. She cannot help seeing the light through my ever-gaping door. She must be a little curious, being a woman. She must notice I am always in. Perhaps I did attract her attention in spite of my blunders; on account of them, perhaps. Possibly she knows I love her and is expecting an avowal, and, seeing I dare not speak, who knows (so much may be expected of women)? She may some day drop her work, cross that landing, push open my door—which I never shut—enter my room and say: "Since you will not come I shall!" Ah! but that might be a long time coming!

Still straddling his post of observation he would ruminate on the many devices presenting themselves to his mind in order to hasten matters. To slip a note under her door? He had often thought of that, but would she read it? And supposing she did, would not the first passionate word offend her and cause her to tear up his missive in anger? To get some one to speak for him? Whom? They had no mutual friend. Decidedly none of these means were practicable and the only thing to do was to wait. How long?

* * * *

It was getting late, very late. Charlotte, still at work, began to sing to keep from falling asleep. Jacques kept time, following the rhythm by rocking himself to and fro, which went very well when the movement was slow, but when it quickened with the spirited passages of the song the game became a dangerous one and taxed the poor old chair beyond its capacity for gymnastics.

The whole modern repertory was reviewed. Now came "Faust."

"Ah, if he were here!"

"But he is there!" Jacques almost cried. In turn came selections from "Rigoletto," "Travatore," "Barber of Seville," et cetera. Hours flew by and Jacques never tired of listening to this concert. Charlotte herself must have wearied, for presently the programme altered. Romances and reveries succeeded cavatinas and operatic airs. The vibrating tones of her voice were subdued to suit the low, sweet melodies which followed her former efforts, one of the soothing effects of the change being to lull Jacques into slumber, though even in his sleep he kept alive to the music and followed every note uttered by the fair singer.

All at once Charlotte, who probably decided she must keep awake at any cost, started into a lively song, "La Valse des Roses," by Oliver Metra, one of those wildly delirious waltzes which would make the dying long for the use of their feet.

Jacques must have been dreaming and dreaming he was waltzing, for enfolding his chair he started, whirled two or three times and then both madman and chair fell to the floor with a crash. There was a dreadful commotion; the floor shook. A scream rang through the air but it did not issue from Jacques' lips.

It would have been impossible for him to utter a cry or sound. He had fallen on his face, split his forehead open and fainted.

When he came to himself, a few hours later, he was lying upon the bed, his head was bandaged and a woman sat near watching him.

"What! you here, mademoiselle?"

"Certainly, monsieur, I heard such a noise in this room last night, I feared some terrible tragedy was taking place. I came quickly and found you lying upon the floor unconscious. It is all right now; there is no danger. In a few days no trace will remain but a slight scar. But, tell me, how did you happen to fall in such an absurd manner with your chair?"

Jacques made no reply but blushed uneasily.

Women are quick in seeing a passion they inspire; Charlotte soon read Jacques' heart. They chatted quietly until breakfast time. The first step was taken. The ice broken. How easy to wait now!

They are now married and happy. Charlotte does not work by the day any more. Jacques has reached that happy state of things which comes to all who strive and his paintings are sold quite easily, bringing enough to provide for the demands of their unpretentious mode of living.

Two things have been and are still a matter of wonder and comment among their friends. On their marriage day the "Valse des Roses" was played on the organ and a conspicuous place in their drawing-room is filled by an old broken chair, so weak and rickety that Charlotte had to fasten it together with ribbons in order to make it stand.

LOVED BY THE GODS.

He was lounging in the stern of the boat, his head on the cushioned seat, and a cigarette, just removed from his lips, between his fingers. His eyes rested with affectionate admiration on the girl who finally opened her eyes with a cry of wonder.

"Goodness! Where are we, Stephen?"

"Dunno, dear," was the lazy response.

"But we're out of sight"—a little doubtfully.

"You're with me and I'm with you. Isn't that good enough?"

"No!" with a contradictory little smile.

"Come here then, and tell me what more you want."

She pulled in the oars, smoothed the sleeves of her white blouse, and rose and stepped over the low seat between them. He made room for her beside him, putting the cushion between her back and the hardedged board.

"What more do you want, Ruby?" he asked again, taking her arm and laying it around his neck. She looked into his face for a moment.

"Are you so happy, lassie?"

"Oh! far too happy, Steve."

The swell from a distant steamer reached them now in great green, oily rollers, lifting the boat with grave and gentle dignity; then followed half a dozen quick, narrow waves, swinging her jerkily from side to side. All was still again, and Ruby shut her eyes.

"Sleepy?" asked her lover.

"No; just glad, dear," So there was silence awhile. "Tell me something Stephen," she said at last.

"I love you!"

"That's nothing!" she retorted, with a flicker of her closed lashes and a stirring at the corners of her mouth.

"It's everything, darling," he answered.

"Oh well, half of everything, then," she corrected, sweetly.

He bent over her, whispering unsteadily. "Ruby, Ruby, sometimes it all seems to be true. Do you think God loves better than other people?"

"I don't know about other people, dear," she said, "but we have got all we want."

"If I were to lose you, Ruby," he began passionately, but she laid her fingers on his lips.

"You won't do that, Steve, you won't do that! Oh, laddie, laddie," she cried, giving way to her heart, "you won't ever lose me."

Later, Stephen said, "You love me best when you call me laddie."

She smiled and flushed. "I forgot," she said; "it's one of mother's words."

"It's a dear word, lassie. You must not let it get lost when we're living in London town. I'll want to hear it often."

The afternoon waned, but the warm haze increased. "The tide is flowing now," remarked Stephen, looking at his watch, "so we must be drifting comfortably into shore."

"Very slowly, I'm afraid," said the girl.

"Are you in a hurry?"

She shook her head contentedly.

"Stephen, will it always be like this?"

"Always, my dear, my dear."

A sudden sharp sound behind them made Stephen leap up. "My God!" he exclaimed, "the oars, Ruby."

A large steam yacht, with her delicate black lines and smart yellow funnel, was almost on them. Her whistle screamed excitedly, and those on board were shouting; then came the sharp ring of the telegraph signalling "full speed astern." But the small boat was doomed. Even as the yacht shifted her helm, Stephen took two rapid strokes in the same direction. "Don't hold me, Ruby," he cried, "I'll save you."

But she clung round his neck. "You won't lose me, Steve?"

There was no tremendous crash, for the yacht had been going at half speed on account of the haze, but she had sufficient way on, despite her reversed engines, to upset the frail craft. At the momen of collision Stephen caught at a rope flung to him, but missed, and, with his sweetheart's arms about him, he fell against the steamer's side and into the sea.

"Stop the engines!" yelled a man in the bows, perceiving an awful danger. The captain had observed it, too, for again the telegraph rang, and the screw came to rest. But a girl who looked over the yacht's stern gave a pitiful cry, and slipped to the deck in a dead faint.

Almost immediately a boat was in the water and two of the crew, with the owner, a burly American millionaire, sprang in and rowed astern. They had not far to go, and the silent people on the yacht saw the lovers pulled on board. It was then that the captain whispered to one of the men of the party: "Ask the ladies to go below at once, sir."

Very slowly the boat returned to the yacht, and when it neared the side the two sailors did not look up, and the American was bending down in the stern, sobbing like a child.—From Madame.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"A Daughter of the South" was the attraction offered at Music Hall last night, and was witnessed by a large and well pleased audience. The stage settings were very fine and the piece was greatly enjoyed. Several new and interesting specialties were introduced, all of which made a prominent hit. The bill for tonight will be that picturesque western drama, "My Partner." New specialties will be introduced and the orchestra will render popular selections in their excellent style. By request of those who could not gain admission to the theatre Monday last, the company will produce tomorrow night their great version of "Darkest Russia."

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

time to time, upon consideration of questions of grave importance, invited these men and others to give to the Council and its committees the benefit of their views. This matter of the proposed reorganization of the fire department impresses me as one upon which a similar course might properly be taken, and I recommend the plan for consideration to your Honorable Body.

SEWERAGE.

The recommendations of the Street Committee in its report of December 29th last, I strongly approve. Besides the obligation imposed by law upon the city to exercise a high degree of care in the management of the city's sewerage system, there is a special moral obligation resting upon the city and owing to the owners of property most contigous to the sewerage beds, and to that section of the city nearest to them and to our municipal neighbor at Dunellen, to make this public improvement as little objectionable as it possibly can be made. Such a spirit has governed the action of the city authorities up to this time and will undoubtedly continue so to do. The suit for ten thousand dollars damages brought by one of the nearby property owners against the city for alleged injuries by reason of the maintenance of the sewer beds is one of the most important suits which the city has been called upon to defend for many years, and the city's rights should be defended to the utmost, both because of the large damages claimed and the danger that if plaintiff should succeed, it would be but a signal for many other like claims against the city, and the further danger that upon recovery of several verdicts in such cases, the Court of Chancery would perhaps have power to grant injunction to prevent the further maintenance of the city's sewerage system. The city has taken a firm stand in this matter, claiming to have acted strictly in accordance with the law and to have exercised due care and skill in the performance of its duties. As suggested in the report referred to, the city should go even further than this, and if it errs at all it should err on the side of too much care.

POLICE.

I heartily approve of the wisdom of the ordinance that will become a law in a few days, whereby regular policemen of Plainfield will be given a tenure of office during good behavior, efficiency and residence in the city. The present police force is finely disciplined and has rendered most efficient service. The enactment of the ordinance giving them an independent tenure ought to, and doubtless will, stimulate them to maintain in all respects their present standing, and on the other hand no instance of willful misconduct should be permitted to pass unnoticed.

LICENSE.

Under the amendment to the liquor license ordinance approved July 12th last, those who at present hold license and who have not heretofore been convicted of violating any city ordinance or any law of the State may be granted a renewal of their present license without first presenting any recommendation of citizens or free holders. Inasmuch as the first proceedings under this ordinance will doubtless be brought before the Council early in the year, it is proper to direct your Honorable Body's attention to the fact that the granting or refusing of such an application for renewal is, by the ordinance, made expressly discretionary with the Common Council, except in case the applicant shall have heretofore been convicted of violating any city ordinance or any State law. If any applicant has been convicted as aforesaid, he cannot be granted a license under the amendment in question, but must needs make application as heretofore.

GARBAGE.

There has been presented to me a petition subscribed by many prominent citizens and tax-payers requesting that the city undertake, under a recent law, the collection and removal of garbage and ashes at the general expense. The respect due to the signers of that petition impels me to submit the matter for such action by your Honorable Body as, upon due consideration, shall be deemed wise, and the petition in question will be filed with the City Clerk.

TIME FOR PAYMENT OF TAXES.

By reason of the fact that taxes in this city do not become delinquent until the 20th of December, although payable on the first day of October, the city has been required to borrow large sums in anticipation of tax collections. Two methods of reducing the amount required to be borrowed have been suggested. The first method was to change the fiscal year, so as to make taxes payable in the spring, or, at any rate, much earlier than October 1st, and to correspondingly advance the date on which taxes should become delinquent. It would seem, however, an insurmountable objection to this plan that the terms of office of members of the Common Council would not then be coincident with the fiscal year. It would seem to be practicable, however, to make the date of delinquency a month or more earlier than at present, and I recommend adoption of an ordinance with that end in view. The other method referred to consists in providing for a slight discount upon taxes that shall be paid earlier than the date on which they become finally payable. This method is already in use in several municipalities in this State, and as is well-known, in the city of New York and elsewhere. No statute, however, has been found which authorizes such a practice in this city. The charters of several cities in this State expressly confer such power upon their respective city governments, but there is no such provision in our charter, and therefore I recommend that the Common Council petition the Legislature to pass a general law under which the benefit of such a practice may be obtained by Plainfield.

For many years, the conduct of municipal affairs in this city has received commendation from Judges and other prominent citizens throughout the State. Without doubt, the city has gained such enviable reputation not merely because of the high character of our public officials in the past, but in large measure because of the rule so constantly applied here that the Mayor and Common Council ought to be governed in their official action by the same principles which they apply in successfully conducting their own business. I stand ready to co-operate with your Honorable Body on those principles during the coming year, and invite the freest interchange of opinion in order to secure harmonious action looking to the public welfare.

George W. Rockfellow,
Mayor.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS HELD A RALLY.

AT MONROE AVENUE CHURCH.

Local Methodist Clergymen Spoke—Not Large But Enthusiastic Audience—Anniversary Ceremonies.

The celebration of the second anniversary of the formation of Monroe Avenue M. E. church was continued at that church last evening with an Epworth League rally, arranged by the League of that church. It was attended by the members from the Leagues of the First M. E. and Grace M. E. churches. While the attendance was not very large, the rally was an enthusiastic one. John J. Praed, president of the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue church, presided at the meeting.

After a devotional service in opening, a cornet solo was given by Robert Davis. The first speaker was Rev. G. W. Gardiner, pastor of the Grace M. E. church. He made a short address on the work of the League and dwelt particularly on its needs. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass spoke on what the Epworth League means and what its duties are. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell told of the many things that the Epworth Leaguers had to be thankful for, and asked them to make Christianity a business as well as a profession. Harry Gee, president of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, spoke enthusiastically on loyalty to the church and the League.

After another cornet solo by Robert Davis the meeting closed, and refreshments were served by the League of the church in which the meeting was held.

Resolutions of Condolence.

Whereas The Almighty God, in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our fellow member and citizen, Alonzo T. Ayres: and

Whereas, He has always proved himself a dutiful husband and father and a firm upholder of the principals of the Republican party;

Resolved, That while bowing in humble submission to the will of Our Creator who doth all things for the best, we express to his family our sincere sympathy in this their hour of bereavement;

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed in the Plainfield daily paily papers and a copy forwarded to the family of our late member.

THE ANTIQUITY OF ICE CREAM.

First Introduced into Paris in 1774 and Called Iced Butter.

Ice cream is an older sweetmeat than many would suppose. In the beginning of the seventeenth century goblets made of ice and also iced fruit, i. e. fruit frozen over, were first brought to table. The limonadiers, or lemonade sellers, of Paris, endeavored to increase the popularity of their wares by icing them; and one more enterprising than the rest, an Italian named Procope Couteaux, in the year 1660, conceived the idea of converting such beverages entirely into ice, and about twenty years later iced liquors, i. e., liquors changed into ice, were the principal things sold by the limonadiers. By the end of the century iced liquors were quite common in Paris. Ice cream, or iced "butter," as it was first called from its supposed resemblance to that substance, soon followed. It was first known in Paris in 1774.

The Duc de Chartris often went at that time to the Paris coffeehouses to drink a glass of iced liquor, and the landlord having one day presented him with his "arms" formed in edible ice, this kind of sweetmeat became the fashion.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Spurgeon and His Mother.

While attending the Church of England college of St. Augustine Spurgeon formed a strong conviction in favor of what was then called "holiness" baptism. During a subsequent visit to his mother the subject came under discussion between them one day and she said to him: "Ah, Charles, I often prayed the Lord to make you a Christian, but I never asked that you might become a Baptist."

"I could not," he remarked in relating the incident, "resist the temptation to reply: 'Ah, mother, the Lord has answered your prayer with his usual bounty, and given you exceedingly abundantly above what you asked or thought.'"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Shaved Cat Gave Herself Away.

A man in Paris has been making a good deal of money exhibiting a curious animal in the cafes chantant and such places. It was a very queer little animal, and the alert Parisians were willing enough to drop the petit sou for a sight of it. Still, look as they would, none could determine the creature's species. It was interesting, but it was baffling, and the exhibitor coined money. One day, however, a dog chanced to follow a curious beholder into the cafe chantant. Immediately the wondrous animal humped its back like a diminutive camel and began to hiss and spit! The mystery was solved! It was a shaved cat!—Chicago Times-Herald.

Thirty Miles for an Acorn.

Down in Mexico there lives a woodpecker who stores his nuts and acorns in the hollow stalks of the yuccas and Magueys. These hollow stalks are separated by joints into several cavities, and the sagacious bird has somehow found this out, and bores a hole at the upper end of each joint, and another at the lower, through which to extract the acorns when wanted. Then it fills up the stalks solidly, and leaves its stores there until needed, safe from the depredations of any other thievish bird or four-footed animal.—St. Nicholas.

CLEVER SIAMESE GIRLS.

The dancing girls of Siam are remarkable for the agility and grace of their movements. The cup dance is the prettiest and most poetic of all. A row of young girls, with a tier of cups on their heads, take their places in the middle of the great hall. A burst of joyous music follows. On hearing this they simultaneously, with military precision, kneel down, fold their hands and bow their heads until their foreheads almost touch the polished marble floor, keeping the cups steadily on their heads by some marvelous jerk of the neck. Then, suddenly springing to their feet, they describe a succession of rapid and intricate circles, keeping time to the music with their arms, head and feet. Next the music swells into a rapturous tumult. The dancers raise their delicate feet, curve their arms and fingers in almost impossible flexures, sway to and fro like withes of willow, agitate all the muscles of the body like the flutter of leaves in the soft evening breeze, but still keep the cups on their heads.

The dancing girls of Bangkok are always exercising in the royal gymnasium. Their ages vary from five to twenty years. The curious and subtle feat of picking up a bit of straw with the eyelids can be learned only by the youngest of them, who are made to practice it in order to render them very flexible in every part of the body. There are two long rows of benches, one a little higher than the other. On the lower is a row of little girls and on the upper bench are laid the polished bits of straw. At the sound of the drum the little girls all together bend back the head and neck until they touch the bits of straw, which, with wonderful dexterity, they secure between the corners of their eyelids.

PIONEER WOMEN IN JOURNALISM.

Of the thirty-seven newspapers in the American colonies at the time of the Revolution, several were owned and managed by women.

The first newspaper published in Rhode Island was owned and edited by Mrs. Anna Franklin, and established in 1832. She and her two daughters wrote the items and set the type, and their servants worked the printing press. For her quickness and correctness Mrs. Franklin was appointed printer to the colony, supplying pamphlets to the colonial officers. In 1772 Clementine Reed was publishing a paper in Virginia called the Virginia Gazette, favoring the colonial cause and greatly offending the Royalists; two years later Mrs. H. Boyle started a paper under the same name, advocating the cause of the Crown. Both were published at Williamsburg, and both were short lived.

In 1773 Elizabeth Timothy started a paper in Charleston, S. C. After the Revolution Anna Timothy became its editor and was appointed State printer, which position she held for seventeen years. About the same time Mary Crouch started a paper in Charlestown in vigorous opposition to the Stamp act. She afterward moved it to Salem, Mass., and continued its publication for many years.

TO GET BETTER FREE POSTAL DELIVERY.

The Various Efforts Made to Get Relief.

PRACTICAL PLAN PROPOSED

SOME VALUABLE INFORMATION AND COMPUTATIONS ON THE SUBJECT.

Former Editor T. W. Morrison Gives Reason Why Desired Relief Can Best be Obtained by Direct Application to Washington on Part of Those Interested—He Presents Case Clearly.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It is proposed to petition the Post Office authorities at Washington for additional letter carriers for North Plainfield to secure quicker delivery, and I have been requested to prepare the petition. A more direct and expeditious method, it seems to me, will be to have the matter brought to the attention of your readers and let them write to the department asking for relief from the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs. If the people generally do this who feel dissatisfied there is no doubt but that relief will be secured.

With many the grievance is one of long standing. Complaints were first made to the carriers. They said that they could not cover the route in less time and were often compelled to return to the office without completing the delivery because otherwise unable to get back within the allotted time. It is not certain that they have always, for the same reason, been able to gather up the mail from the boxes. Complaints were then made to the postmaster. He said that he could not help matters unless the department allowed him more carriers. He knew the complaints were just and had written the department stating the facts. The complaints were then made to the department direct, to assist the postmaster, the writer being among the number, and receiving a reply the substance of which was that the relief would be given.

From the tenor of the reply it was inferred that additional carriers would be provided by the first of the year, but instead there is a return to the old conditions from a temporary change made by the postmaster with a view of affording relief, which it did not do.

An inspector was sent from Washington to look over the field. He was accompanied in a cab by the postmaster and expressed astonishment at finding the city and borough so well provided with flag sidewalks and macadam streets, even on the outskirts. The department, as a rule, will not provide free delivery to localities which do not provide suitable thoroughfares for the carriers to travel over. No objection could be made on that score here for providing the extra carriers.

Next the question of the amount of mail matter was taken up. Each carrier is expected to carry twenty pounds of mail from the office at each delivery, and so far as known no unusual amount is carried here, so that nothing could be gained on this score. Then came the question of population. The carrier is expected to have two thousand people on his route. Plainfield and North Plainfield together are allowed eleven carriers which the department says is more than usually allowed, since for such a number we ought to have 22,000, while it was considered that we did not have over 20,000.

It is claimed by those presuming to know that North Plainfield has 6,000 people, and on that basis it would be entitled to three carriers where it now has but two. Accordingly, if 20,000 were correct for both localities, this would leave Plainfield but 14,000, for which it has nine carriers, when, on the population stated, it is entttled only to seven. As, however, some of the complaints have been from Plainfield, it is clear that it has no more than it needs, and that the conditions here are exceptional. It is therefore important to show wherein these conditions are exceptional, and to do this, let us look into the claims of population first.

According to the records for Plainfield, kept by Chief Doane for the Board of Underwriters, there are 2,919 buildings in Plainfield, not counting those for the erection of which permits were granted in 1898. These number 81. Counting five inhabitants to a building, according to the usual rule, Plainfield has 14,595 population, or 595 more than credited above. In North Plainfield, the Assessor's record shows 908 buildings, not counting those erected since May, 1898, of which there is no record, but which

GOV. VOORHEES' INAUGURATION.

Republican County Committee Charter a Train to Carry the Governor's Friends.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 5.—Governor-elect Foster M. Voorhees said yesterday that he had hoped there would be no demonstration on the occasion of his inauguration, but he understood that a good many of his friends were going to Trenton to make a demonstration. He said that if he had had his own way the ceremonies would be quiet and without ostentation.

The sub-committee of the Republican County Committee met last night and decided that a special train on the the Central Railroad should be chartered, and that the entire club and as many others as wish to accompany them would go to Trenton to take part in the procession January 17th. A brass band has been engaged, and each holder of a railroad ticket will be furnished with a cane and badge. It is expected that fully a thousand persons will go from Union county.

WEDDED AT DUNELLEN.

Nellie Powers Becomes the Wife of F. R. Maguire, of This City.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Jan 5.—St. John's Roman Catholic church was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday afternoon, when Miss Nellie Powers, daughter of John Powers, of Samptown, was united in marriage to F. R. Maguire, of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed at 3 o'clock by Rev. Father Bogaard, of Somerville, who also officiated at St. John's church.

The couple were attended by Miss Anna Powers, the bride's sister, and Michael J. Higgins, a friend of the groom. The bride wore cream-colored satin and carried a bunch of yellow roses. Yellow roses were in her dark hair, and many remarked upon her handsome appearance. The bridesmaid wore pink, and had roses of the same color in her hair.

At the home, after the ceremony was over, a reception was held and after that Mr. and Mrs. Maguire left for Connecticut where they will pass their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside with the bride's parents for a while.

The groom is in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway Company as conductor, which position he has held for two years. Among the guests present at the ceremony were the superintendent of the road, John H. Adelmann, and his wife, Motorman William Brown, who runs the groom's car, and also Patrick Maguire and Edward Marvin, who also work for the company. Miss Nellie Campbell, the groom's half sister, presided at the organ.

HORSE DID WHAT DONS COULDN'T.

W. F. Ford Had His Leg Broken After Going Through Cuban War.

William F. Ford, the well-known newspaper man of this city, who served in the Regular Artillery through the Cuban campaign, is laid up in the Post Hospital at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., with a broken leg.

He was one of the survivors of Capron's Battery and escaped all injury until several days ago, when, while on mounted drill some of the horses fell and kicked. Ford was riding at a hot pace and was kicked just below the knee. He managed to retain his saddle until the Battery halted, then surprised his officers by announcing in an off hand way that his leg was broken and he wished to be relieved.

He was taken to the hospital where Major Appall and Major Ramsay treated him.

Miss Boice Not to Blame.

Miss Ella Boice, of Dunellen, who was one of those who had charge of the entertainment given at the above place last Monday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Orchestra, desires The Daily Press to state that it was through no fault of hers that the promised trolley car was not on hand at 12:40 o'clock that night to bring the Plainfield people home. The fault, she says, is with some of the trolley people.

ROSE SEGAL NOT THERE.

SHE FAILED TO APPEAR IN JUSTICE COLLINS' COURT IN WESTFIELD.

Louis Norton, Who Helped to Take Her From Dr. Reiner's House in Elizabeth Held for the Grand Jury.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 5—Louis Norton, of Newark, appeared before Judge E. R. Collins yesterday afternoon and furnished bail to appear when wanted by the Grand Jury. Mr. Norton was arrested on complaint of Dr. J. M. Reiner, who charged him with being one of the party who accompanied Rabbi Segal on the night of December 13, 1898, when the party entered his house and misused the members of his family and Miss Rose Segal. Mr. Norton waived a hearing and Charles Silverstein, of Elizabeth, who is also bondsman for Rabbi Segal, furnished his bond for $500. While the bond was being signed the Judge turned to Lawyer Schleimer, who represents both Dr. Reiner and Miss Segal, and asked where the young lady was, saying that he wanted her in court when the other cases came up. The lawyer answered that he didn't know her whereabouts, but if he did he would have her present. At this Mr. Norton said: "If she was here I'd show you what I'd do with her." This brought a reply from the lawyer and for a while it looked as if there would be an assault, as Norton threatened to knock the other's head off with his umbrella.

SWELL COLORED WEDDING SEEN IN REFORM HALL

COUPLE HAD MANY FRIENDS THERE.

Rev. Scott Wallace Performed the Ceremony—Members of the Wedding Party.

A very swell wedding in colored society was witnessed last evening at 8:30 o'clock in Reform Hall, when Miss Catherine Wicks, of West Fourth street, was united in marriage to Richard A. Miller, of Netherwood, who is coachman for Howard Runyon, of Rahway road. The event was attended by a large number of people, including many white persons.

The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with lace. She carried bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Wicks, and Miss Cornelia Jenkins, as bridemaids, while Willard Johnson, of this city, performed the duties of best man. Miss Jenkins wore a very pretty silk gown of a pink shade, with all the necessary trimmings, while Miss Wicks was dressed in a delicate shade of blue silk. The wedding march was played by Miss Laura Smith. During the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, Miss Smith played the organ softly.

The bridal party retired to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Jeter, West Fourth street, where a reception was held for their many friends. The gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Miller were both useful and pretty. They will reside at the home of Mrs. Jeter for the present.

Special Officer Edward Martin at the depot had a hard fight this morning to prevent a woman passenger from boarding a moving train and being thrown under the wheels. The woman alighted from the 9:54 train and hurried into the depot to purchase a ticket. While she was inside the train started, but rushing out the woman ran down the track to catch it.

Martin took hold of her and held her back, but she fought hard to get loose and broke away from him. Again he caught her and this time held her until the train stopped and she could get on.

Cut Her Hand on Broken Glass.

Mrs. Zeller, wife of Theodore Zeller, of Somerset street, cut her hand yesterday quite badly with a piece of broken glass. Mr. Zeller hastened for Dr. Zeglio, but he being out he secured the service of Dr. Pittis, of Somerset street, who gave proper treatment. Mrs. Zeller lost considerable blood from the laceration, but no serious results are feared.

TIGHTENED ITS GRIP ON SECOND PLACE

Park Club Won Three Games Last Night.

DEFEATED NEWARK BAY.

Three Games in Central Journal Bowling League Rolled on Park Club Alleys—No Very Startling High Scores Made—Hibbard Did Star Work for Parks—The Individual Scores Made.

The grasp of the Park Club upon second place in the Central Journal Bowling League was considerably strengthened last evening when the Park bowlers captured three straight victories from the Newark Bay C. C. The games were rolled on the Park Club alleys.

The first game showed the Parks in the lead at the start. They lost it by four pins in the sixth frame only to gain it in the next and win out by 56 pins. The next game showed a rather easy thing for the Parks. They rolled well, while the visitors were in deplorable form. The last game was the closest of the three. The Parks opened with the lead and held it, but toward the close the Newark Bay men braced up and made things lively. The wind-up was positively soul-stirring. Ball closed with two strikes and nine, while Davies, his opponent, rolled three strikes. It was nip and tuck all down the line. When Bodine, the last on the visiting team came up, he had a chance to win the game. Eleven pins would tie the score and twelve would win. He rolled a good straight ball and got a split. He took eight on the first ball, but the remaining pins were too far separated and only one went down on the second ball, giving the Parks the game by just two pins.

Hibbard did the star work for the Parks, rolling high scores in every game. Young Boome made a good showing and Captain F. O. Ball bowled steadily, although he did not make any phenomenal scores.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.	1st.	2d.	3d.
F. H. Ball	137	138	171
Hibbard	191	180	164
Boome	161	157	139

DEATH OF JOHN FITZGERALD.

He Was a Great Sufferer—The Funeral Services Will Be Held Tomorrow.

John Fitz Gerald died early yesterday morning at his father's residence, 31 Somerset place, aged forty-eight years. Mr. Fitz Gerald was born in New York city and passed nearly all his life there and at Dobb's Ferry, taking up his residence in the borough about seven years ago.

Mr. Fitz Gerald was a silversmith by profession. Failing health long ago compelled him to retire from active business. The death of his mother, to whom he was devotedly attached, which occurred last October, has ever since been a continual source of worriment to the deceased. A great sufferer from trouble, death came as a blessing.

The funeral services will take place tomorrow at 9 a. m., at St. Joseph's R. C. church, where solemn requiem mass will be sung for the repose of his soul. Mr. Fitz Gerald was unmarried.

A PINK TEA.

Society People Entertained Pleasantly by the Mesdames Thiers.

A pink tea was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. W. J. R. Thiers and Mrs. Charles Rudolph Thiers at the home of Mrs. W. J. R. Thiers, 1405 Watchung avenue. The hostesses were assisted in receiving by Mrs. F. G. Moore.

The dining room was decorated with pink roses, and the young ladies who assisted there were Mrs. J. Powers Nolting, Mrs. Robert Huntsman, Miss Ethel Green, Miss Geneviene Daniel, Miss Bertha Willis, Miss Katherine Overton and Miss Ted Scrymser, of Staten Island.

The tea was largely attended and was a successful affair.

John Wilson, of Nowhere.

John Wilson, residence nowhere, was arrested in the borough yesterday afternoon by Chief Wilson on a charge of vagrancy. This morning the man was arraigned before Recorder Long, and as a result he will spend the next ten days in the Somerville jail.

HUNTED ON THE FARM.

BALDWINS SAY THEY HAD MANAGER CORBY'S PERMISSION.

Corby Says They Didn't and Had Them Arrested For Trespassing With Dog and Gun—Were Held for Trial.

George and Augustus Baldwin went hunting on the 26th day of last November. They admit the fact. They also admit that they went in the wood lot in the rear of the poultry farm at Warrenville. They claim they did it, however, with the full permission of Manager Corby, of the poultry farm. Yesterday afternoon they were arrested by Constable John Reimann, of Warrenville, on a warrant issued by Justice Austin, of Warrenville, and indorsed by Justice Moffett.

The Baldwins are charged with trespassing with dog and gun on the day mentioned, and with doing so against the direct orders of Corby who made the complaint that resulted in the warrants. They appeared before Justice Moffett who held each in $50 bail for appearance before Justice Austin Tuesday next. Harry Baldwin furnished bail. They were represented by E. J. Blatz, of Murphy & Blatz.

The Baldwins claim that on a previous day they had been told by Corby that they might hunt in the wood lot, but not on the open fields of the farm. They followed his injunctions, they say, and had no intention of trespassing without his permission.

ALL BUT $10 OF GAME LAW $60 FINE RETURNED.

J. H. GREEN VINDICATED AT LAST.

He Shot Rabbits Legally in New York but Brought Them Into New Jersey Before Open Season.

Another echo of the hunting trip of J. H. Green, Jr., of Verdon avenue, was heard several evenings ago at the home of Mr. Green. It will be remembered that he was fined $60 for bringing game shot in New York State into New Jersey. When the State Game Warden learned the circumstances of the case he immediately refunded the $20, his share of the fine. Game Warden Sebring did the same with the $40 he received.

On this occasion, Albert Runyon, secretary of the local game protective association, and Andrew Lutkins called on Mr. Green. They returned the $10 the amount received by Mr. Lutkins as his share of the fine. The remaining $10 Game Warden Sebring said he could not collect. Mr. Lutkins offered to pay it out of his own pocket for he said that although he was not a party to the complaint, he felt in a measure responsible from the fact that he accompanied Percy Ohl when he came to Green's house to see the game. Mr. Green refused to accept under those circumstances.

As Mr. Ohl has stated that he does not believe that the fine should be returned, the incident is now probably concluded and Mr. Green has received back $50 out of the $60 he paid as a fine.

JUSTICES TO ORGANIZE.

Jersey Dogberries Will Get Together for Mutual Purposes.

A movement is on foot here among the justices of the peace and the constables of Union county to form an organization for mutual benefit just as has been done in Pennsylvania. A communication has been received from Justice of the Peace Martin H. B. VonHoverberg, of Passaic county, urging the justices and constables of this county to organize and to extend it until it includes all the counties of the State, and becomes a State organization. All the Plainfield justices favor it.

Say There are Plenty of Exists.

Members of the Borough Board of Education refute the hitherto published statements regarding the safety of the new borough school as regards to fire or panic of any kind. The president of the Board informed a representative of The Daily Press that there are three exits provided from the building for six rooms, which allows one exit to every two rooms. The Board of Education are satisfied that the school is amply provided with suitable exists.

Judgment Secured.

Attorney Wm. Newcorn secured judgment in Justice Mosher's court yesterday afternoon against Pasquale Macharoni, the Italian proprietor of the Berkley Heights brick yard, for five workmen, also Italians, who claimed wages due them. Execution will be issued at once.

Constable Weaver's First Work.

Constable Peter V. Weaver is now performing his first duties. He has just secured a jury for the trial of the case of Fred Hand and the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, which is returnable in Justice Mosher's court.

THEY WILL FIGHT THE BOULEVARD TO FINISH.

MORE PROTESTS AGAINST AWARDS.

Westfield Avenue Property Owners Filed Written Objections in Court Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 5—The property owners on the line of Westfield avenue are up in arms against the awards made to them by the commissioners appointed by the court to assess damages and benefits as the result of widening the boulevard and building a trolley road. They declare their intention of contesting the matter to the last ditch. Out of the nineteen tracts of land in Union Township alone, on which the commissioners have made a report to the court, the owners of seventeen yesterday filed written objections with the court.

Justice VanSyckel has set down a hearing on the matter for next Tuesday. The objectors will be represented by able counsel, and the indications are that this is only the beginning of a determined fight all along the line from Elizabeth to Plainfield by the landholders on Westfield avenue's north side against the conversion of that thoroughfare into a county boulevard. The leaders in the fight in Union Township are former Freeholder Noah Woodruff and John C. Bender, proprietor of the Lorraine Hotel.

BELATED CHRISTMAS AFFAIR.

Final Entertainment Given by the Friends' Society Last Night.

Last evening at the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue the annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school was held. In addition to the scholars and teachers, there was a good attendance of members of the meeting and friends from outside.

The exercises were in charge of Miss Vail, superintendent of the school, and consisted of recitations by the following members of the school: Horace Vail, Bessie Vail, Ruth Stryker, Hazel Morrison, Roy Whitely, Leslie Palmer, Clifford Vail, Elizabeth Bell, Anna Morrison. There was also concert readings by the school, and special features were the readings of appropriate articles by Mrs. A. J. Gavett, Mrs. Charles E. Vail, Miss Dora Bennett, Mabel Vail, Ethel Lorton and Ray Vail.

After the programme was rendered an adjournment was made to the room above where all was served with ice cream and cake by the committee in charge. In addition to the refreshments each scholar received a box of candy and an orange.

INDEPENDENT TROLLEY LINE.

F. M. Bacon Explains the Proposed Road to Metuchen.

F. M. Bacon, of this city, one of the promoters of the proposed new trolley line from this city to Metuchen which is known as the Plainfield and Metuchen Street Railway Company, is fearful lest people get this company mixed with the Plainfield Street Railway Company. Mr. Bacon says that the first-named company is composed of men who are interested in the growth and welfare of the city, and are desirous of connecting the various near-by towns, as well as giving the citizens of this city quick and cheap transportation to tidewater, both at Amboy and Boynton Beach, and the Lehigh Valley and Pennsylvania Railroads. Mr. Bacon says that should there be no obstacles thrown in their way this new line will be running by July next and will be conducted for the accommodation of the public. He says that this road has nothing whatever to do with the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

HIS HONOR'S WORDS HEEDED.

Mayor Wilson Abolishes Another Borough Nuisance by Quiet Work.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, has accomplished another good thing for the municipality by closing up a disorderly house on Manning avenue. The Mayor informed the owner of the place that he would give him one week to close the place. The demand was complied with exactly.

It seems that the place was frequented by many people both from the city and borough, and the neighbors began to complain about the disturbance that came from the house. His Honor took charge of the case and he was determined that the nuisance should be stopped. A few days ago the people who occupied the house moved out taking all their furnituro with them. Where they have located is not known.

Recovery is Assured.

Mrs. Harry G. Adams, of East Front street, upon whom an operation was performed at the hospital yesterday, is doing nicely, and unless something unforseen happens, her recovery is assured.

COMPANY FORMED TO ESTABLISH SILK MILL

It Will Be Known As the Watchung Silk Mill.

LOCAL CAPITAL INVESTED.

$25,000 WILL BE THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF CAPITAL STOCK.

Meeting of the Interested Ones Was Held in the Board of Trade Rooms Last Night—$1,000 Paid In—Prominent Business Men Interested—Mill Will be Located in Scheffin Block.

Plainfield has a silk mill company now, for last night at the Board of Trade rooms one was organized. The name of the corporation is to be the "Watchung Silk Company," and it has a capital stock of $25,000. One thousand is paid in. The organization begins with January 9th which will give the new company time enough to have themselves incorporated. The limit of the charter is fixed at 50 years. The new company will manufacture broad silk and ribbons, and will be located in Scheffin's building on West Front street.

So much was decided upon at last night's meeting, but it was not until nearly 10 o'clock that the gentlemen who are to form the company got down to business. The time previous to that was spent in discussing the advisability of going into the scheme, and in listening to Messrs. Young and Bullock, the two gentlemen from Paterson who are promoting the enterprise.

H. C. Runyon said that he had taken both Young and Bullock to Edward White's dry goods store to look at his silks, and that Mr. White, although skeptical at first, was told the quality of the goods he showed them, the cost of manufacture, and the price he paid for them wholesale.

The company expect to start off with twenty looms. An outlay of $4,500 will be required to start everything upon a business like plan. When the looms are running they claim that each loom will net $1.50 per day and that the enormous profit of 60 per cent and 70 per cent will be made yearly on the money invested.

Messrs. Young and Bullock are familiar with every detail of the work, and offer to manage and look after everything connected with the business for $25 a week each, and one third of the capital stock, which every one present last night seemed to think a fair proposition. The twenty looms can be purchased for $900, and $700 will pay the cost of transportation and establishing.

The silk mill will bring to this city a good class of workmen. Weavers get paid by piece work and earn a dollar a day. An experienced weaver can operate two looms at once and thus double his wages. Girls will be employed at the looms and the positions in the factory will be eagerly sought for as good wages will be paid. Good warpers earn $20 to $25 a week.

There are now 192 shares of the stock sold as follows: J. C. Pope, 10; E. M. Laing, 10; G. T. Dunham, 10; M. F. Elderton, 5; F. C. Lounsbury, 5; H. C. Runyon, 2; Henry Liefke, 10; Boice, Runyon & Company, 10; J. Fred MacDonald, 10; J. H. McVey, 8; Charles H. Hand, 10; W. R. Codington, 10; J. F. Hubbard, 10; Bullock and Young, 40; A. D. Thompson, 5; Moses Schloss, 4; L. B. Woolston, 5; A. M. Griffen, 4; W. R Stanbery, 25.

It was late before the meeting was over and during the three hours they were together everything that could be thought of connected with silk manufacture and the management of a silk mill was discussed.

Some dissatisfaction existed at the close of the meeting in regard to the terms which Messrs. Young and Bullock agree to conduct the business, so they have consented to present another proposition. It is that they receive for their services $25 a week and take one-third of the profits until after the stockholders have received from the company's profits the amount of money they have invested. Thus Young and Bullock propose to take one-third of the capital stock as their own. This new proposition will no doubt be more favorably received.

MYSTERIOUS PATIENT IS DEAD.

Never Able to Utter a Word Since Admitted to the Hospital.

About 2 o'clock this morning occurred the death of Thomas Flynn, or whoever he may be, at Muhlenberg Hospital. He died as he was found, in an unconscious condition, for not once since he was found did he have one word to say. The authorities at the hospital will turn the body over to the city authorities, who will take charge of the burial unless someone appears to claim the body very soon.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THE TREATY SENT IN

Submitted to the Senate by the President.

NO COMMENT MADE BY HIM

It Went to the Committee on Federal Relations and Was Ordered to be Printed. In the House the Alaska Bill Was Considered.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—When the Senate went into executive session yesterday the peace treaty, which had just been received from the president, was laid before the Senate by Senator Frye, who occupied the chair in the absence of the vice president.

The treaty was not read, but the president's message accompanying it was. It was a simple letter of transmissal, without a word or recommendation or suggestion, and was only a few lines in length.

On motion of Senator Davis the treaty was referred to the committee on foreign relations and ordered printed for the use of the Senate.

No order was made looking to making the treaty public, but it is understood that this will be done after the treaty is passed upon by the committee.

Senator Davis moved to make the treaty and the proceedings of the commission public, but finally withdrew the motion to allow the committee to act upon it.

The committee on Friday, will probably decide to publish both the treaty and the proceedings.

In the House.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—There were less than one hundred members on the floor when the House met at noon yesterday, after the holiday recess, but the attendance in the galleries was large.

Mr. Simpson (Pop., Kan.) and Mr. Lewis (Dem., Wash.) appeared for the first time this session and attracted much attention.

The blind chaplain, in his invocation, referred feelingly to the critical illness of Mr. Dingley, the floor leader, and prayed fervently for his speedy recovery.

Under the special order adopted before the recess the House took up the consideration of the bill to locate and punish crimes in the district of Alaska and provide a code of criminal procedure for the district.

In the Senate.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The first session of the Senate after the holiday recess occupied only fourteen minutes, although in that brief time two open sessions and an executive session were held.

In the absence of the vice president, Mr. Frye of Maine, the president pro tem., called the Senate to order.

A touching reference was made by the chaplain in his invocation to the death of Senator Morrill.

Mr. Frye, who was in the chair, recognized Major Pruden, assistant secretary to the president, who presented a message from the president of the United States, containing the treaty of Paris.

On motion of Mr. Davis the Senate went into executive session, so the treaty might be referred to the committee on foreign relations.

In a few minutes the Senate reconvened in open session.

Mr. Allison announced the death of Senator Morrill and presented the usual resolution, which was adopted.

Mr. Allison presented another resolution providing as a further mark of respect that the Senate adjourn.

This was adopted, and the Senate at 12.15 adjourned.

The Duke Walks on Flowers.

There were many Russians on the pier to see him off.

He was accompanied by his two military aides. As the grand duke walked up the gang plank of the vessel flowers were strewn in his path by Mmes. Nobokoff and Kobovits, the leaders of the Russian colony of New York.

Mme. Lidvell presented the duke with a handsome bouquet of roses.

President Pardons Twelve.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The president has pardoned the twelve Leech Lake Indians sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and fined at the late term of the United States district court of Minnesota for resisting the United States marshal in making an arrest.

The president has also pardoned William G. Sorter, who is now undergoing a life sentence for the murder of Albert Lang in the Indian territory in 1883.

Revenue Stamps Must Bear the Date.

New York, Jan. 5.—Collector Treat of the second internal revenue district has received the following at Washington:

"Upon every adhesive documentary or proprietary stamp used or affixed after January 1, 1899, there shall, in addition to the initials of the person using the same, and the year in which used, also appear the month and day of the month when such stamp was used or affixed."

Yale's Signal Victory.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 5.—The supreme court handed down its decision yesterday in the appeal of Yale University from the New Haven Board of Assessors.

The decision is a signal victory for Yale, as several plots of ground, the dormitories and several leased properties belonging to the university are declared to be exempt from taxation.

Senator Hanna Vaccinated.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 5.—Senator M. A. Hanna is suffering from vaccination He could not go to Washington yesterday and carried his arm in a sling. He is suffering great pain and considerable inconvenience

GOVERNOR LOUNSBURY'S ADDRESS.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 5.—In assuming the office of governor, yesterday, Mr. Lounsbury delivered a voluminous address, in which he treated exhaustively more subjects, probably, than any of his predecessors.

Nearly every department of the state government was discussed at length, the reports of state officers and boards were reviewed and the important legislation which has been projected was commented upon fearlessly.

Many recommendations were made but none of them was radical.

In his treatment of the state finances the governor urged continued economy, and advised the general assembly not to attempt at this session to liquidate the funded debt of the state which now amounts to $3,240,100.

Under the head of education the governor cautioned the legislators "to stop and consider whether the brilliancy" of the high schools is not blinding the state to the fact that thousands of children are being neglected.

On the subject of good roads, it was urged that too much money had been wasted in this work, and the necessity of state supervision was insisted upon.

Brief comment is made upon the railroads, steam and trolley, of the state, with the claim that the trolley lines should be made to repair all the damage caused by their lines to the highways.

The recent state prison defalcation was but briefly touched and the only recommendation on the subject of the prison called for the appointment of a controlling board.

The rest of the report is devoted to an elaborate discussion of the various commissions, such as the militia, etc.

Tank Burst; Havoc Follows.

New York, Jan. 5.—An immense wooden water tank on a fifty-foot high platform of the elevated railroad structure in the yard at 146th street and eighth avenue, burst yesterday morning.

Three men and a girl of fourteen years were nearly drowned, and the girl was seriously injured.

There was tremendous excitement for a time, as it was thought that a collision of engines had occurred and that the boilers had burst.

The tank was one of two. Each was twenty-feet high and eighteen feet in diameter and contained 80,000 gallons of water.

Prize Money for Sigsbee.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The second warrant for the payment of prize money issued by the treasury department has been sent to Captain Sigsbee of the cruiser St. Paul.

The amount was nine hundred and seventy-six dollars.

The prize upon which it was based was the cargo of the cruiser Restormal, captured on May 25.

Warrants for amounts due the officers and crew of the St. Paul, on account of that capture, will be issued by the department as fast as application is made for them.

Senator Burrows Renominated.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 5.—Senator J. C. Burrows was unanimously nominated last night by the Republican caucus to succeed himself.

After the nomination the senator and his late opponent, Albert Pack of Alpena, came to the Capitol together. Both addressed the caucus.

As the Republicans have a large majority on joint ballot the re-election of Senator Burrows is assured.

Bishop Hartzell Goes Away.

New York, Jan. 5.—The steamer Paris started yesterday for Europe with Bishop Hartzell of the Methodist Episcopal church, who is returning to Africa.

He took with him a printing outfit, with which he will start The New Africa, a monthly bulletin, at Monrovia.

Choate's Nomination Certain?

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The announcement has been made on the highest authority that Joseph H. Choate of New York will be nominated ambassador to Great Britain.

The nomination will not be sent to the Senate for a few days, but those near the president say that the delay does not indicate any possibility of a change.

Sender Must Pay Tax.

San Francisco, Jan. 5.—United States Circuit Court Judge Morrow has decided that the stamp tax on telegrams must be paid by the sender of the same.

This was in the case of J. Waldere Kirk, known as "King of the Dudes," against the Western Union Telegraph Company.

LEGISLATORS CONVENE

The New York Senate and Assembly Meet and Organize.

ADJOURNED FOR ONE WEEK

Republican Caucus Nominees Elected to the Various Offices in Senate and Assembly. Speeches by Lieut. Gov. Woodruff and Speaker Nixon.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5.—Both houses of the legislature met at noon yesterday.

Although he more deliberative of the two bodies, by tradition, the Senate was first ready for business.

The message of Governor Roosevelt was, of course, awaited with great interest. It was business like and did not pretend to exhaust the whole field of legislation which the lawmaking body was expected to cover.

Governor Roosevelt promised information concerning his views at the proper time.

The half hour previous to the calling to order of the two houses was spent by the members and their friends in admiring the flower shows which the desks of members presented.

Lieutenant Governor Woodruff was the most highly favored of anybody in the Capitol. He was presented with a floral shield of exquisite beauty by the Twenty-second ward organization of Brooklyn.

Bishop Doane of Albany opened the Senate with prayer, a few moments after the noon hour was struck.

Everybody was in good humor, and Lieutenant Governor Woodruff's speech which followed the calling of the roll, was generously received.

Senator T. E. Ellsworth of Niagara was re-elected president pro tem. of the Senate, James S. Whipple of Cattaraugus clerk, Harry Jacquillard of Brooklyn sergeant-at-arms, and the remaining candidates of Tuesday evening's Republican senatorial caucus were selected as officers of the Senate.

In the assembly Clerk Baxter called that body to order, and Fred S. Nixon of Chautauqua, who yesterday entered upon his eighth consecutive term as member, was elected speaker.

Mr. Nixon at once assumed the character of presiding officer and delivered an address which was warmly received.

Archie E. Baxter of Chemung was selected as clerk of the assembly, Jas. C. Crawford of New York as sergeant-at-arms, and Frank W. Johnson of Bualo as principal doorkeeper.

The other officers who had been selected by the Republican assembly caucus were also elected.

As soon as the organization of the two bodies was completed, the governor was notified through committees that the legislature was organized and ready for the transaction of business, and Governor Roosevelt's private secretary was soon announced and the governor's message presented and read to the respective bodies and ordered printed.

In the respective houses the Democratic members presented the candidates of their caucuses, which were regularly rejected.

By virtue of the candidacy of Senator Grady of New York, for president pro tem., of the Senate, and George M. Palmer of Schoharie for speaker of the Assembly, these men became the minority floor leaders of the Senate and Assembly.

Both branches of the legislature afterward adjourned until 8.30 o'clock next Wednesday night.

Mr Dingley's Condition Worse.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The condition of Representative Dingley of Maine, who is lying ill with pneumonia at the Hamilton Hotel, was reported yesterday afternoon as worse and the gravest fears are entertained for his recovery.

He rested quietly during the greater part of the night, but at an early hour yesterday morning a change for the worse was noticed.

John W. Foster, who was suffering from an attack of grip early in the week, is reported as worse, although his condition is not yet regarded as critical.

Anti-gambling Crusade in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 5.—The gambling houses of Minneapolis, which have flourished for some years and have been practically wide open for a long time past, were all dark last evening.

Mayor ray notified their managers through the inspectors that they must cease doing business, and the new superintendent of police, Doyle, who has been on the detective force for many years, is familiar enough with the gambling houses to see that the order is obeyed from now on.

Firebug's Work at Ridgewood.

Ridgewood, N. J., Jan. 5.—The summer home of Robert T. Haskins, together with the outbuildings, was destroyed by fire at two o'clock yesterday morning.

Mr. Haskins and his family are in New York for the winter. The house was finely furnished, and the loss will be about twelve thousand dollars.

It is believed that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

Calumet Farm Seized.

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 5.—The Calumet stock farm, with forty horses and brood mares, including the famous pacing stallion Roy Wilkes, with a record of 2.06 1-2, is in the hands of the sheriff, to satisfy a judgment of $5,700 in favor of Mrs. Lillian N. Davis, wife of Mr. L. A. Davies, president of the company.

Sleigh Ride on Her 100th Birthday.

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Mary Sawyer Peter of Henniker yesterday reached her one hundredth birthday. She celebrated the event by taking a five mile sleigh ride with a neighbor, the thermometer being twenty degrees below zero.

HIGH TEMPERATURE IN TUNNELS.

The Snow-Covered Alps Have Very Warm Hearts.

It is very curious that the great obstacle encountered in tunneling under the snow-covered Alps is the excessively high temperature. In the construction of the Mount Cenis tunnel, according to statistics, the highest temperature recorded was 86 degrees Fahrenheit which was reached at a point near the center of the tunnel, about 5,100 feet beneath the mountain summit, on which the mean temperature is 27 degrees. The St. Gothard was still hotter, a temperature of 95 degrees having been observed in the center for several days. Such a heat, in a moisture-laden and impure atmosphere, could be endured but five hours a day for two days in three; and so prostrating was the labor at Mont Cenis and St. Gothard that the physician who attended the workingmen ten years reports the number of invalids to have been as great as sixty to the one hundred. Stranger still was the appearance of a tropical disease—due to intestinal parasites—that is known only in the hottest regions of the earth. Even greater rock temperatures are expected in the great tunnels projected in recent years—those of the Simplon, St. Bernard and Mont Blanc—experienced engineers predicting that under Mont Blanc a heat considerably greater than 100 degrees—possibly above 125 degrees—will be reached. Improved methods of ventilating, cooling and working will all contribute, however, toward overcoming the difficulties of working.—Boston Transcript.

CYCLISTS SEE A STRANGE SIGHT.

A Teuton's Ingenious Way of Getting Down a Big Hill.

"We Americans traveling abroad are apt to be very proud of our reputation for cleverness," said a tourist who went bicycling in Europe last summer. "And no doubt we have reason to be. But I am going to tell you how I had some of the conceit taken out of me:

"We were going through Switzerland and had reached the close of the first day's descent toward Geneva. The road had been too steep to coast without the aid of a brake, and, as we were afraid to use our brakes for fear our tires would not last us through the trip, we back-pedalled all the way.

"As we were sitting after supper on the veranda of the lodge discussing the fatigue of our unusual exercise, and dreading the morrow, which meant more of the same sort, our attention was suddenly called to a cloud of dust descending the mountain side. Then we saw a cyclist, coasting as nice as you please, towing a good-sized sapling, which acted as an effective brake, without injury to the tires. One of the boys ejaculated: 'Well! Why didn't we think of that?' The rest were simply dumb. That man was a German. I now take off my hat to our German brethren of the wheel."—Pall Mall Gazette.

USED CANDLES FOR TIPS.

How an American Got Even with an Extortionate Bill.

An American consul in Belgium tells of a New Yorker who was shown to a room in a hotel in Brussels where he found twenty candles stuck in a chandelier in the center. As it was dark, the attendant lighted them all; but the guest had been in European hotels before, and made him put them out immediately. It was of no avail, however. In his bill next day he found them charged, "Twenty candles, 10 francs." So he went back to the room and took them all out, wrapped them in a bit of paper and slipped them into his pocket.

When he was about to leave he found the servants drawn up in two lines in the hall, in the European style—ten men servants on one side, ten maid servants on the other, all smiling and ready for the expected tip. Then he drew out his package and distributed the candles, one to each. "Allow me, monsieur," said he, with a bow; "permit me, madame. They are very superior candles, I assure you; I paid 10 cents apiece for them;" and he left them all staring at their candles like so many altar boys.

FOR REST AND MEDITATION.

A Unique Church in Which no Services Are to be Held.

In Hyde Park place, a little distance west of the Myrtle Arch, in London, is a church that is almost unique among the sacred edifices of the metropolis. It is called the Church of the Ascensicon. It is a very handsome building in red brick, and has been built by Mrs. Russel Gurney, the widow of the late Recorder of London. It will not be used for services, but for "rest and meditation," as a notice inviting wayfarers to enter sets forth. When finished it will be one of the most beautiful sights in London, and in its present state well repays a visit. The floor is tessellated, and the walls will be covered with paintings. No plain stone will be visible. At present the panels, which are painted, contain representations of Scriptural characters, the work of Mr. F. Shields. The north end is raised, and here, as in many Roman Catholic churches—unlike Angelican—will be the chancel, the marble steps to which will afford a kneeling place for worshippers.

The peignoir is a useful garment, of pink flannelette, in four widths, unlined, trimmed with a hemmed frill at the neck. Bell sleeve in one piece. Quantity of material required, 7 yards. The five-gore petticoat is of silk, lined with muslin, trimmed with lace flounces and fan bows. Quantity of silk required, 7 yards. Draped slip bodice of cambric, sleeveless, in three pieces, trimmed with lace. Quantity of cambric required, ¾ yard.

ANTI-QUAY MEN MEET.

The Caucus Stayaways Organizing in Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 5.--The Republican senators and members who signed the pledge not to take part in Tuesday night's senatorial caucus, organized yesterday morning to keep up the fight against Senator Quay until after the supreme court has disposed of the People's Bank conspiracy cases.

The meeting was attended by nearly all the signers and two others who did not sign but were absent from the caucus.

General William H. Koontz of Somerset called the meeting to order and nominated Senator William Flinn of Allegheny for chairman and Senator J. Bayard Henry of Philadelphia and Representative Robert K. Young of Tioga for secretaries.

Secretary Flinn said that there was no necessity for holding a senatorial caucus and that so long as those who remained away stood together there could be no election of a United States senator.

What he wanted was more light on the charges pending against Senator Quay, to ascertain whether he is a proper person to be elected to the United States Senate.

Mr. Flinn said that he interpreted the pledge binding the independents to keep out of the caucus to mean that they would not vote for Mr. Quay until the supreme court has disposed of the conspiracy cases, and that if the senator was in no better position after its action than now, they cannot vote for his re-election.

Senator-elect David Martin of Philadelphia, who will be qualified January 17, when the House and Senate will vote for senator, concurred with Senator Flinn. This was his interpretation of his pledge, and he would stand upon that platform.

Senators Flinn and Weller of Bedford, and Representatives Coray of Luzerne, Savage of Philadelphia, Moore of Butler, and Young, were appointed a committee to take charge of the work of the organization.

The committee will prepare a public statement outlining the policy and plan of action of the independents.

Another meeting of the organization will be held Thursday morning of next week.

THE ADAMS POISONING CASE.

New York, Jan. 5.--The police seem to be gaining confidence in their ability to lay their hands on the murderer of Mrs. Kate J. Adams, who was last week poisoned by taking cyanide of mercury, as it is now believed, from a bromo seltzer bottle.

The statement made by Dr. Henry Beaman Douglas, in which it was said that Henry C. Barnett showed symptoms of cyanide of mercury poisoning at one time during his sickness, is believed by the police to connect the two deaths; and it is thought that some conclusive evidence will be gained by a consideration of both cases together.

Following out this plan, Assistant District Attorney McIntyre said, Barnett's body will be exhumed probably to-day.

Captain McClusky, however, yesterday morning disapproved of this step as utterly useless since it had been shown that Barnett had recovered from the poisoning and died of diphtheria.

According to the assistant district attorney, application for an order to exhume the body will be made to the supreme court to-day.

Under the new charter this application must be made by a coroner or the district attorney, and it must be set forth that there are good reasons for believing that a crime had been committed.

The investigation has been in great part transferred to Newark, where, it has now been established, the vial holder and the bromo seltzer bottle were bought.

A number of detectives were sent to that city yesterday to look into certain important statements said to have been made by the employes of Charles Hartdegen, the proprietor of the store where the holder was bought.

Summons for Esterhazy.

Paris, Jan. 5.--The court of cassation has formally issued a summons for ex-Major Esterhazy, directing him to appear before that body and testify in relation to his connection with the Dreyfus court martial.

The summons was presented at Esterhazy's former residence in Rue de Douai, where the server of the process was informed that he was not at home.

French Anarchists Encouraged.

London, Jan. 5.--A dispatch from Paris to the Evening News says that the Anarchist movement in France has received an enormous impetus through the growing fear of a military despotism.

The sum of two hundred thousand francs has been placed at the disposal of M. Sebastien Faure for the purpose of establishing an Anarchist daily newspaper.

Austrian Embassy Next.

London, Jan. 5.--A Central News dispatchfrom Vienna says that Herr Hengelmuller, Austrian minister to the United States, who is now in Austria on leave of absence, will return to Washington in a few months, when Count Gulochowski, minister of foreign aairs, will ask the chambers to vote credits for the elevation of the Washington legation to an embassy.

Congressman Hull Ill.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.--Representative Hull of Iowa, chairman of the House military committee, is laid up with a very severe attack of the grip. While his condition is not alarming, it is feared that it will be some time before he can resume his legislative duties.

England's China Squadron.

London, Jan. 5.--A Central News dispatch from Portsmouth says that in the early part of the year the British China squadron will be strengthened by the addition of the cruisers Orlando and St. George.

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

A Vigorous Administration Foreshadowed.

FAVORS BIENNIAL SESSIONS

High priced Salaries in New York Should be Cut Down. Useless Commission Abolished. Sheriff and County Clerk Fees Should be Turned Into the State Treasury.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5.--Governor Roosevelt, in his first message to the legislature yesterday, touched upon the Spanish war and its results, and maintains that the government should hold the colonies reminding the people that "we are not New Yorkers, but Americans."

On the question of taxation, the governor suggests that legislation should be guided by prudence, and while securing all that is due to the state, care should be exercised not to drive foreign capital from the state.

The Canal Inquiry.

The canals receive more than passing notice. It is recommended that the New York Commerce Commission should be kept up and given every possible aid to maintain coast supremacy.

He favors an appropriation of twelve thousand dollars to pay the cost of the canal investigation and declares that if it is found that the state has been defrauded by superintendents or contractors they shall be summarily punished.

Labor to be Protected.

The labor question is taken up at length and legislation is urged to be taken with care. The laws in regard to the employment of minors, compelling seats for women in large stores and general sanitation, should be enforced, as should the eight-hour labor act.

To this end Governor Roosevelt recommends that the better enforcement of the laws should be placed in the hands of the factory inspector, with authority conferred upon him to appoint additional members.

Prison made goods, he suggests, should bear a trade mark to that effect, and the Board of Mediation and Arbitration brought to a greater standard of efficiency.

The National Guard.

After praising the patriotism and loyalty of the National Guard during the Spanish war, he refers to the newly created major general and suggests that he be given a full exercise of power.

The present arms of the Guard, the governor declares, are ancient and poor. He holds that the Springfield musket with black powder is obsolete, and that the Guard should have the best available arms for any future emergency.

The work of the Red Cross Society is praised and a suggestion made that it should be recognized and known as "The Red Cross of the National Guard."

The naval militia comes in for a good deal of praise for splendid work, but as it really is intended for coast defence, the governor said that it should be kept up and built up, and be supplemented by a naval reserve proper, called into existence and aided by the federal government.

Civil Service Laws.

The present state civil service law, the governor says, works badly, because it applies to sections, and he suggests a law for universal practice, and refers to its operation in the navy yards, where the selection of employes is taken out of the hands of local politicians.

He favors a preference for veterans in civil service appointments where they are honest and efficient.

Recommends Biennial Sessions.

The evils of over legislation are referred to, and the governor favors the enactment of a law providing for biennial sessions.

Referring to the government of New York city, the message urges greater economy and suggests that needless offices should be abolished and commissions be consolidated wherever possible.

As to the question of rapid transit, he believes that the legislature should seek the very best system and adopt it.

As a further exercise of economy in Greater New York, the legislature is urged to inquire into the question of cutting down extravagant salaries and the force of employes, the abolishment of the city chamberlain's office and the special commissionership of jurors, and turning into the state treasury the fees collected by the county clerks of New York and Kings counties, and fixing a stated salary for those officers.

Police Evils Serious.

The police evils are very serious, the governor says, and he may comment on it specially, he declares.

The state owes loyal support to the state university, he declares, and he suggests that the general school law be revised and amplified.

The excise law he praises for its vast revenue raising power.

Algers Military Aide Testifies of Camps.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.--Major Hopkins, military aide to the secretary of war, testified before the war investigation commission regarding the sanitary conditions at the camps at Tampa, Camp Thomas and Camp Alger. It was the old question of sinks, drainage and camp police, and the testimony of the witness was little different from that of the witnesses who preceded him.

Infernal Machine.

It was sent from Holly Springs, Miss., to a man at New Albany, who is indicted for murder.

He was opening it when the explosion occurred.

SPAIN ENJOYS ILOILO AFFAIR

Americans Wanted Hasty Evacuation and Got It.

Madrid, Jan. 5.—The statement that the Spaniards evacuated Iloilo in order to render the situation more difficult for the Americans is positively denied here.

The Spanish government, immediately after the signing of the treaty of peace, ordered the Philippines to be evacuated as quickly as possible, in order to avoid further bloodshed and "conform with the expressed wish of the Americans, who were very exacting, especially in the case of the island of Cuba."

An interview with an ex-prefect of a province of the Philippines is published here, during the course of which he is quoted as saying:

"President McKinley has shown complete ignorance of the situation in the Philippines. When the Americans occupied Manila there were only four insurgent provinces. The Americans encouraged the rebellion, and now they are themselves the victims of the support which they gave the insurgents, who have become masters of the entire archipelago, except Mindanao, where the natives, who are Mussulmans, have refused to recognize American rule, although they have not revolted.

"Aguinaldo's unpopularity is due to his friendship for the Americans. His treatment of Spanish prisoners has been horrible.

"Monks have been marched through the streets led by cords attached to rings through their noses, and others have been employed literally as beasts of burden, while a thousand have died of ill treatment."

Hale Renominated in Maine.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 5.--The general Republican caucus of the Maine legislature last evening unanimously nominated Eugene Hale for re-election to the United States Senate.

In the course of a speech thanking the caucus for the nomination, Senator Hale referred in eloquent terms to his brother members of the Maine delegation, and especially to Speaker Reed. Of Mr. Dingley he said:

"There is no man in Congress who, if he shall be taken by calamity from us, will be so much missed by the interests of the state and the party and the nation as Nelson Dingley."

Of his association with Senator Frye Mr. Hale said:

"We agree sometimes to disagree, for we are not soft-mouthed men who refuse to proclaim our opinions and who go into holes and conceal them. From the day of Mellen and Sprague and of Evans and Williams and Bradbury and Fairfield and Hamlin and Fessenden and Morrill and Blaine (applause) Maine's representatives in the United States Senate have never been afraid to speak their minds and to have opinions.

Gatling's Big Gun Bursts.

The gun went to pieces after a normal firing pressure of 36,500 pounds. Although the air was filled with flying fragments of steel, no one was hurt, as the officers who conducted the test took refuge behind a sand hill before each firing.

Dr. Gatling was not at the proving grounds, he having told the ordnance officers to go ahead with the firing if he did not come.

The news of the bursting of the gun was telegraphed to Dr. Gatling and to the ordnance department at Washington.

Delaware Legislature Not Organized.

Dover, Del., Jan. 5.--The two Republican factions of the House of Representatives are still at issue over the choice of a speaker.

Fifty-four fruitless ballots were taken yesterday before adjournment. Several Democrats voted for the regular Republican candidate in an effort to elect an organization, but the regulars declared that they did not want Democratic aid, and would not vote for their own candidate.

The organization will probably be elected to-day.

Representative Clark, the regular Republican candidate, will doubtless be chosen speaker.

New Hampshire's New Governor.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 5.--The state legislature has opened for its biennial session.

Governor-elect Rollins will be inaugurated to-day at noon and the general court will go into session at once.

In the caucus, which lasted until early yesterday morning, Frank D. Currier of Canaan was nominated for speaker of the House, and T. Nelson Hastings of Walpole for president of the Senate.

Ambassador Clayton Welcomed.

Mexico City, Jan. 5.--General Clayton was received yesterday as ambassador of the United States, with elaborate ceremonies.

In reply to the address of the new minister, President Diaz spoke of the high regard of his government for the United States.

California Governor for Expansion.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 5.--In his inaugural address yesterday Governor Gage made a strong plea for expansion. He said the Philippin semust be retained, and that no shortsighted policy should lose us land that had been baptized with American blood.

Senator Davis Renominated.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.--The Republican legislative caucus last night unanimously renominated United States Senator Davis.

This insures his re-election, as the Republicans have a majority of ninety in the legislature.

Thanks for Miss Gould.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5.--Assemblyman James Apgar of Westchester, has introduced in the assembly a resolution commending Miss Helen Gould for her work of mercy during the war with Spain.

Mr. Jepp Zensen, of 728 W. Front St., patternmaker by trade, says: "For a year I had symptoms of kidney trouble. A sort of grinding pain across my back at times extended up to my shoulders and there was a lameness over my kidneys and severe headaches. When I stooped I always felt dizzy and sometimes was fairly blinded. In the mornings I felt stiff and sore until I got some exercise. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised in my city paper and so highly recommended for kidney complaint that I went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They did me a great deal of good. From my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than endorse them."

Reed and Thompson.

It is evident that the only political article that the New Jersey editor of the New York Press can see in Somerset county is Mr. Lewis Thompson. No Republican will deny the fact that Mr. Thompson has accomplished some very good work for the G. O. P., but we hardly think that he has arrived at the point where in the estimation of the party he is the whole thing in that bailiwick. The latest bouquet that The Press man has thrown in the path of Mr. Thompson appears at the head of his editorial comment in this morning's paper. Just read the following:

When the Republican Senators meet in caucus in Trenton tonight it is expected that Senator Reed, of Somerset, will be chosen for the President of the Senate. This action may widen the breech in the party ranks in Somerset, as Reed is the leader of the opposition against Lewis A. Thompson, the head of the organization. If ever the time was ripe for concessions, that time is the present. To select Reed for such an honor as the Presidency of the Senate while he is a party to disunion in Somerset, where a Senator is to be elected next November, unless he pledges personal effort in the restoration of harmony among his constituents, means the loss of that county to the enemy.

Thompson, as the acknowledged leader, being also an ex-Senator, is entitled to the Senate's consideration in his opposition to Reed, who aspires to the party leadership in Somerset. He has been repeatedly chosen as the head of the County Committee, and has the organization behind him. If Reed does not make his peace with his opponents he should not be named for the Presidency, for on the cast of this die Republican supremacy n Somerset rests.

The Press man must think Mr. Thompson the high prelate of Somerset county affairs, whose possibility of not finding his political path strewn with abject followers is threatening of dire results in the future. Well, may be it is—for him. But we hardly think that it is necessary for Senator Reed to bow to the will of Mr. Thompson with regard to the policy of Somerset county Republican politics in order to gain the honor of being President of the Senate. The Tall Sycamore of Somerset knows a thing or two about politics, as well as the eminent Somervillian, and will be able to get there without consulting Thompson.

So far as the disunion in Somerset is concerned, Thompson is as much to blame as Reed. Both men made a contest in the township primaries last fall and Reed succeeded in dividing the results with his erstwhile preceptor. Consequently, Senator Reed is not merely an aspiring leader, but is a leader in fact and entitled to quite as much recognition as Thompson. And he will get it, too, despite the jealous opposition of the latter.

State Has Too Much Money.

The news comes from the State treasurer that New Jersey is actually getting more money than she knows what to do with. This condition of affairs is brought about, it seems, through the pleasant arrangement that exists between the State and the trusts that seek refuge here, the monster combinations of capital and enterprise paying liberally for the legal asylum the State affords. The recent organization of a number of trusts under New Jersey laws has had the effect of sending the surplus of State funds way up to the top notch. Now the problem of how we are going to get money has resolved itself into one of what are we going to do with it. So it is that the next Legislature will tackle the question of how to spend it.

Propositions have been made to spend the extra money on the soldiers who went into camp last summer. It is also proposed to reform the charity and prison systems of the State. The State prison is overcrowded, and the big reformatory at Rahway requires an outlay of $500,000 to complete it.

The most serious proposition, however, is to raise the tax on trusts. The Legislators believe they can find some means of spending the money, and they think, unless they can compel the trusts to give up more money to the State, they will cause the Commonwealth to become unpopular for those organizations.

It has already been suggested that other States will enact retaliatory legislation and prevent corporations chartered in New Jersey from doing business within their borders. Such a movement would cause a sudden departure of the trusts from Jersey.

The nicety of words often serves to smooth over what is in reality a criminal act. Especially is this so in the designation of prizefights as boxing contests. Judge Dixon has no sympathy with such devices, and in calling the attention of the Passaic Grand Jury to a brutal contest between two pugilists in the city of Paterson recently, he said: "There has come to be a sort of notion abroad that you have only to dub a prizefight a boxing match and you rid it of all criminality. If the purpose is to inflict injury or bring about the disability of each other, it is a fight; and the mere fact that the combatants enter upon it willingly makes no difference. It makes no difference whether it was carried on in a respectable place and before respectable people, or whether it was carried on by rowdies before rowdies."

It is a regular thing now days when a supposed millionare dies to find out that in reality he is only well-to-do. This seems to be the case in the death of ex-Senator Brice. While alive everyone considered Mr. Brice a millionare several times over, and as a result he was subjected to a vast amount of criticism and abuse because of the impression that he had become immensely wealthy in a way that would not bear the light of investigation. It appears now in filing letters of administration for his estate that Mr. Brice was worth only $600,000 in personal property.

Next Tuesday the Legislature will convene. It is pretty well settled now as to just how Plainfield will figure in the distribution of plums, so all that is to be done is for the local G O P to wait and be there ready to grasp what is coming to them.

The Daily Press was the only paper to print Mayor Rockfellow's first message complete yesterday. It was an interesting document, and presenting it in detail exclusively The Daily Press scored a notable "beat."

It was so cold the other day in New Brunswick that the town clock froze up and refused to run. That is the first time we ever knew of anything being so slow in New Brunswick that it could be touched by the cold.

The Newark Advertiser is making rapid strides under its new management, which takes an independent view of all topics editorially and gives enterprising and bright treatment to the news.

Col. Waterson wants the Democrats to nominate Dewey and Lee as their Presidential team in 1900. They would run well on both land and sea, but what would Col. Bryan say about it?

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

A Paterson woman deliberately cut off a piece of her tongue and a Paterson undertaker attempted to commit suicide. Elsewhere women are careful to preserve all the tongue nature has endowed them with, and undertakers are anxious to live that they may bury other people. Strange things happen in Paterson.—Newark News.

MENELIK AND HIS GENERALS.

In her march across Africa, England may have to reckon with Menelik, negus of Abyssinia. Menelik has always been opposed to allowing his country to be made a thoroughfare for the armies and commerce of other nations. It is, however, a mistake to put him down as an unenlightened barbarian. On the contrary he has remarkable abilities and is a learned man. He has done much during his reign, which began in 1889, in retrieving Abyssinia from its erstwhile state of savagery.

THE ENDING YEAR.

The weeping year is sobbing to its end:
Neighbour, what cheer?
What have we done, dear friends, to mar or mend
Throughout the year?
Did we, while wandering over life's rough ways,
Find some astray?
And lift, and up to higher levels raise,
Then point The Way?
Pour'd balms of healing on each open scar?
Spoke cheering words?
(Some words can cheer, while some cut deeper far
Than two-edged swords).
Or, when some poor wretch, shiv'ring in the cold,
For help did pray,
Pass, like the canting Pharisee of old,
The other way?
Did we, when there was some sore wrong to right,
Through praise or blame
Stand true and firm and faithful in the fight
Till victory came?
The deeds we dreamed of at the last New Year
Are scarce begun,
And now in mists and frost its end draws near,
What have we done?
How swift the years speed past us! It doth seem
But yesterday
Since this began, now like an ended dream
Fading away.
How many haunting forms have passed beyond
Our blame or praises?
How sound they sleep, the faithful and the fond,
Beneath the daisies.
Let us be brave and faithful at our posts;
Our pilgrim way
Leads on and up to join their wandering ghosts
In endless day.
Soon swift as arrow speeding to its mark
Death's dart will fall,
And from the glory hid behind the dark
God's voice will call—
Fight the good fight; be ready when you hear
The passing bell.
Then go as to a feast and have no fear
For all is well.
The years into Eternity keep flowing.
Our good and evil deeds before us going;
Be sure that we shall reap of our own sowing
When we have done
With all the grieving and the sore deceiving
Beneath the sun.
But till the number of our days be told,
And we are here,
Let's welcome Christmas as we did of old
And glad New Year.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The meeting of the State Teachers' Association, presided over by Superintendent Maxson at Trenton last week, is reported to have been the largest and strongest in the history of the association. On the second day a bitter factional fight was made by members from Hoboken, but matters were so harmonized by Mr. Maxson that on the last day no one could be found to vote "nay" on any question that arose, and the association gave him a vote of thanks for his able administration. The association will publish a year book containing the addresses. Mr. Wightman, Mr. Truel and several of the other Plainfield teachers attended the meeting.

Miss Breen, of Elizabeth, is the guest of Plainfield relatives for a short time.

Miss Hull, of North Branch, has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vanderbeek, of Duer street.

THERE IS A CLASS OF PEOPLE who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15c and 25c per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 5.—William H. Terry kindly sent to Plainfield Tuesday and purchased a suit of clothes and some underware for little Charlie Covey who is ill with diphtheria at the home of Justice A. W. Warden.

One of the Chinamen connected with the Chinese laundry on North avenue, was taken ill last week and died yesterday. His remains were shipped to New York, and later will be sent to China, where they will be buried according to the Chinese rites.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their weekly meeting this afternoon. An earnest invitation is extended to all to make this the first meeting in the new year a large and enthusiastic one.

Landlord Taylor entertained a sleigh load of young folks Tuesday night. They were from New Brunswick, and had a jolly time.

Mrs. David Randolph, of Greenbrook, is lying very ill at her home and is not expected to live.

Miss Annie Fenner, of Plainfield, spent Tuesday with Mrs. Harry Swackhamer.

Mrs. J. Robinson, of Newark, is expected here on a visit early next month.

Miss Hattie Thompson is spending the week with relatives in Somerville.

Walter Ritter, of Newark, spent yesterday as the guest of Joseph Maier.

Mrs. A. I. Martine is entertaining relatives from out of town.

Mrs. A. B. Snell is confined to her home by illness.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Jan. 5.—McDonough Brothers reported that the ice is nine inches thick on the pond at South Plainfield.

Mrs. Clarence White, of Red Bank, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Coriell, over the holidays, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Koller, of New Brunswick, spent yesterday in town.

C. E. Kelly & Co., will move in their new office today.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 5.—Miss Edith Randolph has returned from a visit with relatives in Plainfield.

Miss Jimerson, who has been visiting her sister Mrs. Edward Wade, has returned to her home at Lyons Farms.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 5.—With a few exceptions the merchants of this town have agreed to close their places of business every evening, except Saturday, at 7 o'clock.

The funeral service of the late Mrs. Caroline Darsh were held from the residence of her son, John Darsh, on Broad street, yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended. The Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated.

Rev. Charles Fiske, of St. Paul's church, is arranging for a special series of services, morning, afternoon and evening, to be held the last week during the present month. Rev. T. A. Conover, of Trenton, will be the leader at this meeting.

William Edgar, of this place, is ill with the grip.

A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying and exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. What is needed is that which is cleansing, soothing, protecting and healing. Such a remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. To test it a trial size for 10 cents or the large for 50 cents is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York. Druggists keep it. Upon being placed into the nostrils it spreads over the membrane and relief is immediate. It is an agreeable cure.

W. H. H. Wyckoff, sheriff, to Ella B. Stooker. $200; Nicholas Bowen, Jr., to Peter Bowers, et ux., $2,000; Benj. A. Hegeman, Sr., to Benj. A. Hegeman, Jr., $1; Benj. A. Hegeman, Jr., et ux., to Benj. A. Hegeman, Sr., $1; Margaret E. McDonald, et al., to May Bennett, $600; John B. Mills, et ux., to Joseph A. Hubbard, $2,500.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on L. W. Randolph, Druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c. and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

THE COMING STYLES.

PLAIN, SLIM EFFECTS ARE ORDERED BY DAME FASHION.

Skirts of Anatomical Fit—Chances for Women to Adapt the Modes to Their Individual Needs—The Tunic Princess—Change in Sleeves

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

Within certain limits this is a sort of a go-as-you-please, wear-what-you-please season in modes, for there is every kind of coat between a bolero and a redingote, every conceivable variety of trimming, with a greater variety in skirts than ever. One of the most telling secrets of distinction in dress is some combination of materials and colors which is entirely novel. So if you can originate something in this line you can add the desired chic appearance to your gown.

Every woman has her pet conviction as to her infallible judgment and superior taste, yet very few master the subtle art of adapting the fashions to individual needs. A Frenchman's rule for success in becoming dress is that the face should be younger than the costume, remembering always that if you ignore your defects other people will not be so charitable.

Dress is a strong influence in a woman's life which she cannot afford to overlook, but it is the ethical side of the question which has no place in a fashion article, that is most interesting. It is astonishing how quickly we become accustomed to new fashions, how soon the old modes lose their charm. One fashion is hardly established in fame before another is thrust out for approval, and so it goes on through incessant changes until it would seem that they must crystallize at some point just for lack of novelty.

It was only a short time ago that we were forewarned that all our skirts must be flounced, or trimmed generously in some other way, and now it is announced that the latest and most fashionable skirt is quite plain, fastening invisably in front or buttoning down the back. In theory this is much the same skirt that came to us early in the season, but this latest editon is so very plain, so extremely anatomical in cut and fit, that ease and convenience are not on the list of its virtues. From the knees down it has a pretty flare, supplemented at the back by a round pointed train very much like a bird's tail in shape.

Again, it is only the slim, well rounded figure that can hope to adorn this plain skirt, so the usual modifications are to follow in its wake. The fitted flounce is losing ground, and the pretty flare is given by shaping the gores. Most of the skirts yet in sight have some sort of trimming, one of the prettiest in cloth being waved bands overlapping one another from the knees down, and finished with rows of stitching. Double skirts, with one narrow circular flounce on each one, are another Parisian fancy.

The tunic princess is perhaps one of the most acceptable forms in which the hips can be incased, as it falls over the skirt proper and, while religiously tight fitting and close as possible down to the knee, the fact that it is loose at the edge and a separate garment from the skirt gives it a more graceful effect. It requires a perfect form to be a success and an expert dressmaker to master the difficulties of fitting it. The surest way of carrying out this fashion is to trim the skirt in the form of a tunic, and with a narrow belt at the waist the effect is very good.

The cloth gown made with a redingote is one of the season's favorites and gains popularity. The skirt is cut with a deep circular flounce, and the redingote, also cut circular and quite close fitting around the hips, reaches nearly to the hem of the skirt at the back and rounds in front or at one side, where it fastens. The waist portion is interlined with flannel, so that it is quite warm enough for street wear except in the coldest weather.

Brown seems to be one of the leading colors among the new gowns, which, trimmed with bands of cloth in a much lighter shade and bands of sable fur, are very stylish.

The difference between the latest mode in sleeves and those of three months ago, to say nothing of last season, is very noticeable. It is a simple matter to discriminate, since the really new sleeve is quite innocent of any gathers at the top.

Boas are of various lengths, trimmed with many tails, and shaped around the neck so they can be worn standing, like a high collar, or flat on the shoulder cape and a fur jacket being very slight in some instances. Mink and sealskin, seal and sable, and seal and chinchilla are very fashionable combinations. One very odd cape of Alaska sable has a Persian lamb yoke, very carefully fitted and finished with fully six tails on each shoulder. High fur collars, faced on the inside with fulled cream lace which continues down the front in a jabot or ties like a scarf, are very becoming.

A little pointed cape meeting the sleeve on the shoulder, made with long stole ends, is very stylish, but there is simply no end to the novelties in fur. A muff with the head of an animal at one end and the tail at the other is shown as new, which it certainly is, but the usual muff is large and round, with or without a row of tails across the front.

Woman should not be tempted by the display of fancy kid gloves to be seen in many shops. They are hopelessly bad form. The Parisians are the best gloved women in the world, and the style of wearing suede gloves in white and delicate shades of tans, grays and browns prevails among them from year to year.

Long coats are more worn this winter than they have been in years. Unless it is of fine material, well cut and better fitted, it is about the cheapest looking of all wraps. When it has the right fit on the right figure, it is simply stunning.

Fancy muffs are far finer than ever before. The prettiest are made of a combination of marabout feathers, chiffon and flowers. They are pretty, but a muff of mosquito netting, unlined at that, would serve just as well so far as keeping the cold out goes.

The latest fad is for a crush belt of broad velvet ribbon of brilliant hue, such as burnt orange, yellow that would shame a ripe lemon, bullfight red and blue that makes Yale blue pale before it. These belts, unfortunately, are only suited to very slender girls, because they are put around the waist in front, crossed in the back and fastened in front with a fancy buckle. Velvet has a tendency to make the waist look larger, and crossed in this way actually makes a thin girl look plump.

Imported French fans are quite small, made of the finest of fine parchment in most cases and decorated by the finest fan painters in Paris. Flowers take the lead in their decoration, and one covered with wide-open American Beauties and buds is stunning. Even the sticks are painted.

Many women wear low shoes throughout the winter. Doctors say that such women are wanting in common sense.

Pastry for Mince Pies.

A light, rich pastry can be made with half a pound of butter, and six ounces of lard, to every pound of flour. Rub the lard into the flour, adding a little salt; make into a smooth dry paste with cold water. Flour the pasteboard, roller, and hands, then roll out the pastry into a long oval shape. Place a third of the butter on it in little dabs, dredge with flour, fold in three, and roll out again. Use another third of the butter, and proceed as before. After the last portion of butter has been used, set away the pastry on ice, or in a cool place, for half an hour, before the pies are made. For these, grease the tins, which should not be too small; roll out the pastry to the thickness of the eighth of an inch, line the tins with it. Partly fill with mincemeat, wet the edges, put on the cover, and make a hole in the top to let out the steam.

Husband—I have just had my portrait taken. What do you think of it?

Wife—Beautiful, dear; I wish you would look like it sometimes.

"I wonder why it is said that rumors fly?"

Berlin. Die höchsten Besuchsziffern seit ihrem Bestehen hat die Berliner Universität in diesem Winterhalbjahr aufzuweisen: Die Zahl der immatrikulirten Studenten hat das sechste Tausend überschritten und beträgt 6151 gegen 5606 im vorigen Winter und 4648 im vergangenen Sommer. Darunter sind die fremden Erdtheile durch 184 Studirende vertreten: 147 aus Amerika, 31 aus Asien, 6 aus Afrika. Außer den immatrikulirten Studenten sind noch 4841 zum Hören der Vorlesungen berechtigt, darunter 234 Frauen. Es beträgt also die Gesammtzahl aller Hörberechtigten 10,992.—Die vom Magistrat und den hiesigen Stadtverordneten eingesetzte gemischte Deputation wegen Abänderung der verfehlten und allseitig verurtheilten Ausschmückung der Potsdamer Brücke mit vier Sitzstandbildern hat den radikalen Beschluß gefaßt, unter Beibehaltung der technischen Konstruktion ein Konkurrenz-Ausschreiben für die Neugestaltung der oberhalb des Fußbodens gelegenen Theile zu veranlassen.—Wegen Durchstechereien im Centralgefängniß Plötzensee wurde vom Landgericht 2 der frühere Gefangenenaufseher Elsner zu zwei Jahren sechs Monaten Gefängniß und fünf Jahren Ehrverlust verurtheilt. Frau Elsner wurde wegen der Beihilfe zu drei Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt.

Provinz Hannover.

Eime. Nach einer 36jährigen Thätigkeit hat unser bisheriger Bürgermeister Hofbesitzer Brüning nach Ablauf seiner Amtszeit eine Wiederwahl abgelehnt. An seine Stelle ist jetzt der Rathsherr August Pape zum Bürgermeister unseres Ortes gewählt worden.

Klausthal. Der Hüttenmann Koch aus Grund fiel, von giftigen Bleigasen betäubt, auf der hiesigen Silberhütte vor dem Schmelzofen nieder und verstarb nach einigen Tagen; beim Einsargen der Leiche wurde die Frau des Verstorbenen vom Schlage getroffen; sie war auf der Stelle todt.

Frankfurt. Die Stadtverordneten genehmigten die Aufnahme einer städtischen Anleihe von 20,000,000 Mark für Straßenbahnzwecke. Die Abfindung der Trambahngesellschaft erfordert 3,765,000 Mark, die Erwerbung der bisherigen Betriebsmittel 2,273,000 Mark. Zur Herstellung neuer Linien sind 2,500,000 Mark erforderlich, und die Kosten der Einführung des elektrischen Betriebes sind auf 4,800,000 Mark veranschlagt. Dazu kommen 2,000,000 Mark für Beschaffung neuer Wagen, Arbeiterwohnungen und Wagenhallen und 1,000,000 Mark für Erweiterung des Elektrizitätswerkes, um die erforderliche Triebkraft liefern zu können. Außerdem hat die Stadt die bisher mit Dampf betriebene Waldbahn für 2,000,000 Mark gekauft und beabsichtigt, auch noch die Trambahnlinie Bockenheim-Rödelheim, die einzige, die noch von der Trambahngesellschaft betrieben wird, für 200,000 Mark zu erwerben.

Stettin. Die beiden auf der Schiffswerft des „Vulcan" im Bau befindlichen großen Reichspostdampfer, welche für die Hamburg-Amerika-Linie bestimmt sind und mit welchen diese Gesellschaft ihre Betheiligung an der Ausführung des deutschen Reichspostdienstes nach Ostasien beginnt, haben die Namen „Hamburg" und „Kiautschau" erhalten.

Provinz Posen.

Posen. Der Erzbischof v. Stablewski hat angeordnet, daß demnächst in sämmtlichen Kirchen des Erzbisthums eine außerordentliche Sammlung zu Gunsten des Peterspfennigs veranstaltet werden soll, weil dessen Ertrag im verflossenen Jahre aus Anlaß des spanisch-amerikanischen Krieges die Ausgaben für die Verwaltung der katholischen Kirche nicht gedeckt habe.

Ostrowo. Der frühere Gutsrendant Richard Straßner aus Zakrzewo im Kreise Jarotschin ist von Heidelberg aus in das hiesige Gerichtsgefängniß eingeliefert worden. Er soll als Gutsrendant 4000 Mark unterschlagen haben, ist dann flüchtig geworden und auf Ersuchen der hiesigen Staatsanwaltschaft in der Nähe von Heidelberg verhaftet worden. Bei seiner Einlieferung wurden ihm noch 1000 Mark abgenommen.

Danzig. In einer von 70 Industriellen der Provinzen Ost- und Westpreußen, Posen und Pommern besuchten Versammlung wurde die Begründung eines Verbandes deutscher Industrieeller mit dem Sitz in Danzig behufs Förderung der vaterländischen Industrie in den preußischen Ostprovinzen beschlossen. Nach der Feststellung der Statuten erklärten 50 Firmen ihren Beitritt. Der Vorstand, welcher sofort gewählt wurde, besteht aus 18 Personen, und zwar sechs aus Westpreußen und je vier aus Pommern, Posen und Ostpreußen.

ELECTRICITY PHOTOGRAPHED.

Lord Armstrong, of England, has succeeded in accomplishing something that scientists have tried in vain to do for years—that is to photograph an electric spark. It was done by placing a camera and a powerful electric machine in a darkened room. There was a plate in the camera covered with a light fine powder, which, when the spark was discharged, would be driven about by the electric streams and the electricity would thus give the luminousity which would enable it to be caught in the act of setting the dust in motion.

The photographs taken by Lord Armstrong prove that there is really no such thing as electric fluid. Electricity is a vortex movement, like the smoke-rings which the smoker blows from his mouth. That is, electricity moves round and round the circumference of a ring, being sucked in by one face of the ring and shot out by the other.

BETTER THAN LIGHTNING RODS.

The green leaf is the best conductor of electricity—that most powerful and destructive of all the forces of the earth. To guard our homes and public buildings from its destructive action, we erect our lightning rods, whose sharp points quietly drain the clouds, or, failing to do this, receive the discharge and bear it harmlessly to the earth. But ages before Franklin pointed the first lightning rod to the storm, God has surrounded the dwellings of man with a protection far more effectual than this for since the creation of organic life, every pointed leaf and blade of grass have been silently disarming the clouds of their destructive weapons. A twig covered with leaves, sharpened by Nature's exquisite workmanship, is said to be three times as effectual as the metallic points of the best constructed rod. And when we reflect how many thousands of these vegetable points every large tree directs to the sky and consider what must be the efficacy of a single forest with its innumerable leaves, or of a single meadow with its countless blades of grass, we see how abundant the protection from the storm is, and with what care Providence has guarded us from the destructive force.—London Echo.

TOO INSIGNIFICANT TO NOTICE.

Amusing Way in Which a Goat Showed Its Contempt.

While walking the streets some years since, says a writer in Current Literature, my attention was attracted by a loud barking, and then by the sight of an immense Newfoundland dog which had attacked a very large goat. The goat stood strictly and warily on the defensive, and was evidently alarmed, though he bravely kept his ground, until the dog, remembering some other engagement, suddenly departed.

No sooner had he started than a little whiffet of a dog that had been watching the scene with great interest from the other side of the street dashed furious across, and, to the extent of his ability, emulated the example of the Newfoundland. The goat surveyed him for an instant, then deliberately turning his back, vigorously butted an adjacent awning pole with an expression of great disgust. I did not hear what Mark Twain calls "biblical language," but no doubt the valiant warrior would have used it had he been capable.

COMING TO THE CAPITAL

Cardinal Gibbons Will In Time Reside In Washington.

CENTER OF AMERICAN CHURCH.

Recent Events Render It Still More Imperative That the Primate of the American Church Should Be Near the Seat of Government—Baltimore Will Not Be Entirely Abandoned. Head of the Augustinians.

With expansion the importance of Washington as the capital of the United States increases. The Catholic church, alive to the drift of events, is seriously considering the advisability of having the head of its hierarchy reside in Washington for at least a certain portion of the year. Some of the most prominent archbishops and a large number of clergy and laity consider the capital of the nation the proper headquarters of the cardinal. When the change is made, the Catholic university will probably be the first residence of Cardinal Gibbons, but eventually a house suitable for the abode of a prince of the church will be built.

The obstacle in the path of immediate removal is the sentiment for Baltimore and its past. When Leonard Calvert sailed from Cowes in 1633, invested by his brother Cecil with powers of governor of the colony of Maryland, he had with him aboard the Ark and Dove 200 Catholics. The new province had a charter securing liberty of conscience and equal privileges to all Christian sects. The proprietary was restricted in making laws without the advice and approbation of the freemen of the colony or their representatives. This was the first instance of legislative power granted to the people by a colonial charter, and while the population increased and material prosperity attended the province the church laid the foundation of some of its most important missions in the new world. With such a past it is a matter of great delicacy to divest the capital of Maryland of the honor of having the primate reside there. Therefore it is more than probable that for a part of the year the capital and Baltimore may divide the honor.

The affairs of the world are moving with such lightning rapidity at the close of the nineteenth century that the importance of having a high ecclesiastical dignitary in residence in Washington is universally recognized. It is true that the apostolic delegate, the personal representative of the pope, lives in Washington, but his powers and influence are entirely different from those of the archbishop of Baltimore.

In connection with Mgr. Martinelli, it is interesting to recall the fact that until a few weeks ago he was prior general of the Augustinians, which order is now so prominently before the public in connection with the troubles in the Philippines. While the papal delegate still holds his membership in the order, he has been succeeded as head by Very Rev. Dr. Rodriguez, who was his vicar. The new appointee has given great satisfaction to the Augustinians, who regard Dr. Rodriguez as a man of exceptional executive ability, and one who will look well after the interests of his monks, having been with the order since he was 16 years old. He is now about 46. The vast property of the Augustinians in the Philippine islands and the stand taken against them by the natives will require in the adjustment that must come the most silken gloved diplomacy on the part of church and state. Dr. Rodriguez is expected to come to the United States to help in the rescue of his order so perilously situated in our new Asiatic possessions. The prior general is amply equipped by experience in the archipelago, having been sent to the Philippine missions immediately after his ordination to the priesthood. For several years he was rector of the college in New Segovia. When recalled to Rome, he was made vicar general of the Augustinians in 1896. Dr. Rodriguez is a Spaniard by birth. It is expected that he will come to Washington early in the new year.

Next to Spain, Rome has suffered most pecuniarily from the war with the United States. In the one item of Peter's pence the annual contribution of the faithful throughout the world to the personal income of the holy father, a great falling off has been observed. The poverty of Spain and Portugal does not permit them to be as open handed to Rome as formerly, nor are France and Austria as liberal as they were, while there is a decided falling off from America.

The personal expenses of the pontiff are insignificant, but the maintenance of a court and an army requires quite a large outlay, part of which is furnished by Peter's pence. The pontifical army is composed of the Noble guard, consisting of about 50 young men; the Swiss guard, 100 in number; the Palatine guard, 100 men and 17 officers, and the gendarmes, about 100 strong. An army official newspaper called La Fedelta Cattolica (Catholic Loyalty) is published weekly. The general expenses of the Vatican are large, its army, its household, its repairs, its secretaries and other big items mounting high up.

The church has never before had to deal with issues so radical and so suddenly forced on her as the results of our short war with Spain. The concordat arranged between the Vatican and the Spanish government means an agreement between the sovereign pontiff and the king of Spain concerning religious matters. By the terms of the concordat made in the reign of Ferdinand VI, in 1753, through the efforts and skill of Abbe Figueroa, the right of the sovereign to name the incumbent to all the great benefices of the kingdom was conceded. The salary of the archbishop of Santiago, under Spanish rule, was $18,000 a year; that of the bishop of Havana, $18,000.—Washington Post.

PRIESTS AT HANGINGS.

Why Are They So Frequently Seen Ministering to the Condemned?

Two men were hanged in the city jail of Chicago recently. Both were attended in their last moments by a Catholic priest. Hence we hear repeated the old charge that the great majority of murderers are Catholics. Let us look for a moment into the facts of these cases.

One of the men hanged was a weak-minded Catholic, but little more than a boy, who, with wicked companions, had taken part in a hold up, the victim of which was killed. The other was George Jacks, a notorious criminal, sentenced to be hanged for a well planned and heinous murder. Father Dore, the regular attendant at the jail, and Father Boarman, the Jesuit missionary, gave these men the last rites of the church and assisted them on the scaffold. Druggan, who had once tasted the consolations of his religion and subsequently fallen away, was easily prepared, and not only made his sacramental confession, but received the viaticum. Not so with Jacks, or Jacques, his true name; he had lived without any belief. He stated that his mother was an Irish Catholic, who, being married to a French non-Catholic, was not suffered to practice her faith. In consequence of this he himself received no religious training.

A year ago he happened to drift into a Catholic church in Chicago, where he heard some sermons at a mission conducted by Fathers Boarman and Magevney. He was so impressed by what he saw and heard that, like so many other infidels, he reached the conclusion that if there had indeed been any revelation made by God to man that revelation was possessed and taught by the Catholic church. And so in the hour of his utmost need, when he had given up all hopes of earthly mercy, he asked for the priest whom he had heard at that mission. He made a fervent confession, and being invested with the scapular, praying most earnestly, he gave up his soul, crying aloud as the trap fell, "O God, be merciful to me, a sinner!"

In these cases we see exemplified the reasons why it so often happens that criminals are attended by Catholic priests on the scaffold. It is because, first, Catholic priests go after these poor outcasts of humanity with much more zeal and seek much more earnestly to reclaim them at the last moment than do Protestant clergymen; secondly, Catholics who have fallen away from the practice of their religion are as likely, and perhaps more likely, to commit crime than other persons, and, lastly, infidels have commonly a contempt for Protestantism and a belief that if there be any religious truth it is with the Catholic church. Murderers most commonly belong to this class, and if they send for a minister of religion at all when they find themselves face to face with death it is most likely to be a Catholic priest.—Chicago New World.

IMPROVEMENT OF HABITS.

Some Advice to Parents Concerning This Important Subject.

Improvement of the habits of children is an important object which will claim the parent's attention. Of the power of habits and the effects they produce in life every one who reflects upon the constitution of his own mind and the causes of his actions must be sensible.

Indeed the most durable good acquired by education will frequently be found to be that which has been indirectly obtained by habit rather than what was immediately proposed. The language taught may be forgotten, the science which was the object of study may be imperfectly understood and soon neglected, but the habits of attention, of diligence and of reasoning which have been indirectly acquired will remain and may be applied to the most useful purposes of life.

The principal habits to be inculcated are order and regularity, obedience, diligence and perseverance. To this head may be referred the regulation of the temper. The best sort of learning is that which teaches children to command themselves, to cherish contentment, to suffer with fortitude and to seek and be satisfied with such innocent enjoyments as are within their reach. Self denial is the basis of self command, and without it nothing great or good can be expected.

Instead of suffering the child to grasp at every gratification which is presented to him, he should be taught to check himself; to reflect upon the lawfulness of the enjoyment and the probable consequence of indulging in it.

Catholic Women In Chile.

The women of Chile are one of the strongest elements in upholding Catholicity and its influence. They are very devout. You see them in the churches weekdays and Sunday, kneeling on the stone floors and saying their prayers. You meet them on the streets going to confession or mass, each carrying a prayer rug in one hand and a prayer book in the other. As in Peru and Bolivia, the women in Chile wear solid black when they go to church. They cover their heads with black mantles, and a church congregation makes you think of a nunnery with all of the nuns clad in black. Indeed to wear white at such a time is a sign of grief and shame rather than of purity and joy. It is the custom for women who have done wrong to put on white clothes and shroud their heads in white shawls to show that they are penitent and are resolved to be good for the future.—Pittsburg Catholic.

Catholic Parochial Schools.

At the diocesan synod held at the New York cathedral Nov. 23 Archbishop Corrigan said that 60,000 children are in attendance upon the parochial schools of the diocese. There is still a demand for 17 more schools, he added, although 35 new ones have been built since the assembling of the preceding synod in 1895.—Catholic News.

A QUICK SURRENDER.

BY HAL FOSTER HARRINGTON.

Amy Willis took up her assignment slip, and read, "Go to South Carolina; get a story of the storm of the 5th, from inhabitants of rice plantations on the C—— River."

At 6 p. m. she was comfortably settled in a south bound car. In her heart was unalloyed pleasure. First, she was returning to her home and people; second, it was a professional honor to be chosen to go on this mission. Perhaps her hard work was to bear fruit at last. Third, she was pleased to be rid of a certain importunate wooer. She was sure he would take the firm "No," she had written him only yesterday, as final, and it would be a relief to both of them to be out of each other's way for a time.

It was a glorious winter day in the South. Crisp, fresh, inspiring.

Down the old avenue of oaks came a queer looking equipage. Four boards on four immensely high wheels surmounted by a shaky seat, composed the "dog-cart" as its owner called it. Why, she alone knew. It was drawn by a gaunt white plough-horse, who fell over himself at every step.

Sitting on the shaky elevation was an old lady, wrapped in a green plaid shawl. On her head was a bonnet known in that part of the country as a "chicken." It resembled a shaker's headgear. She sat as firmly erect as Miss Betsy Trotwood of stately memory.

By her side, looking like a blithe young robin in suit of brown and red, sat Miss Willis—special correspondent for the Times. She held the reins and appeared lost in contemplation of the horse. To complete the picture, a small darkey sat in back of the vehicle. He presented a unique appearance. Arrayed in a profusion of rags many sizes too large for him, he sat with his bare skinny legs dangling from the "dog-cart."

Suddenly there was a dull thud. Presto! the darky boy flat in the road.

"What's the matter?" asked the stately lady. She was a trifle deaf.

"Oh, dear! you ought not to mind him; he always goes to sleep, and falls out."

"What do you do then?"

"Oh, nothing. He picks himself up and runs after us. The sand is so deep he can't hurt himself. I'm sorry, dear, I'm afraid you will find it hard to start Martha."

Martha was the horse.

"Why?"

"Oh! she always takes a nap when she's stopped."

"What do you do then?"

"Oh! I generally bring my knitting, and then it is pleasant to watch the pines nod to each other. It's so peaceful."

"Well, you're a peaceful lot, Sam and Martha sleeping, and you blessed thing, you watching the trees," muttered the reporter with a groan and a laugh.

She was due in an hour's time for an interview with the owner of a plantation four miles away. At this rate of progress she would arrive a week hence.

"Go on, Martha Washington," she commanded. Martha was obdurate. Interviews and irate editors were beneath her notice. The journalist screamed herself hoarse.

"Don't get so excited," begged her companion. "Martha will wake up soon; she always wakes up, doesn't she, Sam?"

Fired by this timely compliment, Martha gave a lurch which sent Sam flying out on his head, and jogged heavily on. Amy grew hopeful. She had forgotten at the end of a mile, her companion was to be left at a friend's house. This necessitated Martha's stopping for so long that she fell into a sleep which promised to be eternal. Miss Willis groaned and prayed alternately.

Just as hope became extinct, the white animal roused again.

Another mile was traversed. Amy's hopes aroused once more. Perhaps Martha would arrive at their destination without "falling asleep" again. Vain hope. Just then the quadruped stopped and breathed heavily. "Go on, you shall go on, you must!" shrieked the newspaper maiden in high staccato. Martha was oblivious to threats.

Amy was in despair.

"What will make this horse go, Sam? Tell me and I'll give you a four-bladed knife with a saw."

Sam was not above bribery.

"Ef you won't tole massus, I'll tole yer, miss. Stick a pin in dat hoss, dat mek him go, sure."

"Sam, you are a wicked boy. I'll try it. Everything must be sacrificed to a story."

She took her hat pin, and kneeling down, deftly began to probe the sleeping animal. A shout of laughter aroused her. Glancing in the direction of the sound, she saw a young man emerging from the woods. She dropped the pin. "You?" she asked. Her tones were not conciliatory. He did not notice that fact. He advanced to the side of the vehicle.

"I beg your pardon, but if I mistake not I read an article in the Times a few weeks ago under the head of Cruelty to Animals. It moved me to tears. It was signed A. W. I am pleased to note that you practice as you preach, Miss Willis."

Miss Willis did not smile. She spoke plainly. "I was so happy this morning. I might have known it could not last. What in mercy's name, brings you to these parts?"

"I am hunting the deer," answered the audacious youth.

"Deer are apt to frequent the highway." This with great dignity.

"Exactly, so I notice, in these parts. But may I ask what you, this fiery steed, and your outrider, are doing here? Are you on business or pleasure?"

"Oh! business, if I ever get there. Mr. Hood was to meet me at three o'clock to-day to describe to me the breaking of his rice banks."

"The very man I'm after. Suppose you take me along," suggested this wily creature.

"You may get in, I suppose, if you really have business with him. Not that it will do you any good. I expect to sit here until Gabriel awakens Sam and Martha."

"I'll readily keep you company until then."

He climbed in and took the reins. Martha no sooner felt a masculine control than she roused up, and took to her heels. To the astonishment of Amy, and ecstasy of Sam, the old horse fairly flew.

Another mile was quickly traversed.

"Why! the road is covered with water, it's a mill branch, surely," suddenly wailed Amy. "Oh! dear, troubles never come singly, first you, and now this."

"Don't be rude, Miss Willis. You may yet live to bless my appearance on the scene. Shall we proceed?"

"Yes, go on. I must get that story."

Into the water went the horse and vehicle. Sam remained on dry land. His life might not appear more valuable than others. It was more so to him. He was soon asleep. In an instant he was aroused by a woman's shriek, a man's muttered imprecation, and the noise of rending wood. He stood up to see Martha walking from the water with the shafts and dashboard of the "dog-cart" behind her. Miss Willis was left in the remainder of the vehicle, in the centre of the stream.

He emerged in an instant, mad and dirty. At sight of him, Amy's grief was turned to joy.

"What a joke! wait a minute till I sketch you. Oh! what a story for the Times. Great head lines. The editor of our esteemed contemporary, the Evening Screamer, on an investigating tour of the mud washed up by the recent Southern storms."

The young man waited patiently. His hour had come and he knew it.

"When you are through with your sketch and laugh, Miss Willis, will you kindly tell me how you expect to get out of this place? Your perch to say the least is insecure."

She glanced at the muddy water. It would surely reach to her waist. She blushed furiously.

"I am sure I don't know. You, being a man, are supposed to come to the rescue, are you not?" she answered with an attempt at her usual innocence.

He smiled a little.

"You flatter me in mistaking me for a saint. For years you have metaphorically kicked and buffeted me about. My day has now arrived. Before I take you from your perilous position, tell me, was that 'No,' you sent me a week ago, final?"

"Certainly," tells with all the dignity compatible with the situation.

"Your reason?"

"Ah, I admire your independent soul. Adieu, Miss Willis. May your loved liberty avail you much."

With a melodramatic flourish, he departed.

"Come back, oh, take me out of this," she wailed.

"Certainly not. I have been well brought up. Nothing would induce me to take any woman but my affianced wife in my arms. I assure you. You surprise me."

She was angry, amazed, but above all, plucky.

"Go, your ungentlemanly conduct will make another story for our paper. I will walk through the water."

He played his last card.

"My! what quantities of water-snakes," he remarked with deepest interest. His card was a trump. With a shriek she sank back.

"Snakes! Tom, please, please, dear Tom come back."

He was there in a flash. He held out his arms.

"Will you marry me?"

"Yes, oh, yes."

"Not if you dislike me."

"I don't dislike you and—and you know it."

He promptly bore her to land.

As he placed her on the ground he murmured dreamily,—

"You ought to read up on snakes. It seems to me that as a youngster I learned that they hibernated in winter."

Victoria Pudding.

Victoria pudding is a dish very common at English tables, and is made from boiled potatoes. Pass them, while hot and in the mealy stage, through a sieve, and mix with them a little butter, sugar, two eggs to six medium-sized potatoes, three tablespoonfuls of cream, and the grated rind of a lemon. A pudding-dish is buttered and preserved plums or peaches spread on the bottom. The potato pudding is poured over and baked in a moderate oven. Serve hot with powdered sugar sprinkled over the top.

HER CONSIENCE.

It was a question of conscience—a New England conscience at that; moreover it began with a capital C.

"I've got it in the house, and I might as well make it up," mused Miss Hannah Davis.

"It" was a dress—a silk dress—a relic of days gone by.

"It's been lying there all these years," she went on, "and it seems real kind of sinful packed away there and not doing a soul a mite of good. It ain't right to have things put away 'where moth and rust doth corrupt.'"

She quoted this Bible authority with satisfaction.

"And it would save me buying, too," she added, hastily. "My old alpaca isn't very good. I've turned and washed it till it really ain't decent, and 'twould cost considerable to buy a new one. And this dress all right in the house and costing nothing. I s'pose folks would think I was terribly extravagant, but then, I don't care. I guess if I give the money I'd take for a new black dress and give it to the missionary society, and wear the silk instead, nobody can find fault; but then, I ain't obliged to tell 'em anyway. And it's awful handsome, too."

"I shall look better than any one there," she said half aloud.

"As well as any one," she corrected.

"And I shan't tell any one that it's an old silk made over. That ain't necessary. You needn't tell all you know, Aunt Jane used to say, and I'm sure she was a very good woman."

She smiled happily as she gave one parting glance and turned away.

There was a perceptible stir when Miss Hannah Davis, closely followed by her sister-in-law, entered the parsonage.

"Hannah Davis's got a new dress," some one whispered loudly as she passed through a little knot of women on the way to the bedroom to lay aside her wraps.

"And it's a silk one, too."

The eyes of the entire assembly were on her as she emerged from the little room and sank down into the nearest empty chair without making the usual round of handshaking.

"She feels stuck up," one woman whispered to her neighbor. "Well, I guess a silk dress don't make her any better'n the rest of us." The speaker reared her head and spoke across the intervening workers to Miss Hannah.

"We were just talking about a subscription, Miss Hannah," she said in very audible tones. "It's for the Leavitt's. You know them. They've had awful luck lately, and there's a lot due on the mortgage, and we thought if we could just give them a little lift it would be real Christian like."

"I think 'twould be real nice," Miss Hannah assented warmly. "I'll be glad to give something, though I can't give much, you know."

She blushed as she spoke. All eyes were on her in the most uncomfortable way. Why did they kind of smile?

They must know she didn't have much money.

Could she afford to give fifty cents, she wondered.

"Well, how much will you give?"

The voice came with startling distinctness.

"Five dollars, say?"

Miss Hannah started visibly. What were they thinking of? Her hands fell into her lap. They touched the smooth silk. It must be the dress.

"It's an old"—she started to say, but the words died on her lips.

"What did you say?" her tormentor leaned forward.

"Yes, you can put me down for five," she said in a metallic voice.

A thrill seemed to pass through the room. Then some newcomers entered, and eager attention was turned to them.

"I hope you realize that you are properly punished for your sinful pride, Hannah Davis," she said, as she locked the door of her little room that night and hastily took off the offending dress.

"It was vanity all the time that made you do it and you knew it, but tried to salve your conscience with saying it was 'economy.'"

She spoke rapidly.

"If you was so terribly anxious about being economical," scornfully, "why didn't you make over that magenta delaine?" A pause.

"And then you tried to hush your conscience by saying you'd give the money a new dress would cost to the missionary society.

"And now—now you've gone and given $5 to that woman for her subscription, and you knew you couldn't afford it, and it's a sin to spend money you can't afford."

She stared hard at the dress.

"And then you was scared into it because you was so proud, and pride is another sin. You didn't want them to think but what you could buy the dress and give away money, too. That makes three sins."

Then she went to the little davenport and wrote two notes.

Into one she slipped a five dollar bill and directed it to the treasurer of the missionary society, then she directed the other to the minister's wife and went steadily across the room and pinned it on the bundle.

"I shall send it over the first thing in the morning," she said.

"I guess my conscience will rest easier now," she said.—Commercial Tribune.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

It is truly wonderful when one comes to think of it—the great amount of amusement that can be given for such a small addition as is given daily this week by the Bennett & Moulton Company at Music Hall. The carload of scenery (which is so often advertised but seldom seen) in this case it turns out to be a reality, for it is the opinion of all who have seen the performances up to date to be among the best lot of scenery seen here by any popular-price company. Then, again, the repertoire is composed of standard comedies and plays which have made world-wide reputations, such as "Darkest Russia," "Bonnie Scotland," "My Partner," "Mr. Barnes of New York," "A Daughter of the South," and others of equal merit. The orchestra is also a pleasing feature. Very clever specialties are introduced in every performance by James F. Kelly and Miss Dorothy Kent. Dan Simmons' eccentric tramp and dancing acts are the best seen in a long time. Another feature is the views of the wargraph. These views are truly wonderful. Last, but far from least, is the acting company. Too much cannot be said of their versatility and clever work. J. Frank Burke, Arthur Evans, Jas. F. Kelly, Jas. K. Appleby, Jr., Dan Simons, Joseph Harris, Miss Isabel Pitt Lewis, Beth Sommerville and Dorothy Kent compose the cast and it would be hard to improve on any one of them. Taken as a whole it can be said that a better popular-priced combination has never been seen in this city and they well deserve the large attendance they are receiving. "Darkest Russia" will be the attraction offered tonight.

are variously estimated at from 50 to 100. This would give North Plainfield 4,540 population on the same basis, or nearly 1,500 less than the estimate, or a population for both localities of 19,135. So that 20,000 is not far from what our population really is.

This will appear more forcible by comparison with the populations of of 1880 and 1890, which was as follows:

Plainfield	8,125	11,367
North Plainfield	3,217	4,350
Totals	11,342	15,517

The population for North Plainfield includes the township, the returns for U. S. census not separating them. The borough by the State census in 1895, however, was credited 3,750.

The general opinion is that compared with other localities, we cover more territory, being considerably spread out. This is undoubtedly true. Plainfield has some seventy miles of streets, according to the officials maps, and North Plainfield 25 miles.

There we have the cause of the difficulty. If the carriers are to cover all this territory, the two North Plainfield carriers must each cover 12½ miles every day. No wonder both were down sick with the grip during the bad weather, and no wonder they cannot deliver the mail in time.

By the same process of reasoning the nine Plainfield carriers average less than eight miles per trip twice a day. This shows conclusively, we think, that North Plainfield is entitled to more carriers to be equal to Plainfield, which experience shows has no more than it needs.

If the suggestion at the beginning of this article is acted upon by your readers who are affected, we do not doubt but that the department will recognize the fairness of the request and grant us relief at once.

Thanking you for your courtesy in the matter, I am,

Very truly yours,
T. W. Morrison.

PEOPLE COME AND GO.

PERSONAL MENTION OF INTEREST TO PRESS READERS.

Some Come to Enjoy Pleasures of Plainfield, Others Journey to Either Mountain or Shore for Recreation.

J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street, was able to go out Tuesday for the first time since his illness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Haynes, of North avenue, have been entertaining relatives from Hunterdon county.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cribbon and family, of New York, spent New Year's Day with Mrs. Cribbon's uncle, Michael Kenney, of East Fourth street.

Miss Catharine H. McClure, daughter of W. K. McClure, has sent out invitations for a tea to be given Saturday afternoon, January 14th, at her home on Crescent avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Creveling, of this city, have returned from their visit at Milford, N. J., bringing with them Mr. Creveling's mother, Mrs. George Creveling, of that place.

Hillier & Co's. New Location.

Hillier & Co., the popular laundry firm, are now located in their new store on West Front street. The store is in every way a model one and well calculated to transact the increasing business of this well-known house. The firm is now ready to receive their patrons and will continue to give all satisfaction. They do fine laundry work, and their dying cannot be surpassed. Miss Brown, the efficient manager of the store, is in charge. The store is easy of access and is right on the line of the trolley. Note the new advertisement of the firm in The Daily Press.

A Sudden Death.

Miss Mary Melvin, aged 56 years, died suddenly last night at the home of her sister, Mrs. John Witteman, of 546 West Sixth street. Two years ago Miss Melvin had a stroke of paralysis from which she never recovered, and has been ailing ever since. Her death was not unexpected, yet it came suddenly to all. Miss Millvin, besides her sister, leaves a nephew, Patrick Melvin, who is clerk in Clevely's candy store on North avenue.

At the Pool Tournament.

A handicap pool tournament started in Krewson's pool rooms on West Front street last evening. There are twenty-eight entries. Three games will be played every evening. Last night Melvin, 50, defeated H. Wilson, 45, by a score of 50 to 33. Whiteside, 50, defeated Rushmore, 50, by a score of 50 to 45. Watson, 50, defeated Sutterlein, 55, by a score of 50 to 47.

Gazelle's Condition to be Explained.

A meeting of the Gazelle Engine Company was held last night, and it was decided that a committee of three be appointed to meet the board of engineers of the fire department and the fire committee of the Council to explain the present condition of affairs in the company, how out of thirty-one members, they cannot count on over four men to attend each fire.

A Joint Installation.

At the meeting of the Sons of Veterans held Tuesday evening arrangements were made for the joint installation to be held next week Tuesday evening when the newly-elected officers will be placed in office in connection with the installation of the G. A. R. and Woman's Relief Corps officers.

Mrs. James to Speak.

Mrs. Darwin R. James, president of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, will address the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church, at its quarterly meeting which will be held tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock in the church parlors.

Anniversary Continued.

The anniversary exercises at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were continued last evening with an address by Rev. James A. Macmillan on "The Relation of the Church to the Community."

PUT DOUGLASS ON RECORD.

Lincoln Made Him Commit Himself on the Slavery Issue.

Perhaps no anecdote ever told of Mr. Lincoln illustrates more forcibly his "long-headedness" in laying plans, not even that incident when he asked the "Jedge" a question in his debate with Mr. Douglas, which may be told as follows:

One afternoon during that joint debate Mr. Lincoln was sitting with his friends, planning the programme, when he was observed to go off in a kind of reverie, and for some time appeared totally oblivious to everything around him. Then slowly bringing his right hand up, holding it a moment in the air, and then letting it fall with a quick slap upon his thigh, he said:

"There, I am going to ask the 'Jedge' (he always called him 'The Jedge') a question to-night, and I don't care the ghost of a continental which way he answers it. If he answers it one way it will lose him the senatorship. If he answers it the other way it will lose him the presidency."

No one asked him what the question was; but that evening it was the turn for Mr. Douglas to speak first, and right in the midst of his address, all at once Mr. Lincoln roused up, as if a new thought had suddenly struck him, and said:

"Jedge, will you allow me to ask you one question?"

"Certainly," says Mr. Douglas.

"Suppose, jedge, there was a new town or colony just started in some Western territory; and suppose there were precisely 100 householders—voters—there; and suppose, jedge, that ninety-nine did not want slavery and one did. What would be done about it?"

Judge Douglas beat about the bush, but failed to give a direct answer.

"No, no, jedge, that won't do. Tell us plainly what will be done about it!"

Again Douglas tried to evade; but Lincoln would not be put off, and he insisted that a direct answer should be given. At last Douglas admitted that the majority would have their way, by some means or other.

Mr. Lincoln said no more. He had secured what he wanted. Douglas had answered the question as Illinois people would have answered it, and he got the senatorship. But that answer was not satisfactory to the people of the South. In 1860 the Charleston convention split in two factions, and "it lost him the presidency," and it made Abraham Lincoln president.—Independent.

HIS LONGEST DAY.

The Assurance of a Prolonged Life Fully Justified.

There was in those days a serious-mannered Irish member named Blake (not to be confounded with the ex-premier of Canada, sitting member for South Longford), who is remembered for a brief correspondence he read to the delighted House. It was introduced in a speech delivered in debate on the Irish Sunday Closing bill. Mr. Blake had, he confidentially informed the House, an uncle who regularly took six tumblers of whisky toddy daily. This troubled him, and after much thought he resolved to write and remonstrate with the relative. The following was the letter:

"My Dear Uncle: I write to say how pleased I should be if you could see your way to giving up your six glasses of whiskey a day. I am sure you would find many advantages in doing so, the greatest of which would be that, as I am persuaded, it would be the means of prolonging your days."

The uncle replied:

"My Dear Nephew: I am much obliged to you for your dutiful letter. I was so much struck by what you said, and, in particular, by your kind wish to lengthen my days, that last Friday I gave up the whiskey. I believe you are right, my boy, as to my days being lengthened, for, bedad! it was the longest day I ever remember."—North American Review.

MAMMOTH INDIAN BASKET.

When Finished, Obliged to Tear Down the House to Remove It.

In a San Francisco shop there is an Indian basket more remarkable than any in museums and collections. It is nearly five feet in diameter—three feet being considered a monstrous size—and of an intricate weave. It was made by a Pome Indian woman in the village near Ukiah, and the work consumed almost two years. When she started to make the basket she intended to eclipse all the previous efforts of the members of her tribe, but she never considered just how big the basket really was to me. Possibly she did not think it worth considering, but when she came to remove it she found that the basket was too large to be taken out of the house by any of the exits. What was to be done? At last the problem was solved by the purchaser paying enough for the basket to make it profitable for the woman to tear the house down. This was done, and the basket was soon on its way to San Francisco. The woman realized enough on it to enable her to live in affluence the rest of her days, and she is now looked up to as the millionaire of her tribe.—New York Journal.

The Same Thing.

Farmer Nubbins (shouting across the garden fence to his next-door neighbor)—"Hey, there! What are you burying in that hole?"

Nubbins—"Garden seeds, eh? Looks to me mighty like one of my hens."

Neighbor—"That's all right. The seeds are inside of her."—New York World.

MUST COME A CHANGE IN FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Present Members Are All Exempt By Law.

TWO PLANS ARE PROPOSED.

CHIEF DOANE EXPLAINS THEIR COMPARATIVE COST.

Only a Few Volunteer Firemen Now Attend Fires—Outsiders Often Help—The Details of the Proposed "Call" System—Re-organization on Old Lines Would Necessitate 120 New Firemen.

A peculiar state of affairs exists in the Plainfield Fire Department today. The term of service of every volunteer firemen in the city has expired and one and all are now entitled to exemption. There are only a few of them who now turn out to fires and they do it from inclination. They seriously object to doing all the work, however, and ask that the city take some action to put the department on a different basis, or provide new material for the old companies.

By the State law, a volunteer fireman is exempt from the payment of taxes on $500 worth of assessable property and also from jury duty. At the end of seven years, the fireman becomes exempt and is entitled to withdraw from active service in the department. The benefits of exemption continue for life, however.

The situation is simply this. The fire companies are filled with men who are entitled to exemption, many of them have been so for a number of years. Most of them never attend fires but still pay their dues and continue their membership. When ever there happens to be a fire, there are a very small proportion of the volunteer firemen who turn out and they only go because they enjoy it. Then there is a class of young men in the city who always respond when they can and have now become quite expert firemen although not connected with the department in the slightest degree. When, however, the fire happens to occur in the outskirts or at some unseemly hour of the night, the department has only the few paid drivers and men to depend upon and has, in several cases, been somewhat handicapped by this lack of trained assistance.

Something has got to be done. Last Wednesday the last two remaining active members in the department Frank Putnam and Alvin TenEyck, completed their seven years of service, and are now entitled to exemption. They were both members of Gazelle Engine Company. Out of thirty-one members on the roll of that company, there are not over four, two officers and two privates, who can be counted on to attend fires.

Alert Hose Company is practically disbanded or will be as soon as the city makes suitable provision so that the members can retire in a body. There are hardly over two or three of Alert's men who turn out, and at the last fire there was not a single man to assist Driver Townley.

No. 2 Engine Company has suspended a host of its members for nonpayment of dues, only six members now being left in good standing. Most of those usually attend the fires if they are not too far away.

There are some 18 members on the roll of the Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company. Of these there is an average of four or five that turn out for a fire.

A Press reporter interviewed Chief Doane yesterday afternoon regarding the remedies possible to obviate the present state of affairs. The Chief said that he could only see two plans that could be reasonably adopted. One was to reorganize the present volunteer system and the other was to adopt the "call" system as he recommended in his annual report. The latter method, he believed, would be far better and in the end much more economical to the city.

There are now four fire companies in the city with the prospect of another being formed in the West End. According to the calculations of the Chief and other members of the department, it would be necessary to have at least thirty members in each company. According to ordinance now, the number in engine companies should be sixty, in truck companies fifty and hose companies forty. It would probably be necessary to enroll 120 to 150 new firemen if the volunteer system was reorganized. Then most of the new men would have to be instructed in the art of fighting fire.

The "call" system, as proposed by Chief Doane, would include eight men to each company. They would not be exempt from taxation, but would re-

LOSES HIS NAME FOR $29

GEORGE LELAND'S ESCAPADE PROVES AN UNFORTUNATE ONE.

Mary O'Niel Alleges That He Gave Her a Fictitious Name and Borrowed $29—Did Not Repay It—Was Arrested.

Another story of a trusting girl being duped by a man has come to light in Justice Mosher's court in the case of Mary O'Neil, a lady's maid, living on Hillside avenue, and George Leland, a plumber. The story comes out through a warrant which was issued for Leland's arrest, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses. The case will be heard before Justice Mosher this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Miss O'Neil has retained Attorney Robert M. Clark to represent her, and the warrant was issued yesterday. Miss O'Neil's story is that Leland met her one night last July, and they became acquainted. Leland, she says, gave her an assumed name, Corey Mecham, and said he was a single man, in business for himself, and was proprietor of a store on Park avenue near Front street. All this she did not learn the first night, but he told her these things as their acquaintance ripened.

Soon, she says, he began to borrow money from her, small sums, to use in his business, he said. Miss O'Neil loaned him altogether $29, none of which he ever paid back, so one night, when he came to borrow, she refused him. At another visit she asked him when he was going to return the $29 he had borrowed, but he didn't give her a satisfactory answer. He never came again, so Miss O'Neil began to make inquiries about "Meeham" and found out that his real name was Leland, that he was married, and that he had deceived her in regard to his business. Miss O'Neil then began proceedings against him.

COSTLY FOR TROLEY COMPANY.

Charles Sturtevant Receives $500 for Injuries He Received.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, Jan. 6.—The case of Charles Sturtevant, of Plainfield, brought against the Newark Traction Company for damages received while on one of their cars in Newark last June, has been settled by the courts. Mr. Sturtevant was on a trolley car when another car, going in opposite direction, collided and Mr. Sturtevant received severe injuries to his arm and wrist. He brought suit through Craig A. Marsh against the company for $5,000. The litigation was a long one and it is said has cost the Newark Traction Company $1,080. The case has been settled by Mr. Sturtevant receiving $500 in payment for damages. It is said that the plaintiff offered at first to settle for $200, but the trolley company refused.

Grand Jury Would Not Indict.

The case of Rev. Mr. Coster, formerly pastor of a colored church in this city, and who was charged with misappropriating funds, was consider by the Grand Jury, at Elizabeth, yesterday. The evidence was not strong enough to present and indictment and the case was thrown out. Mr. Spangenberg, of this city, was present to watch the case, but was disappointed inasmuch as the colored preacher was not held.

Endeavor Business.

The monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last night at the home of the Misses Runyon, of East Sixth street. After the usual routine of business was transacted games were played, and a good social time was enjoyed. Refreshments were served before the gathering dispersed.

Walter Smiles Now.

If you meet Walter Clifford Dobbins, one of the genial reporters on The Daily Press staff, congratulate him. Early this morning a bright little daughter was born to him at his home on Elmwood place. Mother and child are both doing well. The latter, it is reported, is already beginning to show a taste for a literary career.

Another Trespasser Arrested.

Wm. Hartfelder, another one of the party of hunters who are charged with trespassing on the poultry farm at Warrenville, as told in last night's Press, was arrested yesterday in this city and arraigned before Justice Moffett, who held him in $50 bail to appear before Justice Austin for trial Tuesday.

To Look After Legislation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 6—The Union County Board of Freeholders, at its meeting yesterday afternoon, appointed Freeholders Farrell, Roll and Burnet as a special legislative committee to look after important matters which are likely to come up at the next session affecting Union county.

SAID FATHER AND SON TOOK COAL FROM CARS.

FOUND GUILTY IN CITY COURT.

John and James Phillimore Fined by Judge Runyon—Father Will Pay Fine—Son Goes to Jail.

John and James Phillimore, father and son, were arraigned before City Judge this morning, charged with trespassing on the property of the Jersey Central Railroad and with stealing coal from its cars.

Last Wednesday Detective Dougherty, of the railroad force, saw a man and a boy busy throwing coal off a train that lay on the fourth track at Netherwood station. He reported the matter to Sergeant Kiely and described them. Then Kiely and the Detective visited Hollenbeck's place on North avenue, where Dougherty identified the man as John Phillimore.

A warrant was afterwards issued for the son, James Phillimore, and he was arrested by Patrolman Flynn yesterday afternoon. John Pnilmore was told to appear.

This morning they both came up before the City Judge and were given their choice between a fine of $2 each or a week in jail. The father paid his fine, but the son will go to jail. Both have been arrested before and have reputations in police circles.

MR. MARTINE CONGRATULATES.

The Farmer Orator Writes a Pleasant Letter to Senator Reed.

As an expression of kindly feeling and good fellowship, the following congratulatory letter has been sent to Hon. Charles A. Reed from James E. Martine:

"Cedar Brook," Jan. 6.

Hon. Chas. Reed:

My Dear Charley—I congratulate you on your triumph. You will pardon and appreciate my statement when I say that I wish it might have been a Democrat, for I love my party; but if it was to be a Republican I know of no other in New Jersey whom I feel more kindly to than yourself. That honor will come to your party from your election as president of the New Jersey Senate, I have no question. Again I ask you to accept congratulations.

Respectfully,
James E. Martine.

T. Clawson; recording secretary, J. M. Lewis; president, O. S. Rogers; treasurer, A. F. Randolph; senior woodward, W. Addis; junior woodward, W. H. Forrestel; senior beadle, C. Ellis; junior beadle, D. S. Miller; court deputy, C. Ryno; court physician, M. L. Clawson; chaplain, N. Bainard; trustees, R. H. Radford and E. S. F. Randolph; apothecary, E. S. F. Randolph.

Died After Long Illness.

The death of Frances J. Stansberry, of this city, is recorded. Death occurred last evening after a long illness. The funeral services will be held from the Mt. Olive Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

IT'S PRESIDENT REED OF STATE SENATE NOW

Was Chosen at Caucus of Republican Senators.

THOMPSON'S OPPOSITION.

UNANIMOUSLY SELECTED AT THE CAUCUS HELD LAST NIGHT.

All Fourteen Republican Senators are Pledged to Vote for Him—Senator Johnson to be Leader of Party on the Floor—Other Officers of the Senate Chosen — Francis Nominated Reed.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, Jan. 6.—Senator Charles A. Reed, the Tall Sycamore of Somerset, as his friends like to call him, will be President of the State Senate this year. Even the determined opposition of his erstwhile friend, Chancery Clerk L. A. Thompson, of Somerville, failed to accomplish his defeat. The Republican Senators met in the Executive Chamber at the State House, last night, and made him their unanimous choice for the office. As the Republicans are far in the majority in the Senate, such selection virtually elects him to the office as all the fourteen Republican Senators are bound by the result of last night's caucus.

Senator William M. Johnson, of Bergen county was chairman of the caucus and will be the leader of his party on the floor of the Senate. Senator-elect Pitney, of Morris, was secretary of the meeting. All the Republican Senators were present.

Senator Francis, of Monmouth, nominated Senator Reed, of Somerset, for President of the Senate. Senators Johnson, of Bergen, and Ketcham, of Essex, seconded the nomination, and and there were no other candidates. Senator Reed was chosen as the caucus candidate for President by acclamation.

There were two contests, one over the secretaryship of the Senate and the other over the office of assistant secretary. For secretary the candidates were George A. Frey, of Camden, who has had the place one year, and Augustus S. Barber, of Gloucester counter, who is secretary of the Republican State Committee. A ballot resulted in the election of Barber by a vote of 8 to 6. Frey's connection with the alleged "reform" movement in Camden is said to be the cause of his downfall.

For assistant secretary Joseph C. Kingdon, of Burlington, the present official, has as an opponent J. Frank Lindsley, editor of the Morris county Chronicle. The latter was chosen by a vote of 11 to 3. Lindsley's cause was championed by Senator Pitney. Kingdon was defeated on account of having had two terms as assistant secretary, as well as a year as private secretary to the President of the Senate.

The following officers of last year were chosen for re-election: Journal clerk, Walter E Page, of Atlantic; assistant journal clerk, John W. Clift, of

WATCHFUL WORK OF AN EMPLOYE.

Supposed to Have Been Broken by Philadelphia Train Running Sixty Miles an Hour.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, Jan. 6.—The watchfulness of the employes of the Jersey Central tral Railroad here prevented what would have undoubtedly been a serious accident on that railroad, late yesterday afternoon. A broken rail on the west bound passenger track was discovered just in time to prevent a train of passenger coaches from running over it.

There are two trains scheduled to leave New York at 4 o'clock every afternoon. One is the Philadelphia flier and takes the lead making no stops. The other is the mail train which is run as a local as far as Somerville and then goes on the main line of the Jersey Central. It is supposed that the rail was broken by the express which went over it sixty miles an hour.

A section a foot long was broken off the end of the north rail. It was discovered by one of the railroad employes shortly before the mail train came along and that train was flagged. The train was then run very slowly over the breech. The section gang was sent for and made the necessary repairs at once so that the rest of the traffic was but little delayed.

INSTALLED OFFICERS.

Reform Club Put Their Leaders Into Place in an Appropriate Manner.

The recently-elected officers of the Reform Club were installed last night with appropriate services. President William C. Smith installed M. F. Markley, first vice-president; Michael Armstrong, second vice-president; J. Q. Miles, recording secretary; B. W. Hand, financial secretary, and J. D. Spicer, treasurer. The first vice-president, M. F. Markley, welcomed the president with a few choice words.

A short programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered and then all adjourned to the basement where the Ladies' Aid had provided a sumptious collation to which all did ample justice.

The club starts the new year with $100 in the treasury, and all bills paid. Each one of the new officers were called upon for a speech, and they all replied in a few words.

Funeral of Late Mrs. Willard.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Stephen Willard were held yesterday afternoon from the First Baptist church at 2:30. Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the church officiated, and spoke kindly words of the life of the departed. There was a large attendance of friends. Interment was in Hillside, and relatives of the deceased served as pall bearers.

Another Industry in Prospect.

Percy C. Ohl, of this city, has been communicating with a New York company with the purpose in view of securing the location of their plant in this city. The company has large capital and manufactures automobile vehicles, etc. Mr. Ohl feels almost sure that he can induce the company to locate here.

GIFT TO SUPT. DOBBINS.

A GOLD-HEADED UMBRELLA PRESENTED BY SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

He Has Been Fourteen Years as Superintendent of the School—Presentation at the Christmas Exercises Last Night.

Among the last of the many Christmas entertainments was that given last evening in the Mt. Olive Baptist church, when the members of the church and Sunday-school gathered in large numbers and enjoyed a well-rendered programme of recitations and music. Those who gave recitations were Mary Coles, Pearl Webster, Florence Webster, Noland Henry, Ella Phillips, Ethel Henry, Laura Scudder, Mary Mills, Bessie Mitchell, Iva Henry, Rachel Randolph, Edward Rain and Florence Randolph. There were songs by Robert Gran and Cynthia VanNest, and dialogues by Anna and Willie Connett, and Iva Henry, Florence and Pearl Webster. A vocal duet was also given by Ethel Rogers and Pearl Webster.

During the evening a selection was given by R. W. Barnes, M. C. Dobbins, violins, and Clifford Braider, piano. Much credit is due to Miss Maynard for her efforts in drilling the scholars for the entertainment, while Miss May E. Howlett also deserves particular mention for her work. In connection with the celebration there was a large tree filled with presents. Clifford Braider took the part of Santa Claus in a very acceptable manner.

An unlooked for feature was the presentation of a handsome gold-headed silk umbrella to Superintendent M. C. Dobbins, who has been connected with the school for fourteen years. Rev. Mr. Jackson presented the umbrella on behalf of the officers and scholars of the school, and the recipient accepted the gift with a few well chosen wores of thanks.

ARGUMENT FOR ROESEL.

His Counsel Will Make Another Attempt to Save His Neck.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 6—Lawyer Frank Bergen, counsel for young Louis Roesel, who was convicted last May of murdering aged Mr. Pitts, of Summit, and sentenced to be hanged this month, will argue for a new trial before the United States Supreme Court in Washington next Tuesday. The State will be represented by Prosecutor English and Attorney General Gray.

The first appeal was on the ground that the Court of Oyer of Terminer was not legally in session and had no jurisdiction, but Justices sitting in the appeal were equally divided, part affirming the decision and the others disagreeing. Another appeal was taken and dismissed, and application for a writ of habeas corpus was also denied. The case was carried to the United States Supreme Court as an outgrowth of the entanglement.

BULLETS SHOT OFF BY A TRUCK.

Cartridges Dropped in the Road and Run Over by Heavy Vehicle.

Bullets were flying thickly around North avenue yesterday morning. It sounded at first as though a small Spanish war had broken out. Some one went along that street and dropped several loaded catridges in the middle of the street. One of Hand's trucks passed by a little later and the wheels of the truck struck the cartridges and exploded them, sending the bullets and mud in all directions.

Fortunately, all but one or two of them flew harmlessly up in the air. One of them struck the door of William H. Rogers' store and left its mark in the woodwork. Fred Sebring, the manager, stood looking out at the time, and if the ball had gone a little higher it would have gone through the glass and struck him. Another one threw up some mud on the large plate glass window, but must have struck the brick work above as there is no mark to be seen on the woodwork.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CONSULTATION.

New Council Committee Meets Board of Engineers Informally.

A consultation was held at Fire Headquarters last evening between the members of the Board of Engineers, President F. H. Andrews, of the Council, and the members of the fire committee, Messrs. Coriell, Mellick and Buckle. They looked over the apparatus and houses and the Councilmen seemed well pleased with what they saw. Then followed an informal talk that lasted until after 11 o'clock when the points brought out in the interview with Chief Doane, to be found in another column, were discussed.

Mrs. Harry G. Adams, of East Front street, who is detained at the hospital the result of an operation, still continues to improve.

TO CONNECT SUMMIT WITH PLAINFIELD.

A Trolley Line Proposed Through Passaic Valley.

WAY OF WASHINGTONVILLE.

LINE TO WASHINGTONVILLE SOON SEEMS VERY PROBABLE.

Assemblyman Cooper Wants It Extended Out Smalleytown County Road to Passaic Valley and Thence to Summit—Street Railway Favors Trolley Through Gap and to Inn on Mountain.

The granting of the franchise for the Scotch Plains extention of the lines of the Plainfield Street Railway seems to mean even a greater advance of that company's lines than is apparent on the surface. For two years some of the residents of Washingtonville have been working to get the company to extend its lines in that direction. The plan proposed was to extend the Somerset line through the gap to Washingtonville and thence up the north side of the first mountain to the Mountain Park Inn.

The trolley capitalists were willing to make the addition but they did not consider it of sufficient importance to their own interests to bring the necessary labor here just for that one branch. So they told the people of Washingtonville that the projected line would go forward when the Scotch Plains extension was made as the labor would then be here and the work quickly accomplished.

There was some opposition to the trolley road from property owners along the line of the proposed extension but they have now come out in favor of the line to Washingtonville. As Chandler Biker, one of the prominent stockholder in the Plainfield Company, is also interested in the Mountain Park Inn, he is naturally interested in connecting it with Plainfield by trolley. The people of Washingtonville have agreed to assist in the preparation of the roadway for the line. The necessary permission from the North Plainfield township committee can be had, it is confidently stated, for the asking as all the members of the committee are heartily in favor of a trolley for Washingtonville.

The latest development in the trolley extension movement has been started by Assemblyman John Cooper, of Somerset county. He lives in Warren township, back of Washingtonville. He is now agitating the question of a trolley road from Washingtonville over the Smalleytown road to the Passaic Valley and thence on to Summit. That road has just been designated as a county road and will be cared for as such. It is his plan to have the trolley road at the side of the road, and he has been at work securing consents from the interested property-owners. He is working on that part of the line from Washingtonville through Warren township to the Passaic Valley bridge which marks the county line.

This proposed line would undoubtedly be of great value to Plainfield, as well as to the territory through which it would pass, for besides bringing in a large amount of trade to this city it would serve as a connecting link between Plainfield and Summit which, though in the same county, can only communicate by rail by the way of Elizabeth and Newark, a rather roundabout way.

Received a Severe Fall.

Mrs. Yaeger, of Liberty street, is confined to her home as the result of a severe fall which she had last Wednesday morning in the back of her yard. In some unknown manner her feet slipped and she fell, striking her head and body with much force. No serious injury seems to have resulted, but Mrs. Yaeger is obliged to remain inside for the present.

Lost His Arm.

Frank Gotlack, of Scotch Plains, who was found recently near the Aluminum Press and Plate Works in a dazed condition, was obliged to have his arm amputated. He is still confined to Muhlenberg Hospital, but is recovering rapidly.

Rather Live in the Borough.

In a few days S. B. Joseph and family, of this city, will move to the borough in a house recently purchased. Mr. Joseph is impressed with the idea that the borough suits him and his folks better than the city.

At the Hospital.

There are twenty-one patients confined at the hospital and everybody is kept very busy. Some of the cases are critical ones.

Back on the Force.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THAT BEEF SCANDAL

Praise For the Refrigerated Article Furnished the Army.

NO BAD MEAT WAS ISSUED

Gen. Miles and Others Contradicted by Col. Osgood of the Commissary Department. Government Had Nothing to Do With Chemically Prepared Beef.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.--Colonel Henry B. Osgood, commissary of subsistence, who served with General Miles at Tampa, and at Camp Thomas and Santiago, was before the war inquiry commission yesterday.

In brief, Colonel Osgood said that the rations throughout the war were as good, if not better, than those usually issued to the regular army.

The beef, he said, was particularly good, better than any he had ever eaten at an army post.

It was the first time he explained that he had ever seen the refrigerated beef issued in the army, and it was far better than the contract beef he had generally had at various posts. He said that he had had under him a butcher of twenty-two years' experience, who cut and issued the beef, and this man was under strict orders never to issue a pound of bad beef.

The government, he said, had a very good contract with Swift and Company, whereby they kept a supply of beef on hand in refrigerator cars and ships.

Each day witness called for what meat he wanted and the contractors put it out on the block. They were responsible for it till the meat got to the troops, and if the meat was bad when delivered it went back to the contractor.

The contractor made good whatever meat was rejected.

Colonel Osgood sai dthat there were many complaints as to the appearance of the meat.

It had the green mould or "beard" on the surface, as had been explained by other witnesses. This was repulsive looking, the witness said, but the meat underneath was perfectly sound and was really prime beef, much better in fact than any beef killed on the spot.

Witness corroborated the testimony of Major Duncan Harrison, that after the men who disliked the appearance of the refrigerator meat had had a short experience with meat on the hoof they were glad to get back to the American meat.

Colonel Osgood said that there were where a board of survey of the Second United States volunteers had condemned a lot of beef and reported it rotten. The contractor protested to Colonel Osgood that the beef was good, and brought a steak out from one of the condemned quarters. The steak was kept twenty-four hours longer off the ice and then served to the members of the board that had condemned it. They did not know the antecedents of the meat and pronounced it particularly fine.

General Beaver said: "Colonel Osgood, it has been alleged before this commission, not in sworn testimony, and not in a way perhaps to demand any great attention, but still it has been stated, that beef sent to Santiago was prepared in some way with chemicals to preserve it. Can you tell us anything on that head or why any one should use chemicals on meat when it was apparently so easy to preserve it in refrigerators?"

"Yes; I can tell you a good deal about that," said Colonel Osgood. "The meat treated in that way was not the property of the government, or of any of our contractors. I was aboard the Comal one day and Colonel Weston, chief commissary, showed me four quarters of beef hanging in the sun, which he said was 'process beef.' It was prepared by Armour & Co., at the request of an inventor named Powell, who claimed that he had discovered a chemical preparation that would keep meat in a hot climate without ice. It was purely a private experiment, and was not issued to the troops. I looked at it and it seemed to be perfectly good. There was no mould on it as on the refrigerator beef and it had no smell. I believe Colonel Weston tasted some of it. So far as I know he was the only officer who tasted it."

"I think Colonel Daly saw this meat, and probably the fact that this beef was there gave the start to all this talk of chemically prepared beef. It was purely a private experiment and the government had nothing to do with it."

A Lynching in Alaska.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 6.--The steamer Rosalie, has arrived here from the north with one hundred passengers, all from Dawson. The steamer had $50,000 in gold dust on board.

The passengers bring news of a lynching which took place at Eagle City, Alaska, on December 11.

John Jolly, a saloon keeper and gambler, had collected a gang of toughs around him and was terrorizing the mining camps. He was waited on by a vigilance committee of twelve men and ordered to leave town.

He refused and the next day the vigilantes hanged him to the limb of a tree.

Exposition for California.

San Francisco, Jan. 6.--Citizens here have decided to hold an international exposition in San Francisco in 1901, opening in June.

It is expected to lay the corner stone of the administration building on September 9, 1900.

Swiss Chateau Burned.

Berne, Jan. 6.--The magnificent chateau Tagstein, near Thusis, Canton of Grisons, eleven miles from Chur, has been burned to the ground.

LUDLOW EMPLOYS CUBANS.

More Than Two Thousand Already at Work.

Havana, Jan. 6.--General Ludlow is determined to form a rural mounted police of three hundred men and to patrol the suburbs with Cuban soldiers.

About thirteen hundred Cubans are now working on the new branch of the railroad from the government dock to connect with Quemados camp, some five hundred Cubans are handling the quartermasters' stores at the wharves and elsewhere, two hundred Cubans are cleaning the streets and two hundred more are cleaning the public buildings.

General Brooke, as soon as the customs receipts permit it, will employ more Cubans, thereby hoping to largely reduce the number of the restless class of unemployed indigents.

A drinking place at San Lazaro has been closed by the United States patrol for having sold liquor to the American soldiers.

General Julio Sanguilly was offended yesterday because some municipal policemen on Albesu street failed to salute him. Sanguilly's aide-de-camp thereupon raised a disturbance, and a crowd gathered; but it was easily dispersed by the United States patrol.

Carlos Cadalso, a carpenter of Vedado, declares that the so-called execution chamber or torture chamber discovered in the late residence of the Spanish military governor, adjoining the palace, was prepared by him to preserve meats during the blockade of this city.

FIGHTING IN THE SOUDAN.

Defeat of the Emir Fedil With Heavy Loss.

London, Jan. 6.--Particulars regarding the recent battle on the Blue Nile have been received in a dispatch from Cairo to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Colonel Lewis, it appears, when he routed the Emir Fedil, the last remaining formidable Dervish chief, killed five hundred of his followers and made many prisoners. The emir, however, succeeded in escaping.

An official dispatch from Colonel Lewis says that with a Sudanese regiment and a detachment of irregular troops, he attacked Fedil while he was crossing the Nile at the cataract south of Roseirex, or Roseres.

The colonel's force stormed the island on which Fedil took up a position and severe fighting followed.

On the British side, Major Ferguson, six Egyptian officers and eighteen men were wounded and twentyseven men were killed.

Cairo, Jan. 6.--Colonel Lewis defeated the Emir Ahmed Fedil on the Blue Nile on December 25. His position was taken by storm and 1,500 Dervishes were captured.

Aguinaldo Goes to Iloilo.

Paris, Jan. 6.--An official telegram received by the Filipino junta here, dated Manila, January 4, says that Aguinaldo has gone to Iloilo at the request of the insurgents there to place himself at their head, with the view of possible fighting with the American forces.

A member of the Filipino junta here explains that Aguinaldo did not run away, but "left Manila for the mountainous region behind Cavite in order to make secret arrangements for his voyage to Iloilo."

The Filipino who furnished this information also categorically and specifically asserts that the latest telegraphic advices declare that if the Americans insist upon the occupation of the principal cities by the American troops, the whole of the Filipinos will "resist by force of arms."

The cabinet is described as homogeneous, every member being pledged, according to these advices, to resist the American military occupation of the Philippines.

Senor Tuason, who has been appointed Filipino agent at Paris and in London, is expected to arrive here shortly. The members of the junta assert that the new cabinet will bring forward the "most energetic policy."

The Sealing Controversy.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.--The Canadian joint high commission resumed its session yesterday. The only absentees on the American side were Representative Dingley and John W. Foster, both of whom are ill with the grip.

The joint session was followed by a meeting of the sub-committee on the Behring sea negotiations.

It is understood that substantial progress is making towards a sealing agreement.

Gov. Wolcott Installed.

Boston, Mass, Jan. 6.--The inaugural exercises at the state house yesterday passed with the customary smoothness, Governor Wolcott taking the oath of office as chief magistrate of the commonwealth for the third time.

A similar proceeding took place in the case of Lieutenant Governor Crane, after which Governor Wolcott read his inaugural address.

Prof. E. Otis Kendall Dead.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 6.--E. Otis Kendall, former professor of mathematics and astronomy at the University of Pennsylvania, and for years one of the foremost educators of the country, died yesterday at the age of 82 years.

He was a descendant of one of the Mayflower Pilgrims.

Western Union Indicted

Camden, Jan. 6.--The Camden county grand jury has finished its labors for the term here. An indictment was returned against the Western Union Telegraph Company for transmitting messages giving policy drawings, and seven indictments were returned against alleged policy dealers.

Mr. Dingley Better.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.--After a consultation of physicians yesterday it was announced that Representative Dingley was very much better and it is likely that he will continue to improve.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

The President Informs the Filipinos of Our Plans.

GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL

Our Military Authority to be Extended to the Whole of the Ceded Territory. Assurances of Personal Liberty and Full Protection.

Washington, Jan. 6.--The following is the text of the instructions sent to General Otis in command of the United States forces in the Philippines, to be proclaimed to the Filipinos as expressive of the purposes of the United States:

Adjutant General's Office,
Washington, Dec. 27, 1898.

General Otis, Manila:

By direction of the secretary of war, I have the honor to transmit herewith instructions of the president relative to the administration of affairs in the Philippine islands:

Executive Mansion,
Washington, Dec. 21, 1898.

To the Secretary of War.

Sir: The destruction of the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Manila by the United States naval squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Dewey, followed by the reduction of the city and the surrender of the Spanish forces, practically effected the conquest of the Philippine islands and the suspension of Spanish sovereignty therein.

"With the signature of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain by their respective plenipotentiaries at Paris, on the 10th inst., and as the result of the victories of American arms, the future control, disposition and government of the Philippine islands are ceded to the United States. In fulfillment of the rights of sovereignty thus acquired and the responsible obligations of government thus assumed the actual occupation and administration of the entire group of the Philippine islands becomes immediately necessary, and the military government heretofore maintained by the United States in the city, harbor and bay of Manila is to be extended with all possible dispatch to the whole of the ceded territory.

Protectors Not Invaders.

In performing this duty the military commander of the United States is enjoined to make known to the inhabitants of the Philippine islands that, in succeeding to the sovereignty of Spain, in severing the former political relations of the inhabitants and in establishing a new political power, the authority of the United States is to be exercised for the security of the persons and property of the people of the islands and for the confirmation of all their private rights and relations.

It will be the duty of the commander of the forces of occupation to announce and proclaim in the most public manner that we come, not as invaders or conquerors, but as friends, to protect the natives in their homes, in their employments and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who, either by active aid or by honest submission, co-operate with the government of the United States to give effect to these beneficent purposes, will receive the reward of its support and protection. All others will be brought within the lawful rule, we have assumed, with firmness, if need be, but without severity so far as may be possible.

Within the absolute domain of military authority, which necessarily is, and must remain, supreme in the ceded territory until the legislation for the United States shall otherwise provide, the municipal laws of the territory in respect to private rights and property and the repression of crime, are to be considered as continuing in force, and to be administered by the ordinary tribunals so far as practicable. The operations of civil and municipal government are to be performed by such officers as may accept the supremacy of the United States by taking the oath of allegiance or by officers chosen, as far as may be practicable, from the inhabitants of the islands.

While the control of all the public property and revenues of the state passes with the cession, and while the use and management of all public means of transportation are necessarily reserved to the authority of the United States, private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected, except for cause duly established.

The taxes and duties heretofore payable by the inhabitants to the late government become payable to the authorities of the United States, unless it be seen fit to substitute for them other reasonable rates of moties or contribution to the expenses of government, whether general or local. If private property be taken for military use, it shall be paid for when possible in cash at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not practicable receipts are to be given.

All ports and places in the Philippine islands in the actual possession of the land and naval forces of the United States will be opened to the commerce of all friendly nations. All goods and wares, not prohibited for military reasons by due announcement of the military authority, will be admitted upon payment of such duties and other charges as shall be in force at the time of their importation.

Personal Liberty Assured.

Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the military administration to win the confidence, respect and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by assuring them in every possible way that full measure of individual rights and liberties which is the heritage of free peoples, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice for arbitrary rule.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

To H. C. Corbin, Adjutant General.

The Proclamation Issued.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Jan. 6.--President McKinley's proclamation to the Filipinos, cabled to Major General Otis from Washington, has been issued here.

FELINE INTELLIGENCE.

The Cat Joined in the Sport When His Friend Went Hunting for Sparrows.

Stories are always cropping out about animals and here is an interesting and true one of feline intelligence from the Boston Transcript.

Mr. Blank is a suburbanite who delights during the summer afternoons to go in quest of sparrows. Early in the past season a family moved into an adjoining house. With the family came a cat. One afternoon Mr. Blank, returning from a gunning expedition, spied the cat dozing on the piazza. He threw a sparrow to her. The cat was quickly at work, and in a short time there was little left of the sparrow. The following afternoon the cat was in the same place, not dozing, but quite wide awake watching for the returning sportsman. Her watching was rewarded by two sparrows being laid in front of her. Now the cat was somewhat curious, consequently the next afternoon when Mr. Blank started out on his usual hunt he was joined by the cat, who stuck close to his heels, and when a sparrow was brought down the cat would take it in her mouth until home was reached, when the devouring would begin. Every afternoon after that until the season waned the cat would be seen following close at the heels of the suburban sparrow destroyer.

THEY WERE NEW GUNS.

And the Soldiers Wouldn't Spike Them When Obliged to Surrender.

"That reminds me," said another veteran, "of another Dutchman. Schwartz's battery, which was entirely composed of Germans, was one of the bravest bodies of troops in the whole army. At the battle of Shiloh one of Schwartz's officers rode up to Gen. Grant and said:

"'Cheneral, I wants to make ein report once.'

"'Well, what is it?' said Grant.

"'Schwartz's battery was took,' replied the officer.

"'How did it happen?' asked Gen. Grant.

"'Vell, you see, Cheneral, dose rebels was behind us und in front of us und both sides of us, un Schwartz's battery was took.'

"'Of course you spiked the guns so that they would be of no use to the rebels,' said Gen. Grant.

"'Vat, schpike dem new guns?' said the Dutchman. 'Dot vould schpoil dem.'

"'Well, what did you do?' asked Gen. Grant, sharply.

"'Do?' said the Dutchman. 'Vy, we took dem back already.'"—Buffalo Express.

DOG SMOKES CIGARETTES.

He is a Depraved Canine—Cross Until He Gets His Daily Whiff.

Denver has a dog that smokes cigarettes. He is a cocker spaniel and lives in a cigar store. He is only ten months old, but he is a confirmed fiend and is cross and peevish until he has had his daily smoke. His owner has taught him a number of tricks, which Billy—that is his name—will perform when a cigarette is offered as a reward.

When ready for his smoke Billy seats himself on the cigar case, permits a pair of spectacles to be adjusted to his nose, and then daintily takes the lighted cigarette in his mouth. He puffs away with a beatific expression on his intelligent face until the fire gets so close to his nose as to be uncomfortable. Then he drops the stub and remains quiet until the spectacles are removed.—New York World.

Logic Without Principle.

A curious combination of logic, with lack of principle, has sent a French medical student of good family to jail for ten years.

He has failed in his examinations and thereby lost his exemption from military service. If obliged to serve for two years, he saw no way of making up his deficiencies in scholarship, but he knew that a widow's son would be exempt from the conscription. He proceeded therefore to make his mother a widow by shooting his father—with whom he was on perfectly good terms—twice in the head.

The father recovered and succeeded in getting his son's sentence reduced.

A Wonderful Baby Bicyclist.

MasterJohn Roy Horton claims to be the champion light-weight bicycle rider of the world. He lives in Lufkin, Tex., and does many remarkable things on the wheel. He is six years old and thirty-nine inches high. He has a 16-inch reach, rides a mile in 5 1-3 minutes, and has endurance that is lacking in much older riders. He can push a wheel for twenty-five or thirty miles without the slightest exertion.—New York Journal.

Progress.

"Have you any trace of the missing man?"

"No," replied the detective, "but we are still at work on the case."

"Have you any clew or theory?"

"Yes," was the reply in a mysterious whisper. "We have studied night and day, and we are agreed on one thing."

"What is that?"

Hard to Define.

"On what grounds?"

"It is such a queer thing—the world condemns us if we don't practise it, and despises us if we do."—Detroit Free Press.

CLEVELAND USES SARCASM.

He Says Prospect of Killing Natives Need Not Check Imperialism.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 6.--Ex-President Cleveland, in reply to a request for an expression on the question of expansion, said:

"Assuming that my ideas on the subject are antiquated and unsuited to these progressive days, it is a matter of surprise to me that the refusal of certain natives of the new possessions to acquiesce in the benificence of subjecting them to our control should in the least disturb our expansionists. This phase of the situation ought not to have been unanticipated, nor the incidents naturally growing out of it overlooked.

"The remedy is obvious and simple. The native inhabitants of our annexed territory who prefer something different from the plan of their control, which we propose, or who oppose our designs in their behalf should be slaughtered. The killing of natives has been a feature of expansion since expansion began, and our imperialistic enthusiasm should not be checked by the prospective necessity of destroying a few thousand or a few hundred thousand Filipinos.

"This should only be regarded as one stage in a transcendentally great movement, a mere incident in its progress. Of course some unprepared souls would then be lost before we had the opportunity of hristianizing them, but surely those of our clergymen who havedone so much to encourage expansion could manage that difficulty."

In connection with this subject, Mr. Cleveland said he had seen it stated in Wednesday's newspapers that ten millions of cartridges are now being manufactured for the United States in England and that a special metal is used to prevent the shells from jamming in the gun barrels.

EXTENSIVE COAL DEAL.

All Lands of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Co. Sold.

New York, Jan. 6.--It is officially announced by the officers of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad that all the coal properties of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company in and about Scranton, Pa., formerly Lackawanna Iron and Coal Company, estimated to contain from twenty-five million to thirty million tons of anthracite coal, have been purchased by parties interested in the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company, and the transportation of the output will be secured to that Company.

The capacity of the collieries now open is about eight hundred thousand tons per annum.

The coal purchased is of the highest grade, and has been used extensively in the manufacture of steel at Scranton.

This is in all probability the most important step taken by the Ontario and Western Railroad since it went into the coal business in 1890. It means an increase in tonnage of something like one million tons per annum. The tonnage will be brought up it was stated to two million tons as a minimum.

So far as it can be learned the Ontario and Western Railroad will not assume any charges in connection with this land.

The important matter is that the Ontario and Western will have the hauling of the coal.

A director of the Ontario and Western road is authority for the statement that a sum approaching five million dollars is represented in the purchase of the coal properties.

Dewey's Gunner At Home.

Sag Harbor, Jan. 6.--There was a great celebration here last night. All business was neglected, and the whole town turned out to welcome home Leonard J. G. Kuhlwein, chief gunner of Dewey's flagship, the Olympia.

Stripped to the buff, and as begrimed as a stoker, he had lent a hand at the guns while the fleet described the ovals in Manila bay that wrote history.

At the station there were a band, a preacher and the whole town. Also girls, girls, girls! The chief gunner saw only one--a damp-eyed little woman--and stepped from the train into her arms. He hadn't any kisses left when it was over, for he wasn't Hobson, and she was his wife.

"Haven't you forgotten somebody?" asked his wife laughingly.

Kuhlwein looked around anxiously, and saw friendly faces. "N-no," he said doubtfully. "Who?"

"This," said his wife, picking up a sturdy boy, about three years old--a son of a gunner if ever there was one. It was Kuhlwein's boy, whom his father had never seen. The gunner had been sent away to the Pacific about four years ago, soon after he had married.

Kansas Cuts Telegraph Tolls.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 6.--Both branches of the legislature have passed the bill reducing telegraph rates.

The bill reduces the charge for day commercial messages of ten words from twenty-five to fifteen cents, and other tolls in proportion.

Day press rates are reduced from one-half to one-third of a cent a word, and night press rates from one-quarter to one-sixth of a cent a word.

These rates apply to all points within the state.

The measure also places telegraph companies within the jurisdiction of the court of visitation, recently created to regulate railroad traffic.

Coogan for President.

New York, Jan. 6.--The Manhattan Borough members of the municipal assembly met in the aldermanic chamber at noon yesterday and unanimously elected James J. Coogan president of the Borough of Manhattan to succeed the late Augustus W. Peters. The salary of the office is five thousand dollars, and Mr. Coogan will have nearly three years to serve.

Early in 1897 he went to London to see Mr. Croker and offered him, as he said, "on behalf of the citizens of New York, the nomination of mayor of Greater New York."

ELECTRIC SYNDICATE

A Gigantic Company Incorporated at Trenton.

TWENTY MILLION CAPITAL

It is Reported That Mr. Whitney is Behind the Movement, Statements Go to Show That an Endeavor Will be Made to Absorb the Edison Company.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 6.--The Electric Company of America filed yesterday with the secretary of state articles of incorporation. The company has an authorizedc apital of twenty-five million dollars.

Its expressed objects are to manufacture, produce, purchase, own, use and sell to public and private users, coal, coke, gas, oil, electricity, light, heat, steam and compressed air power, water, etc., and to own, acquire, construct and lease and operate plants in connection therewith.

The incorporaters are James E. Hayes of Camden, Elmer Smalling of Philadelphia and Arthur Phillips of Philadelphia.

The company, it is understood, is organized for the purpose of acquiring and operating the electric light plants in different cities.

The Electric Company of America, incorporated at Trenton with twenty-five million dollars capital, was said by one familiar with the local electric consolidation plans to be the work of the Whitney syndicate.

This syndicate, under the name of the Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, purchased a subway in the upper part of the city and acquired the property of the Mount Morris Electric Light Company.

The main interest in it, however, was due to its negotiations with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of this city, which controls much of the down town subway and electric lighting system, for a consolidation with a view to obtaining the control of the entire electric light, heat and power of the city.

It is said that the new incorporation marks the success of this scheme. At any rate Mr. D. O. Mills of the Edison Company was quoted a day or two ago as saying that the negotiations had then reached such a point that the transfer of the Edison company to the syndicate could practically be accepted as a fact.

Gov. Rollins Inaugurated.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 6.--Frank W. Rollins, Republican, yesterday took the oath of office and assumed the duties of governor of New Hampshire. The most notable measures advocated in his inaugural message were the building of a bicycle path along the entire seacoast of New Hampshire, the construction of a state highway from the Massachusetts line to the summit of Mount Washington, with branch roads through other sections of the White Mountains; the preservation of forests, the increase by one regiment of the state militia, and the urging upon Congress of the necessity of a strong naval force at Portsmouth.

Governor Rollins suggests that at all colleges an expert be employed as instructor in the making of good highways.

Small Pox in Leroy.

Rochester, Jan. 6.--Despite the efforts of the board of health in the village of Leroy, two new cases of smallpox have been discovered.

All funerals are strictly private, as fear of the dread disease has filled the inhabitants with alarm.

The boardof health has issued another notice prohibiting all public gatherings under penalty of a fifty dollar fine for each violation.

Business is almost at a standstill in the village and many families are moving out of town until the scare is over. Guards are stationed at the homes of persons who have been exposed and a strict quarantine is kept over such persons for two weeks.

Twelve Lost in Collision.

Falmouth, Eng., Jan. 6.--A pilot cutter landed here the captain and thirteen of the crew of the British steamer Rosshire, from Cardiff for St. Nazair, and the captain and twelve of the crew of the French steamer Dugueselin, from Rouen, for Swansea.

The latter sank immediately after a collision with the Rosshire, which occurred yesterday morning off Trovose Head. The Rosshire was abandoned in a sinking condition.

Eleven of her crew were drowned, as was one member of the crew of the Rosshire. The survivors were picked up by the Norwegian steamer Fram and transferred to the pilot cutter.

BITS OF NEWS.

The United States circuit court of appeals has vetoed the injunction in the Fayerweather will case, and the executors may now pay out the three million dollars bequeathed to different colleges.

GOVERNOR PINGREE'S MESSAGE.

Calls Annexation a Weak Imitation of Monarchy.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 6.--Governor Pingree's message to the legislature is a strong one.

He argued that railroads and other corporations should be brought under the general tax law instead of being assessed upon their gross earnings as at present.

The governor recommended a moderate income tax upon all incomes above one thousand dollars a year. The progress made by trusts in recent years has alarmed the governor. He held that Congress should take this matter in hand, as state legislatures, he says, are powerless because corporations would simply be driven from one state to another by any attempt at legislation on the part of the different states.

Governor Pingree finds fault with the present national administration, saying that the war "was precipitated by the clamor of an unscrupulous press, with the co-operation of equally unscrupulous politicians, who hoped that the excitement and hysteria of war would distract the popular mind from the abuses of their misgovernment and from the grievances which our people suffered and still suffer greater than those which any of Spain's subjects had to complain of.

Decided opposition was expressed to the annexation of the Philippines, the governor claiming that they are in no way necessary for our safety or even useful, as are the Hawaiian islands or the Antilles. He said:

"The scheme of annexation is simply a weak imitation of the policy of European monarchies, conceived in apparent ignorance or indifference respecting the vastly different conditions which have forced these powers into distantc olonization."

Relative to public ownership of railways, Governor Pingree said:

"I most earnestly recommend that this legislature inaugurate a policy looking to the ultimate purchase by the state of all of the railroads within its limits."

THE PEACE TREATY.

A Resolution of Inquiry Checked. Spanish Claims.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.--Mr. Hoar, Republican of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution in the Senate yesterday requesting the president, if in his judgment not incompatible with public interest, to communicate to the Senate all instructions given by him to the commissioners who negotiated the treaty of Paris; all correspondence between the executive and the state department and the commissioners, and all reports made by the commissioners either to the president or to the state department.

Mr. Hoar then proposed the following resolution, which was adopted:

"That the committee on foreign relations be directed to inquire and report to the Senate whether the proposed treaty with Spain makes any provision for claims of citizens of the United States against Spain, which were in existence before the beginning of the present war, the extent and number of such claims, and what will be the legal conditions of the same after peace shall have been declared."

Will Welcome Our Squadron.

London, Jan. 6.--A Central News dispatch from Portsmouth says that the American squadron is expected to arrive at Spithead in June.

The Channel Squadron will take part in the welcome to be given to the American ships.

The battleship Prince George will lead the squadron and the Duke of York, for whom the Prince George was named, will take a prominent part in the ceremonies.

Emperor William Improving.

Berlin, Jan. 6.--Acting upon the instructions from President Faure, the French ambassador here, the Marquis de Noailles, paid a special visit to Potsdam to make inquiries regarding the health of Emperor William of Germany.

The ambassador was received by his majesty, who informed him he was progressing favorably.

Road Sold by Receiver.

Keokuk, Iowa, Jan. 6.--The Chicago Fort Madison and Des Moines Railroad has been sold by W. I. Bobb, special receiver, under an order of the federal court.

It was bought for one hundred and fifty thousand dollars by Jesse A. Baldwin of Chicago, for the bondholders' committee.

Verdict Against Gleason.

Long Island City, Jan. 6.--The sealed verdict rendered by the jury in the fifty thousand dollar slander suit which was brought by former Captain Anthony S. Woods against former Mayor Patrick Jerome Gleason, was opened yesterday. The jury awarded former Captain Woods forty-five hundred dollars.

Cabinet Crisis in Spain.

Madrid, Jan. 6.--General Polavieja, ex-governor general of Cuba and of the Philippines, and Senor Silvela, the Conservative leader, have agreed upon the formation of a new cabinet, and have been summoned by the queen regent. The early advent of the Conservatives to power is regarded as certain.

Senator Reed's New Honor.

The decision of the Republicans of the incoming State Senate to elect Senator Reed to the president's chair is a distinguished honor for the gentleman from Somerset. He well deserves it and will undoubtedly make use of it in a way to reflect credit upon the constituents whom he is chosen to represent.

Senator Reed's ascension to the second highest office in the State has not been accomplished by the application of political power from a Boss, but has been won in an open-free-for-all contest between himself and his colleagues who also desired the honor. At the outset, United States Senator Sewell, who is recognized as the all powerful factor in Republican politics in New Jersey, announced his intention of keeping his hands off the fight and letting the best man win. Even when he made the announcement he frankly stated his preference for the selection of a candidate other than Senator Reed. This immediately led the skeptical to conclude that while ostensibly Senator Sewell would not use his open influence to aid any one of the aspirants, he would secretly do what he could to bring about the defeat of the Somerset county man. Such opinions have been proven to be worthless, however.

Senator Reed's two years service in the upper house of the Legislature has put him in close touch with the holdover Senators for this term, and to the new members of the body he has become personally and favorably known. By both experience in legislative affairs and his natural personal qualifications Mr. Reed is splendidly adapted for President of the Senate. Senator Reed, in his everyday life, has a happy, pleasant manner about him that will certainly be reflected handsomely towards his colleagues on the floor of the Senate.

We predict that Senator Reed will retire from the Senate with the record of having been one of its best presiding officers.

It is estimated that during the present month $170,000,000 will be paid out in dividends and profits in New York financial circle. A competent financial expert advices The Daily Press that at least $1,000 000 of this amount will be diverted into the hands of gentlemen who reside in Plainfield. Of course, it is not expected that all of this money will be seen directly in this city, but the influence it will exert on local business affairs will be more or less noticeable. It is seldom, indeed, that Plainfield does not get a liberal slice out of every good thing that is going.

The Democratic members of the State Assembly met in Jersey City last night and made their caucus nominations. It was peculiarly appropriate that they should meet away from Trenton, else they might be moved to extreme sorrow by the sight of what the lack of a few hundred voters prevented them from grasping. Assemblyman Carroll, of Hudson, was named for Speaker, but, of course, that will be the closest that he will get to the presiding chair of the Assembly.

The elevation of Senator Reed to the Presidency of the Senate, and the subsequent political importance and influence that attaches to the office, must be a bitter pill for Mr. Lewis Thompson to swallow. Senator Reed stand on a pre-eminence now where he will be able to assert his political leadership in Somerset county without fear or favor from the Somerville man.

A newspaper dispatch says that General Brooks has already made himself so obnoxious to Santiagoans that his name has been hissed. But Brooks is a hot article when he comes in contact with persons who try to defy the laws of Uncle Sam.

The Cranford Chronicle is exercised about the payment for lands which must be condemned in widening the boulevard. It refers to the present year's budget, and not finding any provision for the payment of land for such a purpose, casts a little cold water on the boulevard scheme.—Dunellen Call.

Cold water? More like an iceberg.

In the light of past events in the Gubernatorial office of New Jersey who knows but that we may not be addressing Senator Reed as Governor before another year rolls around?

Now that the newspapers have quit dilating at great length about the epidemic of the grip the fashion of having ordinary colds has been resumed.

The Herald's poll of the Senate shows sixty-two Senators favorable to ratification of the treaty of peace. Sixty votes will suffice.

The new one dollar certificates have just been issued. There will be no reduced price to introduce them, however.

SENATOR WILLIAM P. FRYE.

Senator Frye, of the returned Peace Commission, says that Congress alone has the power to decide what shall be done with the islands, and he has no fear that Spain will be allowed to again establish there her cruel system. The senator also opposes the idea of dividing the Philippines between the powers, who are our business rivals.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Every indication points to the election of Senator Reed as president of the Senate. The caucus will be held this evening at Trenton. Such a result would certainly be a high honor to Somerset's Senator and gratifying to the people whom he represents. Within a few years Somerset's representatives have presided over the House for two years and the Senate one. If the honor is accorded to her once again Somerset's influence in the legislative halls will be felt all over the State. Senator Reed will make a capable presiding officer.—Somerville Unionist Gazette.

Our news columns record the fact that Prosecutor English is carrying out the orders of the Grand Jury recently in reference to justices of the peace, to the letter. 'Tis well. There are many things the Legislature needs to do or to undo, and one of the masters that come under the latter definition is the justice of the peace system that prevails in New Jersey.—Plainfield Press.

Jerseymen might possibly get along without justices of the peace, just as many of them got along in olden times without much fun or nonsense. But those who believe in keeping with them a never-failing source of humor and amusement will stand by the J. P.'s.—Tribune.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The Croker family are branching out in the business world. While Richard Croker has just opened an insurance office, his two sons, Frank and Richard, Jr., announce their intention of becoming electricians. Instead of dealing with the currents of politics often as erratic as real electricity, they will sell ohms and volts and dabble in the transmission of electrical power. They are well educated, and look like young men with sturdy minds in sturdy bodies. There is one year's difference in their ages, and they are remarkably alike in their nature and physical attainments, as well as their ambitions.

Tell Beguelin, of Fairview avenue, has been unable to go to business for over a week on account of the grip.

Tieman Horn, of the Regular Army, is now enjoying a furlough of three months. He is at present visiting Plainfield relatives.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

At Music Hall tonight the Bennett-Moulton Company will present their great production of "Bonnie Scotland." This play abounds in comedy, picturesque costumes, elegant scenery and all needed accessories, and altogether is one of the best things in the large repertoire. "Darkest Russia" was the attraction last night and delighted a large audience. For the matinee bill tomorrow "Bonnie Scotland" will be repeated and tomorrow night the company will bring their week's engagement to a close with the great comedy drama, "For Cuba's Cause."

Manager Edwards has perfected arrangements with Major Pond for the appearance of Scotland's great comedian, Frame, and his company of singers, dancers, pipers and specialty artists in Music Hall, Friday, January 13th next. The company appeared in Chickering Hall, New York, last evening, and the New York Journal this morning has the following to say of them: "Major J. B. Pond introduced Funny Frame and his funmakers at Chickering Hall last night. Frame is a Scotch comedian of unique abilities, and his rendering of Scotch songs is entertaining. In his company are Florence Hayward, a soprano of brilliant voice; John Mackenzie, who is entitled to a prize as an endurance dancer of the Highland fling; David C. Mather, who brings melody out of the bagpipes; Walter Haigh, a good violinist, and Annette H. Gray, who sang 'The Dear Auld Hame' effectively."

Fiatow and Dunn's metropolitan stars of vaudeville will appear in Music Hall next Tuesday evening. They present a very funny farce entitled "Courage."

It was decided to name the doorkeepers and allot the pages at another caucus. There is a vacancy also in the office of second assistant engrossing clerk, Joseph M. Thompson, of Ocean, who held the office last year, being now a page in the House of Representatives at Washington. The Senators postponed the choice of his successor for the present.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 6.—There was large gathering of both ladies and gentlemen at the Social Club last evening when the Westfield bowling team and the team from the Social Club met on the latter's slate alleys. The teams were very evenly matched and the games were close and exciting from the start until the last pin was down. The Social Club won two out of three games.

Charles O. Poor, superintendent of the Hall Signal Works at Cranford has purchased of William Welch the property now occupied by H. H. Downes on Park street.

The newly-elected officers of Upchurch Lodge, A. O U. W. will be installed Tuesday evening.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

The Baptism's renewed testimony. "Behold the Lamb of God!" John and the Redeemer had now met for the last time; and the Baptist was already preparing for the change in their relative positions implied in the entrance of Jesus upon public life. "He must increase, but I must decrease." His last testimony was but a repetition of his first testimony. This was but a little seed, but it had a mighty growth. The doctrine of Christ crucified is for every age, the power of God to salvation. "The greatness of the Baptist and the majesty of Christ appear in John's pointing his disciples to Christ and Christ's attaching them immediately to himself. In these disciples of John the spiritual perfection of the work of the Baptist is seen."

Seeking and finding. We see the effect of John's renewed testimony to Jesus. His disciples followed Jesus. This was the decisive act that determined their destiny forever. They did not look on from curiosity or from mere impulse, as the Master walked. They followed. Then came the question. "What seek ye?" It might appear to us at first a rather chilling question. It was not that the Master could not see their hearts, and understand their motives, that he put this question. But they needed to understand themselves. They must decide in their own hearts whether their impulse to follow and know him was from a truly religious principle. No time is lost in finding Christ when a soul wants to weigh the matter, as to the principle and purpose. Christ wants loyal love, and no question he may put to the seeking soul can breathe of anything but tenderness and love. His question to John and Andrew was spoken to encourage and stimulate further inquiry, and yet in no way a denial, but rather satisfied their hopes. How confidingly, yet how modestly, the disciples owned their own littleness and their desire to be taught. A little real knowledge of Christ produces the desire for more. In following Christ the believer finds more than he expected or imagined. Those two disciples found the Master's abode, and there remained for the day in blessed fellowship with him. That day was the turning point in their lives. All doubts were removed, all questions answered. Though we cannot mark the place of his abode, we may note the glorious results of his first day with John and Andrew in his dwelling-place.

Working for the Lord. Brother brings brother, friend brings friend, townsman brings townsman. It is pleasing to note with what positive testimony Andrew approached Simon. Truly regenerated souls do not preface their testimony with long argument, but joyfully pour out heart-experience, and declare that they know. There is no mark of selfishness in the fact that Andrew sought first his brother, but rather a proof of the genuineness of his own conversion. We see in him prompt zeal, quiet helpfulness, and yearning faith for his brother. Though Andrew never became the writer of an Epistle, or the founder of a church, he was the instrument who won the man who should be. The best we know of Andrew is that he was a soul-winner. What better thing can we desire than to have also such a record? "Andrew helped to make the Pentecostal preacher. How little we know what hangs on our individual endeavors. The preacher may not be known beyond his flock, but one soul, through his appeals, may be the means of converting thousands. The Sabbath-school teacher may toil on with half a dozen children, but amongst them may be a Wilberforce." John won his brother James. Then Jesus himself met Philip and called him. In turn Philip seeks some one to bring to Jesus—Nathanel, a devout Jew, a student of Scripture, of a thoughtful temper, and of prayerful habits. "One lighted torch serves to light another." There is but one way to heaven, but various ways in coming to Christ. John and Andrew were attracted by the Master. Simon, James and Nathanel were conducted to the Master by a fellow man. Philip was invited by the Master. Hence are we taught: 1. "The greatest discovery a soul can make—Christ. 2. The purest felicity a soul can enjoy—fellowship with Christ. 3. The noblest life a soul can lead—following Christ. 4. The loftiest calling a soul can pursue—commending Christ. 5. The grandest philanthrophy a soul can practice—bringing men to Christ. 6. The sweetest commendation a soul can receive—to be an Israelite indeed."

Bring some one to Jesus. Andrew is only known as "Simon Peter's brother." V. 40. There is no record of a great life-work Andrew did, but he shares in the reward of the brother he brought to Christ. A. B. Simpson says: "When I go to the house of many mansions I shall want to see Peter, but I shall also want to see the brother who brought him to Jesus. It will be blessed to meet Morrison, who planted the Gospel in China, but no less blessed to find the modest teacher who spent three suits of clothes on the little street arab before she got Robert to stay in her class. We shall see a crown of glory on each of the seven Moravian brothers who died in Greenland for Jesus' sake, but there will be a seven-starred crown on the head of the mother who, as one after another fell, sent the next, and when all had fallen exclaimed: 'Their work is mine, and if I had seven more I should give them as gladly.'"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 8—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—A precious invitation.—Math. xi, 25-30.—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Math. xi, 25.

This is the most precious of all Christ's invitations but much of the richness of it is lost because it is taken apart from its surroundings. To properly understand it we must have a picture of the entire chapter before us. Up to this point, by the record of Matthew, Christ's life has been fairly successful, but now the tide turns. The doubt of John, the unreasonableness of humanity, the unbelief of favored cities now thrust themselves upon Him, but still His heart is touched by their great need, their vain and unsatisfactory efforts to save themselves, and in spite of doubt, unreasonableness and unbelief, He invites them to come to Him for rest. Notice:

1. The Inviter. The one who gives this great invitation, containing such a precious promise, is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. "Come to Me," He says, "and I will give you rest." We want two characteristics in one who makes us a precious promise, (1) the ability to fulfill it and (2) the willingness to fulfill it. Either without the other makes the promise of no value. Christ possesses both. As the Son of God He has the power, and, being divine, He must have the willingness. Divinity could not be faithless to a promise. We can accept this invitation therefore with confident assurance, because of the character of the one who gives it, that the promise it contains will be fulfilled.

2. The Invited. They are those who "labor and are heavy laden." There are three such classes in the world. 1. Those who are physically weary and heavy laden, worn out by the toils and burdens of life. 2. Those who are mentally heavy laden; borne down mentally by the failures, disappointments and afflictions of life. 3. Those who are spiritually weary and heavy laden, who are not at peace with God; whose consciences are ill at ease, who are seeking spiritual rest, but do not find it. Christ addresses the third class here. He speaks to those who are burdened with sin and wearied with false conceptions of religion. Their religious life is unsatisfactory. It does not bring peace to their souls.

3. The Invitation. The promise contained in the invitation is "rest," not physical or mental, but spiritual rest. "Ye shall find rest unto your souls." It is soul rest that is promised, but soul rest insures to a large extent physical and mental rest. Sin is the cause of the unrest of the world. Make the soul at peace with God and physical and mental burdens largely lose their burdensomeness.

To have this promise fulfilled in us we must take Christ as our religious Leader and Guide. We must follow Him and obey Him. We must take His yoke upon us, but it is easy (wholesome), and His burden is light because it is a labor of love. If weary and heavy laden, let us accept this great and precious invitation.

Bible Readings.—Isa. i, 18-20; lv, 1-13; Jer. vi, 16; Math. xix, 16-22; xxii, 1-14; xxv, 34-46; Mark i, 16-18; x, 17-22; Luke xv, 11-24; John x, 1-9; xiv, 1-7; Acts vii, 1-4; Gal. vi, 9; I John v, 3; Rev. xxii, 17.

Willful Blindness.

As we look through a telescope and obtain a glimpse of the wonders it reveals or as we study the results which have been attained by experts in its use the mind is naturally impressed with the grandeur and power of the Creator of the heavenly bodies. When we learn something of their movements through space, movements so absolutely accurate that their phases and positions can be foretold with perfect certainty long centuries in advance, defying competition by the most perfect instruments of human devising, it is impossible with any show of reason to deny the controlling presence of an infinite mind.—Episcopal Recorder.

After Long Years.

After long years work is visible. In agriculture you cannot see the growth. Pass that country two months after and there is a difference. We acquire firmness and experience incessantly. Every action, every word, every meal, is part of our trial and our discipline. We are assuredly ripening or else blighting. We are not conscious of those changes which go on quietly and gradually in the soul. We only count the shocks in our journey. Ambitions die, grace grows, as life goes on.—Frederick W. Robertson.

Up to the Light.

Hold your dull life up to the light and see how it will be transfigured. Life is not meant to be a path of ease, but steep and rugged, and it is only through self denial, discouragement, discipline and trial that you may attain the higher life. Believe me, you can no more develop the spiritual powers without use and exercise than you can the physical.—"Light on the Hidden Way."

No Other Refuge.

You will never find rest except in God. There is no refuge but in Him. Oh, what rest and composure there are in Him! It is more than sleep, more than calm, more than quiet; deeper than the dead stillness of the noiseless sea in its utmost depths, where it is undisturbed by the slightest ripple.—Episcopal Recorder.

My Portion.

To count no cost in time or will,
To simply try my place to fill,
To do because the act is right,
To live as living in His sight,
To try each day His will to know,
To tread the way His will may show,
To regulate each plan I make,
Each hope I build or hope I break,
To please the heart which pleases me
Through daily tireless ministry,
To live for Him who gave me life,
To strive for Him who suffered strife
And sacrifice through death for me—
Let this my joy, my portion be.
—George Klingle.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 8. "A Precious Invitation." Text, Math. xi, 28-30.

"Come unto Me."

The lot of a beast of burden in the east is far from an easy one. Heavy loads, long hours of work, scant feed and abundant abuse are all too frequent. During the journey or the hours of work in the field little relief need be expected. Pathetic as is the condition of dumb animals, that of human beings is often more miserable and helpless. As the nature is higher and more capable of knowledge and spiritual pleasure it is by that very fact exposed to keener pain and consciousness of evil.

How many, even young in life, grow heartsick and soul tired, spirit hungry and utterly weary with the endless toil and strife. They crave love and good cheer. To all who find the burdens of life heard to bear, Jesus calls as a kind hearted man might call to an overloaded animal, "Come unto Me, and I will give you rest." Is it possible that in the midst of the work the pack shall be taken from the back and it shall be allowed to wander free and feed and sleep and rest? This is impossible while the caravan must move on in the desert and the plow be pulled through the furrow and the grain be trodden out on the thrashing floor. The work must go on, the load must be carried for our good and the good of others. The oasis and wells shadowed by palm trees are not yet reached. What then?

"Take My yoke upon you."

He puts His own neck into the yoke with us. He harnesses Himself alongside us to the plow. His own back shares the load we carry. His strength takes the weight that crushed us and we grow strong by His side. His presence beside us gives the thrill of companionship and cheer. He touches us as no other one does. He works so easily, so gladly, so tenderly with us. He shows us how to carry our part that still remains. The road is no shorter, the sun no less scorching, the load not an ounce less; but, oh, what a change! His yoke has made all so easy! The soul rests. The harness no longer chafes and galls. With songs of gladness we can do our work because we are working with and for Christ.

Patron of Learning.

Methodism from the first has been the patron of learning. The movement was born in a university and has ever encouraged true investigation. Intelligent piety has been the aim of all her efforts. Scripture holiness means intelligent, understanding devotion. This it is the mission of Methodism to diffuse and establish.

Wesley, among his first acts, established a school for the neglected children of the miners near Bristol, England, which still lives and does good work. Asbury and Coke made early and strenuous efforts to found a college in America. Education has been fostered from the early days to the present. The long list of academies, colleges, universities and theological seminaries under the control of the church compares favorably with that of any church in the land. In every foreign mission field the school stands side by side with the chapel and medical dispensary.

At the beginning of this century religion was at a low ebb in the colleges of the land. Atheistic thought was in the ascendant. At the present time a large body of the teaching force is actively Christian, and a greater proportion of students than ever before are consistent believers in Christ. How much of this has been brought about by Methodist influence it would be impossible to say. But no inconsiderable share in shaping these changes must be credited to this source.

"Makers of Methodism."

This is the title of the book in the Epworth League reading course intended for the social department. All the volumes in the set this year are bound in fine style, well printed and of much greater value and interest than those in any previous course issued. This volume is specially valuable and should in some way be made familiar to all members. If it is impossible to induce all the members to read it, some review of it can be presented by one who has read it. Chapters can be assigned different ones to read and discuss. The more we become acquainted with the makers of our history, the founders of our church and pioneers of our faith the more heroic does it tend to make our lives. We catch inspiration from them and our principles become more stable. One of the best correctives of the laxity and frivolity of the times lies in a new study of the fortitude and faith of the fathers and mothers of Methodism. The example of Susannah Wesley should ever be kept before the young motherhood of our land. Let the lives of the saints be studied, and saintly character will revive and flourish. Get the book and use it.

No one possessing the love of God will willingly or knowingly do what will harm his fellow man if he can possibly avoid it. If drinking causes my brother man to fall into evil, I must give up the drink, or Christ will give me up.

We Worship Thee.

We worship Thee, O blessed Lord,
With songs of loftiest praise!
Most wonderful in heaven and earth
Are all Thy works and ways.

The fountain head of life art Thou,
The source of all that's good,
Most wonderful Thy love to us;
Thy rod the holy rood.

Pilgrims are we, sojourners here,
We seek a better land.
Most wonderful, Thou leadest us
By Thy most gracious hand.

By faith we claim the promises
That he who keeps Thy way,
Most wonderful, shall reign with Thee
In realms of endless day.
—Walter J. Yates.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Rheinprovinz.

Aachen. Wie zuverlässig mitgetheilt wird, ist die Lotterie für die Wiederherstellung des hiesigen Rathhauses und Münsters nunmehr vom Kaiser genehmigt worden.

M.-Gladbach. In einer von etwa 1000 Arbeitern besuchten Versammlung wurde der christliche Textilarbeiterverband für M.-Gladbach und Umgegend gegründet.

Provinz Sachsen.

Merseburg. Die Stadtverordneten beschlossen die Kanalisirung der Stadt mit einem Kostenaufwande von 600,000 Mark, so daß die Kosten der Unterhaltung sowie der Tilgung und Verzinsung der Anlagekapitalien mindestens zu 50 Prozent von der Kämmereikasse getragen werden. Der übrige Theil soll von den Grundeigenthümern und Gewerbetreibenden aufgebracht werden.

Naumburg. In dem Gelände von 25 Weinbergsbesitzern in der Gemarkung Hirschroda im Eckartsbergaer Kreise ist die Reblaus festgestellt worden. Der Oberpräsident der Provinz hat bereits die gesetzlich feststehenden Vernichtungsmaßnahmen gegen diesen Schädling angeordnet.

Provinz Schlesien.

Breslau. Der Weiterbau der Breslau-Warschauer-Eisenbahn auf russischer Seite scheint nunmehr gesichert zu sein. Von Warschau aus sollen Strecken über Lodz nach Kalisch mit Anschluß an die Strecke Sculmierzige-Ostrowo und nach Wilhelmsbrück ausgebaut werden. Die letztere Strecke wird die schon lange erstrebte unmittelbare Verbindung zwischen Breslau und Warschau bringen.

Neusalz. Einen Beweis großer sittlicher Verkommenheit legten zwei im Waisenhause untergebrachte Schulknaben ab. Sie erschwindelten sich vom Küster die Schlüssel zur Kirche, brannten damit in das Gotteshaus, beraubten zwei Opferkästen, die sie erst erbrechen mußten, ihres Inhalts und schlugen dann, um den Scheiß zu erwecken, als sei Jemand von außen hier in die Kirche eingestiegen, mehrere Fensterscheiben ein.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Kiel. Wie sich aus einer angetriebenen Flaschenpost ergibt, ist der Kieler Dampfer „Adele" zwischen Bornholm und der pommer'schen Küste untergegangen. Sturzseen hatten die große Luke eingeschlagen, und die Mannschaft konnte trotz furchtbarer Anstrengung das eindringende Wasser nicht bewältigen. Dabei ist die ganze Besatzung ertrunken. In der Flaschenpost nimmt Kapitän Krützfeldt von seiner Frau und seinem Kieler Rheder Abschied.

Hohenwestedt. Die älteste Tochter des Vollhufners Klaus Siewers in Nindorf war neulich mit dem Wegharken des Strohs neben der Dreschmaschine beschäftigt und hatte die Verkleidung entfernt. Plötzlich erfaßte die Transmissionsstange die Kleider. Das junge Mädchen wurde im Kreise herumgeschleudert und war eine Leiche, bevor die Maschine zum Stehen gebracht wurde. Der Kopf war völlig zerschmettert.

Provinz Westfalen.

Bochum. Der Wohlthätigkeitsbazar im evangelischen Vereinshause hat nach Abzug der Unkosten einen Reinertrag von 11,800 Mark geliefert.

Gelsenkirchen. Der beim hiesigen Pastor Wulf mit Frau und Kindern zu Besuch weilende Direktor Emmer aus Hörde machte seinem Leben durch mehrere Revolverschüsse ein Ende. Er hatte in den letzten Tagen eine derartige nervöse Ueberreizung gezeigt, daß man seine That auf Geistesstörung zurückführt.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Hier wird von der sächsischen Regierung für das Jahr 1900 eine Architekturausstellung für Modelle, Zeichnungen, Skulpturen u. s. w. geplant, zu der auch auswärtige Regierungen eingeladen werden sollen. — Stadtverordneten-Vorsteher Geheimer Rath Dr. Ackermann, der in letzter Zeit wegen seiner Amtsführung heftig angegriffen wurde, hat sein Entlassungsgesuch eingereicht. Dasselbe ist vom Stadtverordneten-Kollegium bereits genehmigt worden. Dr. Ackermann war seit 45 Jahren Stadtverordneter und seit 34 Jahren Vorsteher.

Blasewitz. Im 84. Lebensjahre verstarb hier der Kammerrath Franz Adolf Lange. Mit ihm ist ein Mann dahingeschieden, der sich um die Elbernhauer Gegend überaus große Verdienste erworben hat, da er es verstanden hatte, daselbst die Industrie zu hoher Blüthe zu bringen.

AN ORDINANCE

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company in Richmond street and East Second street and over a private right of way to the line of the City of Plainfield in Terrill road, and authorizing and empowering the construction and operation and maintenance of the same and granting permission for said company to use electricity as the propelling power of its cars and prescribing the terms and conditions upon which the said location of the tracks and permission are granted.

Whereas, The Plainfield Street Railway Company, a street railway corporation organized under the provisions of the laws of the State of New Jersey and operating a street railway in the city of Plainfield, did present their petition or application to the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, praying the said Mayor and Common Council of the City of Plainfield for their consent to the construction, operation and maintenance of an extension of its street railway in the city of Plainfield, from a point in its present line of tracks in East Fifth street opposite to Richmond street, thence westerly through Richmond street to East Second street; thence northerly through East Second street to the present terminus of East Second street between Netherwood avenue and Leland avenue, thence along a right of way through private property to the line of the City of Plainfield in Terrill road, and,

Whereas, Public notice has been duly given of such application and of the intention of the Council of the City of Plainfield to consider the same by publication and also by posting a copy of the said notice in five or more of the most public places in the said city of Plainfield, at least fourteen days prior to the date fixed for the meeting of the said Council of the City of Plainfield to consider said application, and

Whereas, Upon the day fixed by said notice for said hearing and upon the days to which the said hearing was regularly adjourned, public hearing was given to all persons desiring to be heard in favor of or opposed to or in anywise interested in the said application for the location of the said tracks of the said street railway company and the said matter having been duly considered by the Council of the City of Plainfield, and the said Council having determined to grant permission for the construction, maintenance and operation of such street railway upon the streets, highways or public places designated in such petition, and the said company having filed with the clerk of the city of Plainfield the consent in writing of the owners, or their duly authorized legal representatives, of at least one-half in amount of the lineal feet of property on said Richmond street from East Fifth street to East Second street and on East Second street, from Richmond street to the present terminus of East Second street between Netherwood avenue and Leland avenue and thence along a right of way through private property to the line of the City of Plainfield in Terrill road,

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield: from a point in the present line of tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company in East Fifth street, opposite to Richmond street; thence westerly through Richmond street to East Second street; thence northerly through East Second street to the present terminus of said East Second street between Netherwood avenue and Leland avenue; thence along a right of way through private property northeasterly on a curve having a radius of four hundred and seventy-one feet and eight-tenths of a foot, two hundred and one feet and seventy-four hundredths of a foot; thence north twenty-one degrees and five minutes east two hundred and eighty-three feet and twenty-three hundredths of a foot; thence easterly on a curve with a radius of one thousand and eleven feet and five-tenths of a foot, four hundred and five feet and fifteen hundredths of a foot; thence north forty-four degrees two minutes east, two thousand three hundred and four feet and twenty hundredths of a foot to the line of the city of Plainfield in Terrill road, and in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city, entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turnouts and poles for proposed extension of Plainfield street Railway, No. 2," and signed by Thomas A. Nevins, President, dated August 1898, to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance, and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys, and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to, the same being such restrictions and regulations as the Common Council hereby deem requisite for the public interests as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may hereinafter enacted by said Council. All rights and privileges under this ordinance conferred upon said Company shall cease and expire on the first day of January, A. D., 1998, and thereupon, on demand, said Company will forthwith remove all of its said tracks from the streets, lanes and alleys of said city. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the city clerk by said company and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

This ordinance is furthermore passed upon the express condition that if at any time hereafter, the said city or its Common Council shall locate the tracks of any other street railway company or grant consent to the location of the tracks of any other street railway company over that portion of Richmond street lying between the southerly line of North avenue and the northerly line of East Third street, such other street railway company shall have the right to use the tracks and poles of said Plainfield Street Railway Company that may be laid or erected on said portion of Richmond street in common with said Plainfield Street Railway Company upon terms to be agreed upon between such other company and said Plainfield Street Railway Company, or in case said two companies shall fail for the space of thirty days next after demand made upon them by such other company to agree upon the terms, then upon terms to be established and determined by the Common Council of said city of Plainfield.

Section 2. That said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of Richmond street and East Second street to the present terminus of East Second street; thence along a right of way through private property, northeasterly on a curve having a radius of four hundred and seventy-one feet and eight-tenths of a foot, two hundred and one feet and seventy-four hundredths of a foot; thence north twenty-one degrees and five minutes east two hundred and eighty-three feet and twenty-three hundredths of a foot; thence easterly on a curve with a radius of one thousand and eleven feet and five-tenths of a foot, four hundred and five feet and fifteen hundredths of a foot; thence north forty-four degrees two minutes east, two thousand three hundred and four feet and twenty hundredths of a foot to the line of the city of Plainfield in Terrill road, and in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city, entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turnouts and poles for proposed extension of Plainfield street Railway, No. 2," and signed by Thomas A. Nevins, President, dated August 1898, to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance, and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys, and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to, the same being such restrictions and regulations as the Common Council hereby deem requisite for the public interests as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may hereinafter enacted by said Council. All rights and privileges under this ordinance conferred upon said Company shall cease and expire on the first day of January, A. D., 1998, and thereupon, on demand, said Company will forthwith remove all of its said tracks from the streets, lanes and alleys of said city. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the city clerk by said company and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

This ordinance is furthermore passed upon the express condition that if at any time hereafter, the said city or its Common Council shall locate the tracks of any other street railway company or grant consent to the location of the tracks of any other street railway company over that portion of Richmond street lying between the southerly line of North avenue and the northerly line of East Third street, such other street railway company shall have the right to use the tracks and poles of said Plainfield Street Railway Company that may be laid or erected on said portion of Richmond street in common with said Plainfield Street Railway Company upon terms to be agreed upon between such other company and said Plainfield Street Railway Company, or in case said two companies shall fail for the space of thirty days next after demand made upon them by such other company to agree upon the terms, then upon terms to be established and determined by the Common Council of said city of Plainfield.

Section 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the committee on streets the paving or other surface material of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double track or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks," shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of street the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's track and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervision of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinabove specified may be done or made by or under the direction of the said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that if the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days' notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repairs, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Section 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush along the side of said track or tracks in any street or streets in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when moving said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks the said company or its officers, servants, agents or employes shall cause the same to be immediately leveled between the said track or tracks and the gutter line on each side thereof unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the same aforesaid; in which latter case the said company shall promptly remove all such excess of snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of Ten Dollars for every city block in which any such violation shall take place, but said penalty shall not aggregate more than One Hundred Dollars in any one day or on any one conviction; said penalty to be paid to the city by the said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employes so offending for each and every offence.

Section 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations, provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city entitled "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars" approved April twenty-seventh, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as part of this ordinance.

Section 6. That the gauge of the tracks to be laid hereunder shall be four feet eight and one-half inches. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the Common Council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than ten miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks. For violation of any of the conditions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars for any one conviction.

Section 7. The cars to be operated or run upon the extension of the railway of the Plainfield Street Railway Company hereby authorized to be constructed shall be equipped with fenders of the pattern approved by the mayor of the city, and so attached to the cars as best to protect persons and vehicles using the streets and persons riding on the cars from injury.

Section 8. The said company shall build or construct the extension hereby authorized with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers on or before July 1st, A.D. 1899, and upon failure so to do or upon failure or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of the said company, their successors and assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance shall thereupon cease and determine and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such rights, power and privilege to said company is concerned and in either of such cases the Common Council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets or any of them and to sell and dispose of the material thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets and of restoring the same, as nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the Federal Courts shall not be included within the period within which the said extension is to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Section 9. All tracks of the Street Railway Company now laid or hereafter to be laid, are to be continuously used throughout the entire length and for the space of two feet on each side thereof, twice in each day, from the 15th day of May to the 1st day of October in each year; once before 11 A. M., and once after 2 P. M., and in case of the failure of the Street Railway Company so to do, to the satisfaction of the Street Commissioner or the Common Council, said Company shall pay to the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield the sum of $20.00 per day for each and every day such failure shall continue or exist; such payment to be considered as liquidated damages for such default.

Section 10. The said Company shall for the fifty years beginning January first, 1899, as compensation for the rights granted under this ordinance, pay the Collector or other receiving officer of the City of Plainfield, for the use of the said City, a sum equal to five per cent of the gross earnings of the Company on the tracks hereby authorized to be laid and for the succeeding twenty-five years shall pay to the Collector or other receiving officer of said City, for the use of said City, a sum not to exceed seven and one-half per cent. and not less than five per cent. of the gross earnings of the Company upon the tracks; and during the twenty-four years a sum not greater than ten or less than five per cent. of the gross earnings upon said tracks.

The percentages to be paid as aforesaid for either or both of said last periods of twenty-five and twenty-four years respectively, if not mutually agreed upon between the said City and the said Company within sixty days respectively after the beginning of said respective periods shall be fixed within the limits of the percentages as above specified by three arbitrators, one to be appointed by the City, one by the said Company and the third by the Circuit Court of the County of Union on five days' notice to either or both parties of said periods last referred to said Company shall fail to agree with the City upon the percentage or percentages, and also fail to appoint its arbitrator, and notify the City in writing of said appointment within five days after notice to appoint such arbitrator, then the percentage or percentages to be paid by said Company annually for such period or periods respectively, shall be the maximum percentage for such period or periods above specified.

The gross earnings shall be construed to be all the earnings of the Company upon said tracks hereby authorized to be laid, including the full proportion of the earnings on traffic within the City of Plainfield and other traffic to be computed according to the proportion between the length of the journey and the number of miles traveled upon the tracks hereby authorized to be laid, provided that the annual gross earnings of the said company upon said tracks hereby authorized to be laid, shall for the purpose of entitling the city to said percentages, and fixing the minimum sum on which said percentage shall be paid, be deemed and taken to be not less than such sum as would be produced by adding to all fares of five cents each or less than five cents each, paid during the year upon said portion of said tracks, two and one-half cents each for all other passengers carried upon said tracks or any portion thereof, above the age of ten years, and one and one-half cents each for all other passengers between the age of four and ten years carried over any portion of the tracks hereby authorized to be laid during the year. And to enable such calculation to be readily made the said company, its successors or assigns, will at all times cause separate returns to be made and properly tabulated in its books showing the number of passengers carried and the fares paid upon the line of tracks hereby authorized to be laid or any portion thereof, and the number of passenger carried on any part of said tracks who paid more than five cent fares per passenger, or who paid fares beyond the line of tracks hereby authorized, and also showing the number of passengers carried upon any portion of any of the tracks of said company located within the territory of the city of Plainfield or the Borough of North Plainfield, and the fares paid by them, whether such fares were paid within or without such territory, and a further table showing the proportion of earnings referred to in the first part of this paragraph; and annually between the first day of January and the fifteenth day of January in each year the said Company, its successors and assigns, will file with the City Clerk of said City a complete and detailed statement, signed by its President or Vice-President and its Treasurer, showing in fact what were the gross earnings for the year ending the first day of said month upon said tracks, and a table similarly signed showing in detail the total minimum account of gross earnings as they would be calculated according to the terms of this section, and similar statement showing gross earnings upon all the tracks of said Company within the City of Plainfield or the Borough of North Plainfield, either and both.

That to enable the City to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of such Company, or to ascertain any facts required to be stated as aforesaid, the books of the Company shall from time to time when required, be opened in Plainfield to inspection by the Finance Committee of the Common Council or such other person or persons as the Common Council for that purpose shall designate.

The payment provided for in this section shall, as to the line of tracks hereby authorized, be in lieu of all license fees for cars whether provided for in prior ordinances or not, but the moneys to be paid by said Company to the City, as to all tracks heretofore authorized, shall be determined according to prior ordinances, except that in determining the amounts payable to the City under such prior ordinances, there shall be added to gross receipts on the other tracks the gross receipts on the line of tracks hereby authorized, and when the total in any one year shall equal or exceed Eighty Thousand Dollars for the entire system within the City of Plainfield and the Borough of North Plainfield, including gross earnings on tracks hereby authorized, then for that year and annually thereafter, there shall be paid as aforesaid to the Collector of said City, for the use of the City, five per cent of the gross earnings on tracks heretofore authorized, and on gross earnings on tracks hereby authorized, the percentages hereinabove specified for the same—the intent hereof being that as to the tracks authorized by this ordinance, compensation on the percentage basis above particularly set forth shall be chargeable from the beginning; and as to the tracks authorized by prior ordinances, competition to the City shall be paid as at present until the total gross receipts of said Company on all its tracks within the territory of said City and Borough, including tracks authorized by this ordinance, shall equal or exceed Eighty Thousand Dollars, and after that, percentages shall be chargeable on all gross receipts as hereinabove particularly specified.

Section 11. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight car or cars shall be run over any of its tracks, that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks and that no luggage other than hand luggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company, or any other cars passing over said tracks. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prevent the company from carrying the U. S. Mail. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any street corner and said company shall cause the cars to come to a full stop and sound the gong or bell immediately before turning any curve or crossing such street or streets as may be designated by the Common Council on road now constructed or to be constructed. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of Twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Section 12. That all the duties or obligations imposed upon said Plainfield Street Railway Company by this ordinance or the contracts hereinafter referred to shall be binding and obligatory upon said Company, its successors and assigns, and in case the said company shall lease its tracks or any section of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company shall cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer a stipulation and agreement and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and the contract herein referred to, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or attempted to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer thereof to be made, so that no persons, or corporations, shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions herein and in said contract provided.

Sec. 13. That the said Company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby shall as a condition precedent execute on its part (after properly filling blanks for dates) and file with the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield a contract between said Company and Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, in the words and figures contained in the draft of said contract filed with the City Clerk December 12, 1898, and endorsed "Contract between Plainfield Street Railway Company and Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, referred to in Street Railway ordinance introduced December 12, 1898," said said contract shall thereupon be duly executed on behalf of the City by the Mayor and City Clerk and impressed with the corporate seal of said City.

Section 14. That said company shall also at the same time hereinabove specified for filing said contract file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the Common Council and Corporation Counsel of said city, conditioned for the faithful and careful keeping, observing and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained and also the terms and conditions contained in the contract referred to in the last preceding section on the part of this company to be kept, observed and performed. And in case the condition or terms upon which said company is granted permission to lay its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by said company, its agents or employes.

Section 15. The said Company shall within thirty days next after the passage of this ordinance, file with the City Clerk its acceptance of said ordinance and of the contract hereinbefore referred to, including all the agreements, terms, provisions, restrictions and regulations and covenants in the said contract, ordinance or contract contained, which said acceptance shall be under the corporate seal of said Company and shall be signed by the President of said Company; and in default of the filing of such acceptance within the time limited aforesaid it shall be understood and held that said Company declines to accept the same, and thereupon all rights, powers and privileges to them granted thereby shall forever cease and be at an end in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

Adopted by the Common Council and approved by the Mayor Dec. 28th, 1898.

A MAN WON HER.

It's an awkward thing when master and man are in love with the same girl One must give way, you see! And if the master is that one, it's apt to be bad for the man. Knowing this, John Adams and Emily Bolton resolved to keep their engagement to themselves for a bit, until they could start in life on their own account.

Why the girl had fallen in love with the man instead of his master it would puzzle a conjurer to tell. I'm sure she couldn't have said herself. It was he, John Adams, who suggested secrecy; and Emily, after a little dispute, agreed.

Emily accepted John about Christmas time, and he argued that it would be ruin to be discharged in the slack time.

"We'll keep it to ourselves till the spring, my girl, and then we can snap our fingers at him," said John.

But Emily had no desire to snap her fingers at Reuben Saunders. She was not built that way. She felt sorry for him, and wished him all manner of good things. Still she was in love with John, and consequently did as he told her.

But long before spring came—in fact, it was the middle of February—it began to be rumored about that John and Emily were engaged. Reuben heard the report and went straightway to her father's cottage and asked to see Emily.

Mrs. Bolton opened the door. She stepped back and called up stairs,—

"Em'ly, Emily! Here's Mr. Saunders wants to see yer."

And then she went about her work, and left him standing at the open door. She, for her part, preferred Reuben to John as a husband for her pretty daughter. That she was the girl's mother, and knew the value of money by its lack, may account for her preference. Moreover Reuben was as good a man as John, though not so handsome.

"I've only come to ask you a question, Emily," said Reuben, humbly, when at last the girl appeared.

"Say on," said Emily, not quite at her ease, for there had been a time when she had given Reuben encouragement.

"I hear that you and John Adams are going to be married." And Reuben lifted his honest eyes and looked the girl straight in the face.

"I don't see what business it is of yours. I suppose we've a right—" began the girl, angrily.

But before she could finish her sentence, Reuben said, sadly, "I've got my answer," and turned away.

The girl's heart smote her.

'Stay, Reuben, stay! It's not my fault. I did not want to keep it from you. But—but John said—"

Emily stopped. The meanness of it all ashamed her.

"I know, I know! Adams judges me by himself, and thought I would turn him off as soon as I heard of it!" said Saunders, bitterly.

Of course John's sweetheart fired up at that.

"If you've got anything to say against John, you can say it to some one else, Mr. Saunders!" she cried out.

"I haven't!" he shouted back, striding off down the little path to the front gate as Emily slammed the door.

"I'll give him a week's wages and turn him off," Reuben told himself, passionately. Then Emily's sweet face rose before him. "I can't do it—I can't do it!" he muttered, as he strode on, his hands deep down in his trouser's pockets, his head bent forward on his chest, a novice man than he thought himself.

CHAPTER II.

It was with a heavy heart that Emily went to meet her lover the next day, which was Saturday, and therefore a half holiday. She had not seen him since she told Reuben of their engagement, and was afraid to hear what Reuben might have said to John about it.

The first sight of John's face when they met reassured her. As I have said before, he was a handsome young man, and as he came smilingly up to her, Emily felt certain that she loved him dearly, and that he was in every way a more desirable man than Saunders. Which, strange to say, was not what she always thought about him in his absence. After their usual greeting, they turned and walked on together.

"The boss has been very civil to me this morning," said John; "called me into that little office of his, and said he thought as he'd heard of a place as'd suit me. Kind of foreman's place down in the shires; a place called Burdock, I think he said."

"Oh, John, how good of him!" exclaimed the girl.

"H'm," said John, with a conceited smile: "don't you see, eh, he wants to get rid of me—wants me out of the way so he can come after you?"

"No—no; he knows better."

"He's a precious sight too conceited to know better. Lor' I did laugh in my sleeve as I thanked him, and said as I'd be glad if he'd speak a word for me. If I get it we'll be married right away. Now you see how wise of me to insist on you saying nothing about our being engaged."

"You're quite wrong!" cried Emily, who had in vain tried to interrupt the flow of her sweetheart's words. "It's because he knows. He came and asked me yesterday, and I told him!"

"You told him we were going to be married?"

"Yes, I told him," repeated Emily.

"Well, I'm blowed!" and John looked as if after that nothing would surprise him any more. Then, after a few minutes' consideration, "He must be a fool!" he exclaimed.

To this Emily vouchsafed no reply, so John, not exactly understanding her silence, changed the subject by saying,— "Em, you've often wanted to go over the old Manor House, and you won't have many more chances if I get this place. Shall we go now?"

PEOPLE COME AND GO.

PERSONAL MENTION OF INTEREST TO PRESS READERS.

Some Come to Enjoy Pleasures of Plainfield, Others Journey to Either Mountain or Shore for Recreation.

Mr. Whitely, of St. Paul, Minn., is visiting relatives in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs, of Pearl street, who have been ill with the grip, have about recovered.

William M. McCutchen, of Rockview terrace, returned yesterday to Yale University.

Miss Helen A. Hazen, of Watchung avenue, has left to resume her studies at Mt. Holyoke College.

Miss Alice A. Barlow, of Prospect place, has gone to Scranton for a three weeks' visit with friends.

Miss Mayme Mullen, of Philadelphia, has returned home after visiting the Misses Madden, of West Fifth street.

Miss Fanny Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, who has been out of town for some time past, has returned home for a short time.

Miss Florence Robinson, of Paterson, has returned home after visiting at the home of Mrs. Charlotte DeMeza, of West Second street.

Mrs. Francis Whitely, of Steiner place, seems to be greatly improved from her illness. Her daughter, Miss Mirex, is also improving.

Miss Ida Benham, assistant operator at the North Avenue station, is on the sick list. Her place is being filled by the night man, Henry Gorrill.

Miss Constance Patton, of West Fifth street, has returned to Smith College after spending the greater part of her Christmas vacation in Plainfield.

MUST COME A CHANGE.

ceive a yearly compensation of not over $40 a year, or about 65 cents for every fire. Each man would be expected to attend every fire unless he could present as an excuse illness or being out of town. Otherwise he would be fined and the fine deducted from his pay. No fireman under the "call" system would be allowed to leave town without permission from the department. While such permission would be granted except on special occasions, it would enable the department to know just how many men it could count on.

It is rather difficult to compare the cost of the two systems with any degree of certainity. At the present rate of taxation, if each of the proposed 120 new members was exempted from the payment of taxes on $500 worth of assessable property each, it would cost the city $12.10 per man, or $1,452 in all per year. Now it might be possible that each of the new firemen would not own property valued at that amount. But it is to be remembered that each firemen is entitled to exemption from taxes to that amount through his term of service and if he passes that without losing his membership in the company, the exemption goes on for life. This would more than make up for the average cost of the department to the figures named.

Four companies of eight men each under the "call" system would cost the city $40 each or 1,280 in all per year, showing a saving of $172 over the other method. Such estimates are and can not possibly be made perfectly accurate as there are many influences that would change the figures and circumstances. Chief Doane believes that they are sufficiently accurate to show, however, that the city would lose nothing in the end and probably gain by it if the "call" system was introduced. Then the department would have the advantage of being composed of trained men who would always respond to the alarm, and the fabled destructiveness of the novice at the fire would be a thing of the past.

In the contest for the highest score during the month of December on the Park Club alleys Dr. C. R. Thiers was victorious, rolling 235. Charles Dupee and W. J. Roome, Jr., were a close second with 234 each.

The contest at the Park Club alleys for the greatest number of 200 scores brought out a particularly exciting contest during the month of December. Up to the last day of the month William M. McCutchen was in the lead with four scores above the required amount. Last Saturday night, the last night of the month, Fred O. Ball rolled 204 in the Bachelor-Benedict game. That tied him with McCutchen as he had already made three 200 scores during the month. At the conclusion of the Bachelor-Benedict game Ball and McCutchen rolled their best to see who would win out in the contest. McCutchen seemed to loose the knack, while Ball was in good shape. Just fifteen minutes before midnight Ball completed a game that was above the required 200 and gave him possession of the trophy for the next month.

TO REVIVE CHAIN-GANG PLAN.

Middlesex Authorities Will Make Returning Tramps Work.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Jan. 6.—The tramp nuisance in New Brunswick and Middlesex county, once so nearly wiped out under the operation of the chain-gang law, has become a serious problem within the past two weeks. New Brunswick and the country immediately adjacent to the city are overrun with hoboes.

The authorities ascribe the invasion to the death of William C. Canse, of New Brunswick. Mr. Canse, a member of the County Board of Freeholders, secured the passage of chain-gang measures, providing for the shackling of tramps and putting them at work in gangs on the streets. He prosecuted the war against the hoboes with such vigor as to make Middlesex county a place to be shunned by the vagabonds. When the first chain-gang laws were enforced he received several letters daily in which his life was threatened.

At the next meeting of the Board of Freeholders arrangements will be made for continuing the work Mr. Canse began.

ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

Officer of a Railway Employes' Organization Charged With Misapplying Funds.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 6—George Collins, of Roselle, who has been treasurer for some time of the Brakemen's Brotherhood, on the New Jersey Central Railroad, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Communipaw ferry on a charge of embezzlement, preferred against him by the brotherhood, and was taken to the Hudson county jail, where he still is.

Collins is accused of appropriating to his own use about $400 belonging to the society. He admits, it is said, having used the money, but claims he was forced to do it owing to continual sickness in his family.

Relics of the War.

There is on exhibition in the show window at Armstrong's pharmacy a collection of war relics owned by Dr. M. S. Simpson, and brought by him from Cuba. Included in the collection is a Spanish rifle, Springfield rifle, various kinds and sizes of bullets, a canteen, and a pair of shoes commonly worn by Cuban soldiers. The relics are very valuable and afford an instructive object lesson to all who desire to learn of them.

To Make Tests.

Walter B. Rittonhouse, of East Sixth street, left this morning for Niagara Falls, where he will conduct a series of tests at the factories of the International Paper Company. He will be absent a month and will then go to the site of the other factories of that company to make similar tests. Mr. Rittenhouse graduated from Stevens Institute last June with the degree of Mechanical Engineer.

Will Take Action Next Month.

A meeting of the few members of No. 2 Engine Company still remaining in good standing, was held last evening. It was dicided that some definite action should be taken at the next regular meeting of the company, the first Thursday in February, regarding the present situation of the company.

Roller Polo Games.

Arrangements have been completed whereby Plainfield will see some winter sport. The Crescent Rink has been secured for roller polo and a team composed of young men from this city will play teams from the Elizabeth Club and clubs of neighboring cities.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The subscriber, the Collector of Taxes of the city of Plainfield, hereby gives notice that a certified copy of the Assessment of Henry W. Marshall, Frank Bushnell and Robert A. Meeker, the Commissioners of Assessments of the City of Plainfield, heretofore appointed under the ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for the appointment of Commissioners of Assessments under Chapter cxii, P. L. 1895," approved April 25, 1895, as altered and subsequently ratified and confirmed by the Common Council, containing the assessments of damages and benefits or expenses, as the case may be, for the making and constructing of sewers and appurtenances (including house connections), under and by virtue of the Act of the Legislature, entitled, "An Act to provide for drainage and sewerage in Cities of this State," approved April 7th, 1896, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, and ordinances and other proceedings of the Common Council had under said Acts of the Legislature, said report and assessments covering the whole of said system of sewerage and appurtenances already completed (not covered by assessments heretofore made) and particularly in and through the following described streets and parts of streets to wit:

Berkeley avenue, from Ravine road southwesterly 379.7 feet to a point near Belvidere avenue.

Watchung avenue, from East Front street northwesterly 268.6 feet to a point near Green brook, including house connections and including appurtenances of said sewerage system in connection therewith: the said streets and parts of streets in which the same were so made and constructed and the location and dimensions of the several lots, tracts and parcels of land and real estate so assessed being delineated on a certain set of maps numbered "1 A" and "2 A," and each, map marked "Sewerage Construction Assessment Map, dated August 5, 1898," and attested by the signatures of the said Commissioners and filed in the office of the Collector of Taxes, September 6th, 1898, which said report and assessment were originally filed in the City Clerk's office September 6th, 1898, and ratified and confirmed by the Common Council of said city on the twenty-ninth day of December, A. D. 1898, (after alterations as aforesaid), has been furnished and delivered to the subscriber by the Common Council of said City, and a certified copy of such assessment has been duly entered in the book kept for that purpose in the office of the subscriber, and payment of the sums assessed as aforesaid, is hereby required to be made within sixty days from and after the sixth day of January, 1899, being the date of the first publication of this notice.

Said assessments are required to be paid at the office of the subscriber, No. 109 Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J. The law provides that in case said assessments shall remain unpaid at the expiration of sixty days from and after such first publication, the said assessments shall draw interest thereon from that time at the rate of one per centum per month; and it shall be the duty of the Collector to proceed forthwith in the collection of said assessments by a sale of the land in respect of which said assessments may have been made.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION.

The Daily Press Offers to Everyone a Splendid Chance to Gain It.

ALL THAT IT WILL COST IS A LITTLE WORK.

VALUABLE PRIZES FOR SECURING NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO THE PAPER.

Complete Scholarships in Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography for the Ones Getting First and Second Largest Number.

The Twentieth Century is now less than one brief year away. It promises to see an era of prosperity in this country that is bound to stir this land to its very foundations and see its result rising on every hand. Then the young men and the young women, who have prepared themselves for this opportunity, will rise to the front and attain their full share of the prosperity of the land and, perhaps, rise to the top in the never ceasing struggle for supremacy. Knowledge is power. And it is necessary in these days of close competition to have every advantage possible in the chosen vocation, whatever it is. The young people who will make their mark in the coming century will be those who know what they want to do and how to do it. To reach that state it is necessary to have preparation.

It is a disputed question whether circumstances make men, but everyone will admit that many a poor boy or girl would rise to success easier and with far more rapidity if he or she had had the advantage of a practical education along the lines of the chosen career. There are a host of reasons, oftentimes, why some intelligent young man or young woman is compelled to trust to his or her own resources instead of having the educational advantages that his more fortunate brothers and sisters are enjoying. A lack of the necessary financial means may present an unsurmountable barrier in the way of success. It may be that the lack of the proper time to devote to study hinders the advancement.

With the return of prosperity and the development of our recently added colonies, there will be wonderful strides made in the commercial world. There will be a strong demand for young men who are prepared to enter a commercial career with a practical knowledge of the subject. The work is too complex to give a complete novice much chance to enter. The up-to-date business man wants bookkeepers who can keep books, he hasn't the time nor the inclination to teach them how.

Another great field that is opening to the young people of modern times is the countless positions as stenographer and type-writer that grow in number every day. Here is an opportunity that a young man or young women with the proper education can grasp.

Right in this very city and in the little towns scattered on its out-skirts, there are many young men and young who are anxiously striving for success but who are hindered for various reasons, financial and otherwise, through the lack of the proper practical education. Recoguizing this fact, The Daily Press has now perfected arrangements whereby two young people will be enabled to gain the coveted education by dint of a little extra labor applied at odd moments. Who those young people shall be lies entirely with themselves. Energy and perseverence will win for them without cost to themselves.

The Daily Press has entered into an agreement with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography and Shorthand wheby we are enable to offer a scholarship in each institution to the two persons—preferably to young men or young women—who have secured for The Daily Press the largest number of new subscribers according to the rules herein prescribed.

As first prize in the contest, a complete commercial course at the Plainfield Business College is offered. It may be completed in one or two years at day or night sessions, or both, according to the wish of the winner. Its cost is $75, but the victor in The Daily Press contest will receive it free. The course includes the very best of training in bookkeeping, arithmetic, rapid calculation, business practice, banking, commercial law, grammar, spelling, penmanship and correspondence. It will be well worthy of the best efforts of any bright young man or woman in the city. The college is located in the City National Bank building on East Front street and its excellence is well known here.

The second prize in the contest will consist of a three months' course in stenography and typewriting at the Gregg School. The Gregg School has recently been opened in the Babcock building, West Front street, by Prof. William VanWert, who is an expert in the business and perfectly capable of giving the best of instruction.

To add to the interest in the contest, a third prize will be offered. It will be a substantially bound edition of Webster's International Dictionary complete, with reference index.

Should the winner of the first or second prizes not care to personally take advantage of the courses offered, arrangements have been made whreby they can be transferred to a relative or friend selected by those entitled to them under the rules of the contest.

So that all interested may understand at once what is to be required of them the following rules to govern the contest have been drafted:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with.

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

There are doubtless other particulars concerning the contest that those interested in it will be anxious to know. All such facts can easily be obtained by calling at The Daily Press office and consulting the circulation manager who will be very glad to assist any who are interested in the work. It should be well understood, however, that in order to enter the contest it is not necessary to enter your name, but simply to secure and send in the first new subscriber and the name of the sender will be entered at once as a contestant.

All are particularly requested to be sure and give the full name and complete address of every subscriber turned in.

Installed Officers.

Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., met last night and installed the new officers elected last month. The installation was in charge of Past Master Workman G. T. Dunham and Bauersachs. Three new members were initiated and one old member was re-instated upon payment of back dues.

TROLLEY MEN ACTIVE.

APPLICATION FOR TROLLEY FRANCHISE MADE AT ROSELLE.

Another to be Made to Elizabeth City Council for Franchise Through That City—Some Other Trolley Talk.

Now that the trolley magnates, known in Plainfield under the name of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, but through the rest of Union county as the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, have secured the necessary franchises for this end of the line, they are opening a campaign in Elizabeth. The company has announced that it will apply at the next meeting of the City Council of Elizabeth for a franchise to operate its railroad through Jersey avenue to West Jersey street, to Board street, to the Central Railroad tracks. This company is the corporation that first sought to operate a trolley over the Westfield avenue route, which franchise was sold to John Kean for $250,000. It is expected that this route will be in operation before the Kean road, as its promoters have secured the entire right of way from Westfield to Elizabeth, and will use the north side of Westfield avenue and cross the Central Railroad and Westfield avenue by a bridge at Garwood, just west of Roselle. Electricity will furnish the motive power.

Trolley at Roselle.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Roselle, Jan. 7—From the city line of Elizabeth through to Plainfield the franchises for the line of the proposed trolley road of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company have been secured with the exception of the one from the Roselle borough. Last night at a meeting of the Borough Council of this place the trolley company in question presented their application for a trolley line through Roselle. The corporation was represented at the meeting by Secretary E. W. Hine and A. A. Gaddis. The date for the public hearing was set for Tuesday evening, January 24th, at the Borough Hall. The building of the line will be started as soon as the franchise is granted.

U. S. MAIL POUCHES STOLEN FROM WAGON.

PLAINFIELD MAIL WAS THERE.

Some of It May Have Been in the Stolen Pouches Taken in Jersey City.

If there are any Plainfielders who have been looking vainly for mail during the past week, it may be that their letters, packets or what ever it happened to be, were contained in two unlucky mail pouches that were stolen last Saturday.

At 2 o'clock last Saturday afternoon a two horse mail wagon left the General Postoffice in New York bound for the Jersey City station of the Jersey Central Railroad. The wagon contained pouches for the New York and Point Pleasant and the New York and Easton divisions of the Central and the Philadelphia and Grafton division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The Easton division includes Plainfield.

The mail was delivered to one of the mail cars at the Central station but two full pouches were missing. As soon as the disappearance was reported inspectors were put on the case and are now at work. The facts that they have discovered, if any, have not yet been made public.

UNION SERVICES.

A Plan for the Quickening of Religious Spirit in the City.

The prayer meetings that have been held in the different churches of Plainfield during the past week, in conformity to the annual week of prayer, have resulted in one good at least, viz., the quickening and warming up of the Christian people who attended the meetings, if not in the converting of sinners. The pastors who have been meeting every afternoon at 5 o'clock for prayer and conference, yesterday, were of the unanimous opinion that it would be well to hold union services every night next week, excepting Wednesday and Saturday evenings, in the First Presbyterian church. Good preaching and singing will be furnished each evening, and an outpouring of the Holy Spirit is prayerfully hoped for.

Dr. Jenkins' Horse Ran Away.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins' horse ran away yesterday afternoon on Elm place and upset the buggy. Dr. Jenkins was inside a house attending a patient, and the colored driver attempted to turn the horse around. The harness broke and let the horse loose, but he was caught before he had gone far. The contents of the buggy were scattered all over the street, and the colored man was left behind with the overturned buggy.

SOCIETY DEFIES GRIP AND BAD WEATHER

Successful Reception and Dance at Home Of Col. Tyler.

ELABORATE DECORATIONS.

GIVEN IN HONOR OF TWO NEWLY WEDDED COUPLES.

They Were Nephews of Mrs. Tyler—At the Last Moment Rev. Frederick S. Wright Was Taken Ill With the Grip—Many Local Society Folk Were Present—A Dance in the Evening.

The grip and disagreeable weather conspired to overthrow the well laid plans of Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler for the charming reception and dance held at their spacious home on West Seventh street yesterday afternoon and evening. But it wasn't any use. The affair was a grand success and eminently a social triumph. The grip waylaid two of the principal participants, however, while grip and the weather kept many of the invited guests at home.

The affair was given in honor of Dr. and Mrs. George H. Wright, of New Milford, Conn., and Rev. and Mrs. Frederick A. Wright, of Stamford, Conn., both newly wedded couples. The young men are nephews of Mrs. Tyler and have often visited in this city where they are well-known. Dr. and Mrs. Wright were on their bridal tour. At the last moment, a telegram was received stating that the other couple would be unable to attend as both were ill with the grip.

A reception was held from 5 to 8 and was attended by some 125 guests, principally from Plainfield, Col. and Mrs. Tyler and Dr. and Mrs. Wright were assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. R. P. Lincoln, of New York city, and Mrs. George William Wright, of New Milford, Conn., mother of the grooms. The rooms were profusely decorated, the prevailing color being pink.

The table was an elaborate arrangement in the prevailing colors. At the table Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Wm. G. Wright and D. H. Rowland. They were assisted in serving the guests by the Misses Annie Murphy, Daisy VanBoskerck, Ethel VanBoskerck, Bessie Ginna, Helen Lincoln and Katherine Stewart.

During the evening, from 9 o'clock until 12, a dance for the young people was held, at which there were some hundred guests in attendance. The table was removed from the dining room and placed in the kitchen, which was also decorated. Refreshments were served there at a late hour.

The supper was served by Maresi, of New York. Rogers furnished the music for the dance. There were 650 invitations issued.

RED MEN INSTALLED.

In the absence of District Deputy Slug, of Carteret, owing to the inclemency of the weather, the following officers of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., were installed last evening by Great Junior Sagamore Wm. Newcorn: Junior sagamore, William Newcorn; prophet, J. F. Green; sachem, George Houseman; senior sagamore, Frank Sowden; junior sagamore, Howard Wooston; chief of records, C. L. Holstein; collector of wampum, David C. Allen; keeper of wampum, W. A. Westphal; first sannap, A. J. Stigiitz; second sannap, Joseph Johnston; guard wigwam, Charles Fulmer; guard forest, Michael Leahy; warriors, John Cashman, Lawrence Scheelein, Charles Keller, Wm. R. Waite; braves, J. J. Reilly, Frank VanPelt, David Thompson, William Guest; trustee, eighteen months, N. C. Magne.

The reading of the various reports show that the tribe is in an excellent condition, both financially and in membership. There are now 233 members on the roll, not including delinquents, who have been dropped.

Union Meetings Next Week.

Union meetings of the churches of the city, under the auspices of the pastors, will be held every night next week with the exception of Wednesday and Saturday nights in the First Presbyterian church. Services will begin at 8 o'clock and all are cordially invited to attend.

Listened to Financial Report.

The McGullions met last night and listened to the report of the finance committee. A special meeting was called for later in the month when the election of officers will be held, as there was not time enough for it last night.

Miss Lena Tomlinson, of West Fifth street, has returned from a visit at Westerley, R. I.

A MANLY FELLOW DEAD.

HOWARD W. CORLIES SUCCUMBS TO AN ATTACK OF PNEUMONIA.

He Had Been Sick Only Ten Days and But Few of His Friends Knew of His Serious Illness—Prominent in Society.

The unexpected death of Howard W. Corlies, of Road Ending, which occurred last evening, was a severe blow to the host of friends of this popular young man, many of whom did not know of the seriousness of his illness. Death was due to pneumonia from which the young man was a sufferer for about ten days. Mr. Corlies had not been real strong since he had an attack of appendicitis about two years ago, and his constitution was not the strongest. Dr. Murray was the attending physician and everything know to medical skill was used to save life.

Mr. Corlies was a person of rare devotion to his mother. In a large circle of friends he was a great favorite. In society he was a prominent figure and was a leader. He attended the Crescent Avenue church constantly and faithfully. He was also an active member of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and was very popular among all the members. In other channels his manly influence, kind ways and genial disposition won for him the admiration of all who knew him.

He was associated in business with his uncle, Howard Wright, who is connected with the Standard Oil Company. A mother and three sisters survive him. The sisters are Miss Edmee Corlies, Mrs. Harry C. Adams and Mrs. J. Parker Mason, all of this city.

The funeral services will be held from the residence Road Ending, Monday afternoon next at 2:30 o'clock.

TO SETTLE LOSS ON THE THOMPSON BUILDING.

A PLAN FINALLY SETTLED UPON.

Mr. Thompson and Insurance Companies to Choose a Representative Each—Third is to be Disinterested.

At last A. D. Thompson's loss by fire on North avenue is to be settled by the insurance companies. For sometime past the companies and Mr. Thompson have been trying to form some plan whereby the matter could be settle satisfactory, but it seems that all efforts have failed. The plan adopted for settlement is that the companies appoint one man, Mr. Thompson another and a wholly disinterested party a third man to compose a board of arbitration. This plan meets with the approval of all concerned.

Mr. Thompson appointed James Manning, of this city, as his representative. The companies appointed a second man, while an outside party who is an expert in such matters was asked to appoint the third member, which he did. The board of arbitration met recently and investigated all matters of interest pertaining to the fire as directly interesting Mr. Thompson, and next week the members will meet in New York to state figures for settlement. The decision of the board will be accepted as final by the insurance companies and Mr. Thompson.

ANOTHER BREAK IN THE RAILS.

Careful Watching Discovered One in the Fanwood Cut This Morning.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Fanwood, Jan. 7—Another break in one of the rails on the westbound passenger track of the Jersey Central Railroad was reported this morning by the trackwalker, 200 yards west of the Fanwood depot. It was said to be several inches long. Trains were signalled and crossed the break at very slow speed until it was repaired by the section gang. The break is supposed to have been caused by the sudden change in the temperature and the frost of last night.

Course of Lectures.

A course of three lectures are to be given in Vincent chapel by Leon H. Vincent, March 3d, at 4 p. m., the subject will be "Carlyle and His Wife," and March 10th, at the same hour, the subject will be "Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning." In the evening of March 17th Mr. Vincent will lecture on the subject of "Barrie and the New Scotch School." Mr. Vincent has lectured in this city before, and he is an exceptionally interesting speaker.

Heard on the Street.

Almost every day we hear someone remark, "I don't like the looks of that man, he has a bad eye." You may have a bad eye, too, without knowing it, wherein lies the danger, for a bad eye can be cured, provided a proper examination, such as is free to you at Collier's reveals to you its cause and treatment.

JURY DECIDED THERE WAS NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

THIRD TRIAL OF CASE AGAINST HAND.

Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company Claimed He Collected Money He Was Not Entitled to.

Yesterday for the third time a jury was drawn to Justice Moffatt's court to try the case in tort of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company against Fred W. Hand for $71.18 which they claim Hand owes them on money collected by him after he had sold out his ice business to them. The jury, after being out three hours, brought in a verdict of no cause of action. Notice of appeal was given at once.

The first jury was drawn fully six weeks ago, but owing to some differences between the constable and the court, the jury were discharged, and the case adjourned. The next time the case came up it was tried, but the jury disagreed. This time the case was fought on the same lines, but it took the men from 1:30 o'clock until 4:30 to agree upon a verdict. Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiffs, and S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, was for the defendant.

The jurymen were Isaac Randolph, James B. Clarkson, J. S. Garretson, P. A. VanFleet, Nathan C. Pennington, Charles G. Ross, I. P. Larew, Thomas Gray, J. W. Anderson, L. C. Sheppard, J. N. Wyckoff and Robert Walker.

WALTER SCOTT'S FATHER.

He Has Just Retired From Thirty-eight Years in One Pastorate.

Walter Scott, of East Front street, has received an article published in the "Ayr Advertiser," Scotland, December 15th, 1898, which gives an account of the retirement of his father, David Scott, aged 87 years, from the Parish Council from Girvan, after a service of thirty-eight years. At a meeting of the Parish Council suitable resolutions were adopted in connection with Mr. Scott's retirement in which the deep and sincere regret of all the members was expressed. Mr. Scott's devotion to duty, his ability to quickly grasp and deal with matters of detal, his firmness and decision of character, his stern adherence to everything good and true, his earnestness of purpose, his uniform amiability of temper and charitable disposition, all combined to make him a tower of strength.

IN A SHAM BATTLE.

Third Regiment Boys Enjoy an Artificial Taste of War.

A letter has been received from Frank Haurand, who is with the Third Regiment at Athens, Ga., in which he sends an interesting account of a sham battle which was fought on Georgia Hillside last Tuesday between several regiments, including the Third New Jersey. The account is taken from the Athens Banner, and is thrilling. It speaks of the way in which the New Jersey boys were forced to retreat, and had there been bullets in front of the powder there would scarcely have been a New Jerseyan left to tell the tale. The battle was witnessed by three thousand people, and not an accident occurred to mar the event.

EXTENSION LECTURES AGAIN

Second Series to be Started With a Lecture by Prof. Mace.

The lectures under the auspices of the University Extension Society will be resumed next Tuesday evening in Y. M. C. A. Hall, when Prof. Mace, of Syracuse University, who is a master of his subject, will commence his course in American history on "The Development of the Nation."

Prof. Smyth's lectures on American literature were much appreciated, and in Prof. Mace's course we are promised another treat.

We understand from the committee that tickets can be obtained for this course at Armstrong's drug store at $1 each.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

George Leland Must Answer for Alleged Deceiving of Miss O'Neil.

George Leland, who is charged by Mary O'Neil, a domestic, with obtaining $29 from her under false pretenses, as told in yesterday's Press, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Justice Mosher and held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand jury. Leland pleaded the court to be merciful and put the bail at $100, but the Justice answered by making it $500. Mrs. Tillie Riker went Leland's bond. He was represented in court by William G. DeMeza.

License Time Again.

At the first meeting of the City Council in February the liquor licenses will be applied for by the local dealers.

POWER FOR COLLECTOR TO MAKE EXEMPTIONS.

Taxes Prove an Important Topic for Borough School.

STATE LAW IS FOLLOWED.

MAYOR APPOINTS B. J SHREVE MEMBER OF BOARD OF HEALTH.

Councilman Valiant Reports Borough Finances in Good Condition, and a $1,500 Note is Ordered Paid Before it is Due—Mayor's Suggestion for a New Crosswalk is Not Accepted.

A good share of the Borough Council meeting last night was taken up in discussing matters pertaining to taxes, especially in relation to the exempt firemen, several of whom have applied to the Council for the exemption usually allowed them, and for which there seems to have been no provision made this year. Exempt firemen living in other localities have also communicated with the Council, and want exemption on property they own in the borough.

The difficulty was finally removed by the Council passing a resolution authorizing the collector, George F. Brown, to allow a reduction to exempt firemen according to an act recently passed by the Legislature, and recorded upon the statutes, upon the exempt firemen certifying to the Council their name and address.

Councilmen Bell, Woolston, Rogers, Valiant and Burtis were present. Councilman MacLaughlin was absent on account of illness. William B. Krewson sent in his resignation as a member of Warren Engine Company, which was accepted. The term of Newton B. Smalley as a member of the Board of Health having expired, the Mayor and Council appointed B. J. Shreves in Mr. Smalley's place. The term is for four years.

The Mayor suggested that the crosswalk at Somerset street and Craig place be taken up and a new four-foot walk be laid in its place, and the old walk, which is only two feet in width and so low that it is always under water when it rains, be put down across Washington avenue at Park place. This suggestion did not meet with the approval of the Council so it was dropped.

Councilman Woolston reported the expenditure of $43.87 upon the streets during the past month for carting snow and stone, cleaning crosswalks and sidewalks, trimming trees, etc.

Councilman Rogers offered a resolution that a new contract just drawn up to be signed by the Council and the Electric Light Company, be executed, and it was passed. The new contract is strong and binding, a great improvement over previous contracts with the same company. The borough agrees to pay $15.50 per lamp per year, and also the Electric Light Company to furnish free lights around the engine house and the jail.

The Council confirmed the act of the Mayor and Council in drawing up warrants for the special school fund in December. Councilman Valiant said that he found, after all bills were paid, that he had enough money in the treasury to pay a note of $1,500 not due until February 9th but he made a motion that a warrant be drawn to pay the note with interest to date, $1,536.50, and thus save some interest. The motion was carried.

The clerk's financial report ending December 31st, 1898, was as follows: Deficit, $447.92. The following monies were collected since last report: Catherine Obitz, Rockview avenue, $22 80; A. E. Mulholland, Rockview avenue, $30.02; T. E. Currin, Summit avenue, $15; Lizzie Swackhamer, Summit avenue, $19.20; W. R. Codington, Summit avenue, $8.50; J. B. Mills, Summit avenue, $7.50; C. B. Pope, Summit avenue, $7; W. B. Thorn, Summit avenue, $10; G. W. Bird, Summit avenue, $3.50; Plainfield Street Railroad Company, repairs to streets, etc., $25.83; Plainfield Street Railroad Company, license, $200; fines, Long, $25; total, $374.35; dirt sold, $25; total, $399.35.

Taxes collected during December, and interest, $27,948.94. Balance on hand December 1st, $7,968.41; receipts, $12,543.69; disbursements, $18,212 53.

Entertainment Postponed.

On account of the storm last evening the entertainment that was to have been given by Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., was postponed again. The entertainment will be given Monday evening, January 16th, and all tickets that have been sold will be good on that date.

Physicians are Busy.

The prevalence in Plainfield of what is known as the grip is keeping all of the local physicians on the jump. There does not appear to be any decrease in the malady.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

TREATY IN CONGRESS

Instructions to the Peace Commission Called For.

AN ANTI-EXPANSION TALK

Opposition to a Motion to Refer Senator Hoar's Resolution of Inquiry. A Hasty Executive Session. The Resolution Adopted.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.--The resolution introduced by Mr. Hoar, Republican of Massachusetts, calling upon the president, if not in his judgment incompatible with the public interest, to communicate to the Senate the instructions he had given the commissioners who negotiated the treaty of Paris, the correspondence which had passed between him and the department of state and the commissioners, and the reports made by the commissioners, either to him or to the department of state, was laid before the Senate early in the session yesterday.

Mr. Davis, Republican of Minnesota, one of the commissioners, and chairman of the commimttee on foreign relations, moved that the resolution be referred to that committee.

Mr. Hoar said; "Mr. President, I object to such a reference of the resolution. It seems to me that the Senate ought to have the information called for by the resolution, if in the judgment of the president it would be proper to communicate it. I hope the motion will be defeated.'"

"I hope the motion will prevail," replied Mr. Davis.

Mr. Hoar then reiterated his expression of belief that the information asked for by the resolution was perfectly proper to give to the Senate, explaining that the resolution was the ordinary form of such requests.

Mr. White, Democrat of California--The resolution is not in any way mandatory?

Mr. Hoar--Not at all. The communication of the information is entirely within the discretion of the president.

Mr. Allen, Populist of Nebraska--Is there any reason why the resolution should be referred to the committee on foreign relations?

"I do not know of any," replied Mr. Hoar.

Mr. Allen, addressing Mr. Davis--Why should the resolution be referred to the committee on foreign relations?

--"Because," replied Mr. Davis, "it relates to matters which are still pending before that committee. It would be unprecedented, at least in my experience, not to refer the resolution in accordance with my motion."

Before the debate could proceed further, Mr. Davis said: "I desire, Mr. President, to enter a privileged motion. I move that the doors of the Senate be closed."

The motion was seconded by Mr. Gallinger, Republican of New Hampshire, and the Senate then went into secret session.

In the secret session the proceedings continued on the same lines as in the open session, Mr. Hoar making a brief speech on the subject. He was not interrupted, and when he had finished the Senate agreed to the resolution without a division.

During the discussion Mr. Hoar insisted that other members of the Senate had as much right to full information as the members of the committee on foreign relations, and urged that it was derogatory to their dignity as Senators not to supply all the light that could be given.

None of the members of the committee on foreign relations made any objection in the executive session, and no information was given as to the character of the instructions.

At 12.35 p. m. the Senate reconvened in open session.

Mr. Allison, Republican of Iowa, reported from the appropriations committee the District of Columbia appropriation bill, and secured an order for its consideration to-day.

Mr. Caffery, Democrat of Louisiana, then addressed the Senate on the joint resolution offered by Mr. Vest, Democrat of Missouri, declaring that under the constitution of the United States no power is given to acquire territory to be held and governed permanently as colonies.

Mr. Caffery's speech was a constitutional argument in support of the declaration of the resolution. He declared that the resolution went to the very root of the question of the power of the United States to establish permanently governments in territories far distant from our own lands.

He proposed, he said, to institute an inquiry into the basic principles of the powers of the government.

The Senate committee on foreign relations did not have a quorum and the treaty was only informally discussed at the meeting.

Extra Pay for Volunteers.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.--At the opening of the session of the House of Representatives yesterday Mr. Marsh, Republican of Illinois, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a bill to grant to officers and men of the volunteer army upon their muster out two months extra pay, if they have served beyond the limits of the United States, this extra pay to be in lieu of furloughs or leave of absence.

It has been the practice to grant these furloughs or leaves of absence, so that in reality the bill only sought to do directly what has heretofore been done indirectly.

After this explanation Mr. Bailey, Democrat of Texas, announced that he had no objection to the measure.

The bill was passed.

A Bank Vault Blown Open.

Phenix, R. I., Jan. 7.--The outside doors of the vault of the Phenix National bank were blown out by dynamite about one o'clock yesterday morning, but the three men who attempted to rob the bank were frightened away before they could gain access to the interior apartments, where the money, securities and other valuables were kept.

The burglars escaped. There is little clue to their identity. The damage to the bank will not exceed one hundred dollars.

NEW STANDARD OIL SUIT.

Ohio Attorney-General Takes a Fresh Start to Avoid Delay.

Cleveland, Jan. 7.--Attorney General Monett has begun quo warranto proceedings in the Ohio supreme court to oust the Standard Oil Company from doing business in this state.

The court is asked to adjudge that the defendant has forfeited its corporate rights, privileges, powers and franchises, and that it be ousted therefrom; that it be dissolved and that the court appoint trustees of the stockholders and creditors to settle up the aairs of the defendant company and divide the money and property among the stockholders after the debts and expenses have been paid.

These grounds are given in Monett's petition: He alleges that the court's decree which forbade the Standard Oil Company of Ohio from having dealings with the Standard Oil Trust has been evaded; that it continues to recognize capital stock transfers to the trustees of the trust in violation of the court's order; that holders of trust certificates are now receiving quarterly dividends from the defendant company; that the defendant company has allowed trust certificate holders to exercise the powers of the defendant; that the defendant is not a corporation now acting and duly organized under the Ohio laws; that the stock of the defendant company is not in the amount or form authorized by its Ohio charter; that the capital stock of the defendant company has been unlawfully reduced from 35,000 shares to 21,357 shares; that the alleged plan of liquidation of the defendant is calculated to preserve the trust; that the defendant has violated the law by changing its place of business from Cleveland to New York without any amendment to its articles of incorporation; that it has violated the law by not issuing an annual statement showing its true financial condition and list of stockholders; that in defiance of the Valentine anti-trust act the defendant company has united its stock with nineteen other companies for the purpose of carrrying out restrictions in the petroleum trade.

Attorney General Monett's idea in filing the new suit against the Standard Oil Company of Ohio at this time is to cut off delay. He has drawn issue in this case so as to leave no ground for the defendant carrying the case up to the United States courts.

It is based on the anti-trust act, which has been enacted since the former proceedings were begun.

DEFENSE IN QUAY CASE.

Application for a Writ of Certiorari Comes Up To-day.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 7.—United States Senator Quay and his two sons Richard R. Quay and Major A. G. C. Quay, are in this city to remain until after the petition for a writ of certiorari on behalf of Senator Quay and his co-defendants on the conspiracy charges is disposed of by the supreme court to-day.

The defence will place before the court affidavits in support of the allegations embodied in their petition to the supreme court.

It is believed that the affidavits will include statements relating to Judge Gordon's connection with the case, to the alleged conspiracy of Quay's political enemies to prevent his re-election, and to the state of the public mind.

Numerous newspaper clippings will be produced both by the prosecution and defence to support their contentions.

The defence allege that false, libelous and defamatory articles were published at the instigation of the alleged conspirators, prejudicing the public mind to such an extent as to prevent a fair trial.

The prosecution, it is said, will endeavor to show that public comment was dispassionate, except on the part of the local Quay organ.

The court may fix a later time to hear arguments or it may act to-day. If the petition for a writ is dismissed there can be an early trial. If not, and the record is taken up for review, the court can order it tried in another county or by one of its own members.

The Catania Safe.

London, Jan. 7.--The Tweedie Trading Company's steamer Catania, Captain Furlong, from Glasgow on December 17 for New York, which was spoken on December 29 in distress in latitude 48 N. and longitude 38 W., by the Atlantic Transport Company's steamer Mesaba, which arrived here on January 4, has reached St. Michael's, Azores, with her smokestack gone, boats carried away and decks swept by the waves.

The Mesaba, after standing by the Catania for twenty-two hours, could not find her on the morning of December 30, and proceeded on her way to London.

American-Chinese Exposition.

Washington, Jan. 7.--Consul General Goodnow of Shanghai writes to a correspondent in New York strongly recommending an American-Chinese exposition in Shanghai. He says that practically all foreign trade for the middle and north of China goes through Shanghai, and an exposition there will reach the trade of the Yangtse valley and the north.

FILIPINOS TALK FIGHT

Military Chiefs Urge Aguinaldo to Resist Americans.

PROCLAMATION IS DISLIKED

Gen. Rios Cables to Madrid of Strained Relations of Insurgents and Americans. Ten Priests Flee in Disguise. News Cable for Manila.

Manila, Jan. 7.--The governors of various Philippine provinces have visited Aguinaldo offering him their unconditional allegiance to the Filipino republic and declaring that the people are disposed to give up their lives and property in a struggle against the forcing of any domination over the islands.

Several of the Filipino military chiefs have urged Aguinaldo to fight the Americans.

The Spanish newspaper Oceania, in an article commenting upon the proclamation issued by General Otis, says: "We venture to predict that the effect of the proclamation will not be very favorable."

The Independencia, the leading organ of the insurgents, says in an article discussing the proclamation:

"If America persists in disavowing our acquired rights and flings legions of soldiers against our well defended lines, she will have a dark road to travel. We have the example of the heroic city of Iloilo, which prefers to risk the sorrows of bombardment to becoming a dependent territory. The Filipinos will accept resignedly any sacrifice when they see their country's independence endangered. Do not plunge us into a cruel and brutal war. Remember the words of the greatest historian of the century: 'England, with 16,000,000 could not withstand 2,500,000 of North Americans.'"

Agoncillo is Silent.

Washington D. C., Jan. 7.--The members of the Philippine junta, Agoncillo, and his secretary, Lopez, have had no word from Manila as to the alleged action of Aguinaldo going to Iloilo to take charge of the insurgent forces.

Both Agoncillo and Lopez read the dispatches in the papers but when spoken to replied that they had no information on the subject.

Mr. Lopez, who speaks English, said the last word they had from Aguinaldo came from his headquarters on the island of Luzon. He did not care to express an opinion as to the truth of the report on the situation in the Philippines.

"We cannot make a statement," he said, "until we hear from the junta in London, Paris and Hong Kong. We have no confirmation of the story recently printed and knew nothing of it except that we see in the papers. Therefore we cannot speak about it."

Gen. Rios Powerless.

Madrid, Jan. 7.--General Rios, the Spanish commander, telegraphs from Manila that the strained relations between the Americans and insurgents prevent steps being taken in favor of the release of the Spanish prisoners in the Philippine islands.

He adds that he will act in that direction as soon as it is possible.

To Build Manila Cable.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.--Major General Merriam has chartered the steamer Morgan City as a government transport.

She will sail for the Philippines between January 15 and 20. She will carry mostly freight and government supplies. In the freight will be 325 miles of telegraph wire and sufficient equipment for forty separate telegraph offices and four and one-half miles of submarine cable.

Fled from Aguinaldo.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.--Among the passengers on the steamship Doric were ten Spanish priests of the St. Augustin order, refugees from the wrath of Aguinaldo. They were in hiding in Manila several months and fled in disguise. They are on their way to Central America.

Yukon Steamers in Danger.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 7.--Advices from Dawson City say that a number of Yukon river steamers will be lost when the ice breaks up in the spring. Some were caught in very unprotected places and can scarcely escape being wrecked. The Robert Kerr of the Moran fleet is stuck fast on a bar fifty miles below Circle City. The fine steamer Arnold of the Alaskan Transportation Company's fleet was caught in the ice while fast on a bar about thirty miles below Forty Mile Creek.

A boat of the Empire line, the Seattle, is reported caught twelve miles below Circle City. She is on a bar and ice is jammed up all around her. The Hacoma and John C. Barr are also fast and in a dangerous position.

Thirty citizens of Dawson have been indicted for perjury in connection with a recent stampede to Kentucky Creek, a short distance below Dawson.

Swearing to false statements regarding claims is the charge against them.

Teall Divorce Suit.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 7.--The suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Oliver Sumner Teall, in so far as it relates to the Rhode Island courts, is dead. It was assigned for a hearing yesterday when Teall was to appear and make answer to the allegations set forth in Thomas Jackson's deposition. No counsel appeared on either side and the petition was allowed to slumber undisturbed.

It will not be called up again as Mrs. Teall has transferred her suit to the New York courts.

Susquehanna River Rising.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 7.--The Susquehanna river here is rising rapidly. It is now twentytwo feet above low water mark and has overflowed parts between this city and west side towns stopping all trolley traffic and other communication.

It is still rising and heavy running ice promises to do considerable damage.

KID M'COY'S VIEWS.

His Idea of What Ruined Corbett as a Great Fighter.

Kid McCoy, the aspirant for heavyweight fighting honors, is far above the average prize ring devotee in intelligence. If he could fight as well as he can talk he would be the champion easily, and this is not reflecting the slightest upon his pugilistic prowess. In a conversation the other day, he said:

"Tom Ryan was my ideal of a boxer, as he combined the elements of the boxer and the fighter. It was my ambition to master the game of boxing to such a fine point that I would surpass him. I believe that I have succeeded. I worked with Ryan in preparing him for one of his fights. I sparred him twice a day, and he gave me many valuable pointers, though I picked up many by secretly studing his methods. He never knew that I had an ambition to beat him, and he would never give me credit for improving. That's where he made a mistake, and many boxers have made the same error. If I defeat a man and make another match with him, then I always allow that he has improved some since last I met him. He may really be on the down grade, but by allowing for improvement in his work I play on the safe side, which is better than holding a man cheap. I will admit that Tom Ryan gave me my most valuable hints on boxing, but I have studied over Ryan's methods and tried to improve on them. I watched old Jack Dempsey closely when he used to spar, and I also kept close tab on Jim Corbett. I always fancied Corbett's hand work, but was never impressed with his footwork. He does too much ineffectual footwork Ryan is a more deceptive man in this respect than Corbett. Ryan, though many of his victims never realized it, is twice as clever on his feet as Corbett. Some of his prettiest feints are with his feet. From Ryan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Dempsey I have tried to build up a style of my own. As my style is taken from a combination of other men's ideas, it cannot be called original. But I intend to play my combination. Within the last year or so I haven't attended many boxing contests, because when a boxer sits at a ringside and keeps a careful eye on the performers in the ring he might see a certain effective blow delivered that he might try himself. About every boxer has his peculiarities of style, and if I were to make an attempt to copy the tricks of every boxer I see I would run the risk of spoiling my own system. That's why I don't care about witnessing many fights. When I am boxing with my sparring partner an idea may occur to me that will set me to thinking the next time we put on the gloves. I will try this idea in practice until I have it down at my fingers' tips if it is any good. If it isn't, then I drop it. Too much exhibition boxing with sparring partners will ruin any fighter. It killed Jim Corbett, when combined with wretched training. But as far as hitting powers are concerned, Corbett was never accused of possessing enough damaging power to jar the Brooklyn Bridge foundation or spoil the face of a Sharkey. But constant sparring exhibitions, tapping with the open glove and waltzing around like a song and dance soubrette killed what little capability he possessed as a slugger. In my engagements I make matches that demand clean hitting for everything there's in me and I place it on the enemy as hard as I can. There is no give-and-take love-tapping and straw tickling. I fling every ounce of steam that's in me. Of course, when in training with my sparring partner, Doc Payne, I am on my good behavior; that is, I let up on him--hold myself in check. These little bouts in training just keep my hand in. Corbett toured the country for years with a sparring partner. He warded off challenges and refused to box unless he had a camera or a calcium light turned on him and his partner was in front of him to get back in milk and water style. This cakewalk business will never do, as Corbett has found out. In six years he made four fights and lost two. If he hadn't been fortunate in having John Kelly for referee at Jacksonville he would have lost there, as he technically lost to Mitchell on a foul. That's what I call the worst record ever established by a heavyweight American champion.

Catching Smelts.

Down in Maine in catching smelts in winter the fishermen build shanties on the ice over good fishing grounds and cut a hole through the ice and make a trap door in the floor of the shanty to fish through. The shanty is built upon timbers laid on the ice and the first thing the fishermen do when they get the building up is to pour water over these timbers, so as to freeze them down to the ice; otherwise when a wind sprang up it might blow the shanty along on the ice on these timbers, which would thus practically become a sort of sled on runners.

They have a stove in the shanty for greater comfort, and when they are not fishing they close the trap door and thus have an unbroken floor. Each man uses two lines at fishing, and as fast as he hauls up the fish he puts them in a box, the boxes being made of various sizes, each containing a specified number of pounds of fish. When he has a box packed full he sets it out on the ice and pours water in it. The fish are frozen solid in the boxes, and in this condition are shipped to market.

DUN'S WEEKLY REPORT.

The Country is on the Up Grade and Business for the New Year Brisk.

New York, Jan. 7.--The failures for the year 1898 were 12,266, banking and other financial concerns included, with liabilities of $149,057,993 against $148,684,251 estimated last week, 18.3 per cent. less than last year and 46.1 per cent. less than in 1896. Commercial failures were 12,186, with liabilities of $130,662,899, 15.3 per cent. less than last year and 43.2 per cent. less than in 1896.

The year begins with the kind of business demand that counts. For months there has been a rising demand for materials, but now the crowding demand for finished products begins to advance prices, in the iron and steel industry about one per cent., without quotable changes in pig except at the East. Beams have advanced $2 per ton, angles one dollar, bars one dollar, and plates are strong, with an Australian order for thirty-two thousand tons refused at Chicago because the works are already overcrowded. The demand has never been greater at the beginning of the year than it is now.

The movement of cotton thus far indicates a crop over three hundred thousand bales larger than that of last year in spite of all natural disposition and concerted efforts to hold it back. As producers are not this year in unusual need, a movement so heavy hinders any advance in price, although takings of spinners have been as large in 1898 as in any other year and exports larger than before.

The wheat movement has to sustain it the largest foreign demand ever known for wheat and corn together, and Atlantic exports of 5,214,420 bushels, flour included, against 2,840,318 last year, with Pacific exports of 614,834 against 872,446 last year, would give some reason to anticipate higher prices were not the western receipts 4,101,532 bushels against 2,876,072 for the same week last year.

The wonder is that the foreign demand for corn continues so heavy, 3,572,412 bushels having been exported in the week against 2,954,890 in the same week last year.

Nobody can speak without some reserve of a state of business which results in exchanges of over three hundred and fifteen million dollars at New York in a single day, while last year's exchanges passed all records, with $68,882,000,000 paid through all clearing houses, the new year beginning with an increase of 17.9 per cent. over 1892.

The country is on the up grade, and the men who expect it to take the downward road have yet some time to wait. There are no indications of the reaction which always follows a large and rapid business recovery, and existing conditions in the industries and in foreign trade by no means forbid the hope that the increase may continue, as it did after the revival in 1879 for several years.

Exports compared with imports continue to indicate an enormous balance in cash due this country, and gold imports begin again.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

A War Between the Two Contries May Result from Present Situation.

Christiania, Jan. 7.--Norway and Sweden continue in a state of dissension that makes a war between the two countries not unlikely. The matter was aggravated the first of the year, when Norway flew her flag minus the emblem which signifies her union with Sweden. The Norwegians' thirst for independence, and it is stated the radicals have already taken steps to secure this by secretly alienating the Norwegians in the joint army from Sweden. Both sides continue strengthening their defences.

Norway's chief grievance is a clause in the constitution which makes a minister who is alone responsible to the Swedish rikstag the real director of the foreign aairs or both countries. The Swedish grievance is that Norway, taking advantage of antiquated laws, contributes but a few more men to the Scandinavian army than she did in 1814, about 25,000, while Sweden gives 100,000.

Enamel-Ware Combination.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 7.--A preliminary step in the consolidation of enamel and tinware plants of the country has been taken.

A number of capitalists, headed by Ferdinand Kiecheffer of this city, have purchased the plant of Kiecheffer Brothers in this city for one million dollars.

Ferdinand Kiecheffer, who will be manager of the local plant, says that negotiations are pending for a consolidation of enamel ware manufacturers.

The capital stock of the new organization will be twenty million dollars.

Big Exploration Company

New York, Jan. 7.--The Exploration Company of the Amazon (Campanha Explorodora do Amazonas) has been organized under the laws of the state of Virginia, with an authorized capital of ten million dollars, with the power to purchase rubber lands and concessions in foreign countries.

It is understood that a number of the leading rubber manufacturers of the United States are interested in this corporation.

Mr. Richard F. Sears has arrived from the Amazon with options on several important producing districts.

UTAH'S BROKEN PLEDGE

Gentiles Alarmed at the Spread of Polygamy.

ROBERTS CASE REVEALS IT

Many of the Highest Families Among the Saints Are Shunned by Self Respecting Neighbors. Polygamy Prevalent and as Rampant as Ever.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 7.--A large part of the population of this city is to-day in a state of slumbering wrath against Mormonism that needs but a spark to make it burst into a violent flame.

For the fact has had to be openly acknowledged that the curse of polygamy, instead of being stamped out, is as rampant as ever, and that Utah, to her shame, is to-day more in the clutches of Mormon vice than ever before.

This state of affairs has been caused by an article published yesterday in the Kinsman, the organ of the Gentile clergy of Utah, in which the following statement occurs:

"Apostle John W. Taylor, at a time since the manifesto (the Mormon decree prohibiting polygamy), began to visit at a town which can be named, and in a house which can be pointed out. It was noticed that all of the family except a certain young lady had business away from home when Baltimore, has put in here with her

"In time this young lady became a mother, and, dropping the title 'miss,' bloomed forth as 'Mrs.' Taylor. The child was 'blessed' according to the Mormon custom, under his name of Taylor, and the apostle is not the only man who has done the same thing since the manifesto."

In other words, the Mormon church has absolutely broken its vows, which it made in order to secure Utah's admission to statehood, and is defying the laws of the state.

A prominent member of the city government says:

"No, the article published in the Kinsman is not news to me or to many men in Salt Lake City. We have known that polygamy has been practiced among the Mormons ever since the decree of their own church prohibiting it. It was known at the time that they would break their faith with the state and country, but as they have cloaked their deeds so carefully there was nothing for us to do.

"The power exerted by the elders of the Mormon church over its members is absolute, and when one of the dignitaries fell in love with the daughter of a Mormon and expressed his intention of making her his second, third or sixth wife, her father was absolutely compelled to accede to his demand; no matter how much his heart rebelled.

"The hypocrites! A Mormon having entered into such relations with a young woman cannot, under the new regulations of his church, openly acknowledge her as one of his wives, butshe is so considered by those people, though she retains her maiden name.

"When I have discovered a case of this sort, and I know several, I have simply forbidden my wife and daughters to visit them without, unless absolutely necessary, disclosing my real reasons to the latter."

This gentleman is but one of thousands of citizens who are enraged to the verge of frenzy against the practices of the Mormons, and in a less orderly community lynch law would be the inevitable outcome of the Kinsman's disclosures and Congressman-elect Roberts's efforts to gain his seat at Washington.

Several mass meetings will be held to endeavor to find some solution of the problem and to protest formally against further polygamous practices.

A delegation of Gentiles will be organized and sent to Washington, armed with startling information for the government.

Apostle John W. Taylor is one of the most prominent members of the Mormon church, and it is a source of satisfaction to the Gentile element to have this particular case aired.

A Big Steel Wire Trust.

New York, Jan. 7.--A dispatch from Pittsburg announces that the American Steel and Wire Company will take out its incorporation papers this week in New Jersey, with ninety million dollars capital.

This means that the new company, for the organization and management of which Mr. G. W. Gates gave up the presidency of the Illinois Steel Company, has succeeded in its efforts to secure the control of practically all the various steel plants in the country.

Gen. Thomas Guyer Dead

During the civil war he was major general of the state militia, and aided Governor Buckingham in raising Connecticut's quota.

He served in the state legislature, was assessor of the town of Norwalk and city of South Norwalk and held other offices.

Confederate Pensions.

Washington, Jan. 7.--The ex-Confederates of Washington do not want any pensions from Uncle Sam. At a meeting of the Confederate Veterans' Association just held they adopted resolutions condemning the effort made in some quarters to place the soldiers who wore the grey upon the pension rolls.

Cape Legislator Accused.

Cape Town, Jan. 7.--J. D. Logan, a prominent Progressive member of the Cape Parliament, has been arrested upon a charge of criminal assault. The hearing of the case has been adjourned for a week. Logan's arrest has created a sensation throughout the colony.

Hotel Burned Down.

Washington, Pa., Jan. 7.--The Hotel Main and the Levins building adjoining, were destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $100,000; insurance, $85,000.

The fire started in the rear of the Hotel Main and many of the occupants had a narrow escape.

NEW VICEROY IN OFFICE.

Formal Installation of Lord Curzon at Calcutta.

A large assemblage at the government house witnessed the ceremony.

At 9.30 a. m., the new viceroy, preceded by his aide-de-camp, arrived at the government house and went to the throne room, where he met the Earl of Elgin, the retiring viceroy, the latter's family, the aides-de-camp, members of the council, the lieutenant governor and others.

General Sir William Lockhart, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in India, then formed Lord Curzon's procession and the whole party proceeded to the council room, where the royal warrant appointing Lord Curzon of Kedleston viceroy of India was read.

A royal salute was fired and the national anthem was played. Directly afterwards the Earl of Elgin and his party left the government house.

Lord Curzon accompanied the earl to the river side, and then returned to the government house, escorted by a full body guard of the Calcutta Light Horse.

The route was lined with troops another royal salute was fired.

The squadron of vessels in the Hooghly displayed all their bunting.

COST OF PEACE COMMISSION.

Their Total Expenses to Paris and Return Did Not Exceed $100,000.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.--Much has been published about the expenses of the peace commission in Paris, and the amounts paid to the commissioners.

The truth is that the total cost will not exceed one hundred thousand dollars.

It is said in official circles that there never was a more economical commission in the history of this country.

When the war ended the president still had some of the emergency appropriation, and $125,000 was set aside for the expenses of the commission, who were allowed their actual expenses. It is said they were given a check for $15,000 each to cover incidental expenses and necessities.

The attaches of the commission were allowed five dollars and ten dollars a day for expenses, according to their rank, and this was all.

As the commission did little entertaining, giving only one dinner, which cost seven hundred dollars, the outside expenses were small.

When the commission arrived in America all bills were receipted, accounts cleared up and the president had a comfortable little balance of the $125,000 to turn back into the treasury.

The Gordon Memorial.

Cairo, Jan. 7.--The British diplomatic agent in Egypt, Viscount Cromer, has laid the foundation stone at Khartoum of the Gordon Memorial College, in the name of Queen Victoria, and in the presence of the Sirdar, General Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, the British officers and the native sheiks.

The British agent outlined the aims of the college, announced that it would be wholly undenominational, and that the instruction, so far as possible, would be conducted in the Arabic language.

He added that the object was not to create a race of anglicized Soudanese but to train their minds.

The speech, which was translated into Arabic, was well received by the native audience.

The ceremony concluded with "God Save the Queen."

Many Volunteers Injured.

olumbus, O., Jan. 7.--Two hundred members of the Fourth Ohio volunteers assembled here for mustering out, were hurled from their improvised beds at the Auditorium at an early hour yesterday morning and twenty-three were injured, quite a number being seriously hurt, although no fatalities are expected.

In order to accommodate the men temporary double-decked bunks had muter and on the books of the com- been constructed out of tent floors and scantling, and under the weight of the sleeping soldiers the structure toppled over. All the injured were Second battalion men.

Lack of bracing of the bunks is the reason given for the accident.

Gen. Gomez Heard From.

Havana, Jan. 7.--Major Gen. Brooke, governor general of Cuba, has received the following telegram from Remedios dated January 2:

"General Carrillo directs me to inform you that General-in-Chief Gomez has just arrived at his camp at Guanguayabo, and does not know when he will leave for the capital.

RAFAEL CARRANZA."

The funeral services over Colonel W. H. Mabry of the First Texas took place yesterday.

The United States transport Mobile, from Savannah has arrived with the Fourth and Ninth Illinois regiments.

The customs receipts yesterday were $21,000.

Nine Men Blown Up.

London, Jan. 7.--A big boiler, while being tested in Hewitt's shipbuilding yard at Barking, about seven miles from here, burst yesterday, and the superintendent and engineer and eight men were killed.

About forty persons were injured, some fatally. The bodies of the dead were frightfully mutilated.

The entire shipbuilding works were wrecked. Windows in houses were shattered half a mile away.

Pana Mining Troubles.

Pana, Ill., Jan. 7.--Eighteen Italians arrived by rail from Chicago yesterday. Ten of the leading coal operators have engaged a labor agency to hire Italians for the Pana mines.

The operators are becoming dissatisfied with the Alabama negroes. The Italians refuse to work with the negroes.

The Miners' Union and citizens are making up a purse and will return them to Chicago.

More of Bayonne's Beauty.

Editor Luby, of the Jersey City News, may not have a poetic name, but he certainly is a trenchant and observing critic of sonnets such as his brother journalist, Col. Page, of the Bayonne Herald, writes. A few days ago we copied one of the Colonel's rhymes, in which he lauded the beauties of Bayonne's scenery, and supplemented it with the comment that considering the material the Colonel had to work on—the panorama of goats, oil tanks and saloons that Bayonne presents to us every time we whirl through that place—he must be a thirty-third degree laureate. Editor Luby seems to think we have done the Colonel an injustice in referring to the fact that the goats we observe in Bayonne feed on tin cans. He says in retaliation of our comment:

The goats of Bayonne do not browse upon tin cans. They do not have to. The supply of posters, which adorn the posts and fences in the neighborhood of Salter's Grove and Pleasure Palace, is both abundant and juicy, and he would be a goat of depraved taste indeed who preferred the oily salmon receptacle or the bucolic tomato tin to the twinkling extremities of the Parisian artistes who make life joyous for the unregenerate as they dance alongside of dull reality on the dizzy theatre of Mr. O'Mealia's bill boards.

We fear the Plainfield critic is jealous, not only of the Bayonne poet's muse but also of the pleasures of Bayonne existence. Cradled between the twin bays, it slumbers from year's end to year's end with a "rocked-in-the-cradle-of-the-deep" sort of intensity which not even Philadelphia can surpass. In winter it hibernates to the song of the west wind as it sweeps from the Newark meadows to the sea. In summer it dozes under the magic influence of the mosquito's song.

We have too high a regard for the truth to attempt to defend our position in the face of such a statement, and especially at the hands of friend Luby. We always considered the Bayonne goat as slightly inclined to be frisky and insedate, but in the ignorance of the diet the Billies and the Nannies feed on we attributed such unruffled conduct to the inspirating breezes that blow from the Kill von Kull. Now, of course, we shall always look at the funny papers picturing goats browsing on tin cans as base caricatures upon the elite tastes of the noble animal. But beyond defending Bayonne's beauties and her mammiferous quadrupeds, The News man takes this parting shot at Plainfield:

It is not like Plainfield, where every time it rains the luckless residents have to turn out in their nighties four or five times a year, man, woman and child, to bale out the Raritan with teacups and wash-boilers, in order to keep it from washing the town off the face of the map.

Of this last, we have to say of Luby: It is to laugh! Plainfield is as far from the Raritan or any other raging stream as Luby is from reforming Jersey City.

Mayor Fisk, of Plainfield, retired from office Monday last, and The Press of that city (Democratic) speaks of him and of his official acts in the most commendatory terms. It says he "has been one of the most influential and conspicuous public officials Plainfield has ever possessed. Independent in financial means, he has given a wealth of personal attention and work to city affairs that has aided materially in bringing Plainfield up in the front rank of New Jersey cities." Such words from a political opponent attest the high character of Mayor Fisk's administration, and confirm the impressions of all who know and appreciate him as a citizen and as an executive—Elizabeth Journal:

Editor McBride has been advised before this that The Daily Press is not a representative of party politics, but it persists in quoting it as a partisan journal. The assumption that The Press is an opponent of Former Mayor Fisk is wrong. We have always admired Mr. Fisk, though we have criticised his public policy when we believed it so deserved, but The Journal is slightly off in its presumption that the praise of Mayor Fisk obtains more worth because it comes from "a political opponent."

REAR ADMIRAL F. M. BUNCE.

Rear Admiral Francis M. Bunce, who retired from the navy on Christmas day, began his service as a cadet midshipman on May 28, 1832. He was thus 46 years in the service. His war record is as good as that of any man now in the navy, and he on several occasions received special commendation for meritorious service.

Senator Reed's selection of Charles Bateman, editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, as his private secretary, is eminently wise in two respects. In the first place Mr. Bateman is thoroughly in touch with legislative ways and matters, as he has been a legislative correspondent and Senate official for several years, and is fully qualified in every way to serve the Senator ably and faithfully. In the second place by selecting Mr. Bateman Mr. Reed gives evidence that he proposes to do his part in healing whatever breach there is in Somerset county G. O. P. ranks, as between the leadership of himself and Chancery Clerk Thompson. Editor Bateman is Thompson's right-hand man in Somerville, and his choice for such a confidential position as private secretary to Senator Reed will undoubtedly bring about more cordial relations between the two political leaders.

A gentleman bearing the euphonious name of Mr. Rink, who resides in New Brunswick, claims to have perfected perpetual motion, and he promises startling things in the world of power. He seems to think it only a question of a short time before steam, electricity and other methods of making things run will be superceded by his contrivance. As an idea to Mr. Rink, we suggest that he apply his wonderful invention to running the politics of Middlesex county. Politics is the nearest thing to perpetual that we know of in Middlesex, and we are confident that if he can provide some relief for those engaged in the business he will gain not only the high appreciation of his neighbors but as well the deserved renown of the whole world.

The jack tars motto throughout the late unpleasantness with Spain, "Remember the Maine," still seems to be omnipresent as a lively subject rather than a historical fact. The latest incident refreshing the memory of that tragic occurence is the effort of a Havana editor to prove that the persons culpable for blowing up the Maine were an attorney, Zacarias Bresnes, and three assistants. So far he has alleged only that Bresnes is guilty of other felonies and treacheries, which make it "morally certain" that he was the miscreant.

In view of the very important recommendations made by Mayor Rockfellow in his first message to the Council with reference to the municipal ownership of the water supply system for the city, it will be interesting to note that the Irvington Town Council has concluded the terms for the purchase of the plant and system of the Irvington Water Company The town will pay $ 0,000 for the system, and will operate it at the lowest rate consistent with good service to the patrons.

A New Jersey Democrat in Washington says that a movement is on foot to prevent Senator Smith from getting the complimentary nomination of the Democrats for the Senatorial honor at the approaching election to be held by the Legislature. Even if such a movement should succeed it would be no great loss to Senator Smith, but it is not likely that the gossiping Democrat in Washington will hear of any such thing transpiring in the Democratic party at this time.

In physical appearance our own Senator Reed, who is to preside over the State Senate, is the opposite of his namesake in the presiding chair of the house of Representatives at Washington. The New Jersey Reed is tall and slim while the Maine Reed is of medium height and extremely corpulent. But when occasion requires both can be humorous, and therein is represented one of the essential characteristics for a successful presiding officer.

Leading newspapers throughout the State acknowledge that Senator Reed's selection as President of the Senate is a fitting one, and that he is undoutedly the best man for the position that could be picked out of the incoming Senate.

Polygamy prevails in the Phillippine islands to a large extent. Let Mr. Roberts emigrate to the islands, and perhaps he will stand better chances of getting into public office than he is encountering here at present.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Somerset county may be but a small patch in the New Jersey quilt, but when it comes to sizing up ability, her brilliancy stands right out in bold relief. In 1891 and 1892 James J. Bergen was Speaker of the House, in 1896 Lewis A. Thompson was President of the Senate and last night Charles A. Reed was chosen to the same exalted position, which is next to that of Governor. Thus in nine years the honor has come to Somerset four times to have a representative preside over one or the other of our legislative branches. This is a record which no other county can approach, and is one to be proud of.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

* * * * *

Bayonne's peerless poet, the Hon. H. C. Page, is not content to rest silently while the Plainfield Press makes fun of his melodious verses and ridicules Bayonne as a pasturage for goats and geese. In The Bayonne Herald, owned and published by his very own self, Colonel Page deigns to notice the slander, and he does it in these convincing words:

"Not so, my forceful lord, not so. The 'West Side' and 'Murray Hill' of Bayonne bloom with the roses—in their season—and there can be no place more beautiful."

That necessarily closes the controversy.—Tribune.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, January 7.—Mrs. David Randolph, of Greenbrook, died yesterday morning at 2 o'clock. She was about seventy years of age and leaves two children, a son, Daniel Randolph, of New Durham, and a daughter, Mrs. Edward Titus, of Plainfield. Daniel is a farmer, and Mr. Titus formerly ran a bakery on Somerset street, in Plainfield. One other daughter, Mrs. Edward Luekhurst, died sometime ago. Mrs. Randolph had a stroke of paralysis and that was the cause of her death. She was a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church, at Plainfield. The funeral will probably be held tomorrow.

Little Charles Covey, who has been ill, died from diphtheria at noon yesterday at the home of Justice Warden who has been keeping him during his illness. Charlie's father was notified when his son became ill Sunday, but paid no attention to the communication. Yesterday, near noon, Dr. Brakeley sent another letter to Covey telling him that if he wished to see Charlie alive to come at once. But before the father could have received this second letter the boy was dead. He was buried at 5 o'clock beside his mother in Hillside cemetery, Plainfield.

Captain Thompson, of Prospect avenue, who has not been expected to live for several weeks seems to be better, and hopes are now entertained of his ultimrte recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fenner, who have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. Harry Swackhamer, have returned to their home in Pluckamin.

Rev. Frank Fletcher has given up his house on Washington avenue, and will move soon into the Titsworth house on Prospect avenue.

Engineer Watson, who was laid up with the grip and few days early in the week has resumed work again.

Miss Estelle Trust has returned from New York where she has been visiting friends.

Miss Janie Churchill has been visiting for a few days in Westfield.

Mrs. James Touzeau is ill with threatened pneumonia.

Patrick McMahon is very low with dropsy.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Jan. 7.—George Pizie, who was cut in a fracas with Theodore Rountree two weeks ago, is out again, and is attending to his business the same as usual.

A sale, for the benefit of the building fund of Holy Innocents' church will be held the latter part of this month.

Mrs. D. C. Tabb, who has been confined to the house with illness, is better.

Miss Grace Martin, of Martinville, has been visiting Miss Mary Jenner.

Mrs. Hastings, of Paterson, is a guest of Mrs. William Dunham.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Jan. 7—Twilight Council at their meeting Friday evening installed the following officers for the ensuing six months: Councilor, Richard Hart; vice-councilor, Charles Fields; conductor, Charles Meyers; warden, Wm. Spicer; inside sentinel, George Clark; outside sentinel, David Clark; trustee, Charles Frentz. The council is making arrangements to attend the tenth anniversary of Daniel Webster Council of Newark on the 18th.

On account of the bad weather last evening no prayer meeting was held in the Baptist church. Sunday morning and evening the pulpit will be occupied by a supply. It will probably be several weeks before the church begins to give candidates a trial for the pastorate.

Rev. J. S. Braker started for his new field of labor at Waltham Friday. Mrs. Braker is making her home with the Misses Hayes, of Fanwood, for a short time.

Rev. Mr. Woodruff will resume his series of sermons Sunday evening upon subjects furnished by members of his congregation.

Mr. Stagg, of Brooklyn, was in town Friday inspecting his new house which will soon be ready for occupancy.

The Saturday Night Club of the borough hold their weekly hop in the fire house this evening.

Miss Emma Clark is spending a few days with her sister at Hazlet, N. J.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 7.—The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church has elected the following officers: President, Mrs. J. E. Burtis; vice-presidents, Mrs. Sherman Cooper and Mrs. Joseph Brewer; secretary, Mrs. M. J. Gildersleeve; treasurer of foreign missions, Mrs. Joseph Clark; treasurer of home missions, Mrs. Lawrence Clark; superintendent of literary department, Miss Harriett Williams.

District Deputy Grand Workman Rossenagal, of Newark, will be here Tuesday evening to install the newly-elected officers of Upchurch Lodge, A. O. U. W.

The Christian Endeavor Societies and the Epworth League will hold another union meeting in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening at 6:45 o'clock.

The last of the union services were held last evening in the Presbyterian church. Rev. George A. Francis preached to a large congregation.

A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying and exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. What is needed is that which is cleansing, soothing, protecting and healing. Such a remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. To test it a trial size for 10 cents or the large for 50 cents is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York. Druggists keep it. Upon being placed into the nostrils it spreads over the membrane and relief is immediate. It is an agreeable cure.

—The members of Warren Engine Company are rapidly completing arrangements for their fair to be held February 6th to 11th, in Saengerbund Hall.

—The work of digging the cellar for the construction of a new building which L. A. Hummer is to erect at the corner of Linden avenue and Somerset street, is well under way.

—Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, has been secured as one of the speakers for the installation exercises to be held next Tuesday evening at G. A. R. Hall.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Every bottle guaranteed.

Smokeless Powder on Fire.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 7.—One of the large dry houses of the Dupont Powder Works at Carney's Point on the New Jersey shore, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is about $2,000. The fire was started by the accidental igniting of some smokeless powder. There was no explosion and all the workmen escaped injury beyond a few slight burns.

Passenger Engine Wrecked.

Herkimer, Jan. 7.—A passenger engine on the Adirondacks and St. Lawrence Railroad went through a trestle at the junction of the Northern and New York Central roads.

Trainman Andrew Moore of Herkimer is missing and his body is probably buried in the wreck.

Wishing to be Reappointed.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Roosevelt has received petitions signed by the president or other officer of every agricultural society of the state requesting him to reappoint Charles A. Wieting to the office of commissioner of agriculture, and he has decided that he will do so.

Ward Boss—Did you vote that paster?
Mike—No sir; I pasted that voter.

Story at the Bishop's Expense.

The Archbishop of York told a good story at his own expense. He was recently in a train, and near him sat two drunken men. Presently one of them remarked to the other that some one had robbed him of a $5 note, and he proposed to find it if he had to search the whole train.

"As it happened," said the Archbishop, "I had a $5 note and that was all, and as I was alone in the carriage with them I felt a little bit uncomfortable. Then it occurred to me to pretend to be asleep.

"Sure enough, in a minute more I was accosted with: 'I say, neighbor!' but I made no answer. Then the man grabbed my arm and shook me, but to no purpose, as I didn't wake up. He kept on shaking, however, and always a little more forcibly, until at last his friend interposed with: 'I say, Bill, let him alone, will you; he's drunker'n you are!'"

In the Shade.

Two Irish laborers, old time friends, met on the street in San Francisco recently, and after a cordial handshake one of them inquired—"An' where have yez been, Moike?" "Workin' on the farrums in Southern California," was the reply, "and Oi'm mighty glad ter git back." "What happened yez there?" was the next inquiry. "Th' weather. It was too doomed hot. Why, whin Oi was a-workin' near Prisno th' t'ermom'ter marked wan hundred an' sixteen degrais in th' shade." "Is that so? Will, be Hivens, they didn't make yez worruk in th' shade, did they?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on L. W. Randolph, Druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c. and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

To Clean Black Silk.

When a thrifty Frenchwoman wishes to clean black silk, she brushes it thoroughly and wipes it with a cloth. Then, after it is free from dust, she lays it flat on a board and sponges it with hot coffee which has been strained through muslin and freed from sediment. The silk is sponged on the right side, allowed to become half dry and then ironed on the wrong side.

The coffee removes every particle of grease and restores the brilliancy of the silk without giving it the shiny appearance or the crinkly and papery stiffness which results from beer, or indeed from any other liquid except ammonia and water, which last does not freshen the color and gloss of the silk as coffee does. The silk is much improved by the process, and the good effect is permanent.

Silk should never be ironed with a hot iron put directly on the silk. Always lay thin wrapping paper, such as is used by our best dry goods stores over it, and iron through the paper.

When stitching thin silk, or, indeed any goods flimsy enough to draw in the machine, lay paper over it also and stitch through. The paper will tear away easily along the line of perforations made by the needle.

Present Day Lack of Gallantry.

During the past few years life in the great centres of population has witnessed a falling off of many of the little gallantries of men to women. The entrance of the gentler sex into the labor market as a competitor of man has tended to blunt the chivalric feeling so characteristic of our fathers. Says the Chaperone Magazine: "Little attentions mean much to a woman, and they have lacked the small courtesies of life due to themselves from the opposite sex so much and for so long that they are trying to make themselves believe that they can do without them, act as if they did not expect them, but they do. They are longing for the days of their grandfathers, and the men who lived in those times. The old saying that everything will come back in seven years has failed miserably in this case, and it is a serious matter. We have wondered what would become of our women! But what has become of our chivalrous, courteous men?"

One Way to Cook a Chicken.

An excellent way to cook and serve a chicken is thus: After cutting the chicken open down the back pound the breast bones with a wooden mallet to flatten them a little. Lay the bird in a shallow baking tin with some slices of salt pork, and place the pan in a hot oven. Pour a little salted water into the pan and frequently baste the chicken with it while it is in the oven. Let it remain until about half cooked. Then take it from the pan and place it upon a broiler over a clear fire. Broil the under side of the chicken, and then turn it and cook the skin side to a delicate brown. When cooked place it upon a heated platter, sprinkle it with salt and pepper and pour some melted butter over it. Scatter chopped parsley over the whole. A chicken cooked in this manner has all the delicate flavor of broiling and will be more thoroughly and evenly cooked.

To Renovate Velvet.

A simple method of cleaning velvet, velveteen and plush is as follows: With the assistance of a stiff whisk broom, a pan of boiling water and an obliging friend, who will brush up the nap as you hold the goods taut over the steam, the wrong side to the water, these materials will look like new. This process removes wrinkles, brightens the color and makes the crushed nap stay up when brushed against the grain, and will answer for black or colored-pile fabrics. If the velvet has a grease spot on it remove it with French chalk before the steaming process.

Children's Poor Teeth.

A recent article in The American Kitchen Magazine gives as the opinion of a dentist that the poor teeth of children is often due to lack of exercise. Much of the modern food given to children is in the form of soups, purees and mush made from cereals, and not enough work is given to the teeth in mastication to draw the blood in large quantities to them. It does not, therefore, give up its strengthening qualities in sufficient quantity to make strong teeth. The dentist recommended that things hard to chew be given to the children.

Remedy for Slipping Rugs.

House-proud women who rejoice in smooth, hard floors often find the slipping of rugs stretched upon them a serious annoyance, if not a positive danger, as falls may easily ensue from it. A rug salesman contributed the other day this suggestion as a remedy:

"Wet the rugs thoroughly," he said, "and turn them right side downward until dry. It will not hurt them and will relieve this tendency to slip.

The explanation is that the wetting dissolves some slightly gummy substance used in their treatment.

"What makes you so utterly discouraged just after Mr. Chilbone's unqualified praise of your picture?" inquired the artist's friend.

"It's a sure sign he doesn't want to buy it."—Washington Star.

OUR YOUTHS' COLUMN.

LITTLE PRINCE TATTERS.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his cap!
Over the hedge he threw it;
Into the river it fell "kerslap!"
Stupid old thing to do it!
Now mother may sigh and nurse may fume
For the gay little cap with its eagle plume.
One cannot be thinking all day of such matters!
Trifles are trifles!" says little Prince Tatters.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his coat—
Playing, he did not need it!
Left it right there by the nanny goat,
"And nobody never seed it!"
Now mother and nurse may search till night
For the little new coat with its buttons bright;
But—"Coat sleeves or shirt sleeves, how little it matters!
Trifles are trifles!" says little Prince Tatters.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his ball!
Rolled away down the street!
Somebody'll have to find it, that's all,
Before he can sleep or eat.
Now raise the neighborhood quickly, do!
And send for the crier and constable, too!
"Trifles are trifles; but serious matters.
They must be seen to," says little Prince Tatters.

Fishes Need Slippery Coats.

The slippery coat of slime found on all fishes is essential to their existence. It is secreted usually in a continuous series of ducts with numerous openings, which in some cases are plainly visible, and in others imperceptible. There are also pores for the secretion of the mucus in the fish's head. The slime exudes through the divisions between the scales to the outer part of the body, over which it spreads, forming a sort of outer skin or covering, transparent, elastic and tenacious, and often having considerable body. Fishes vary greatly in the amount of slime which they secrete. The eel has a very liberal share, and an ordinary fish of two pounds weight will usually have a coating of slime a thirty-second of an inch in thickness.

One of the important functions of the fish's slimy coating is to protect it from the attacks of fungus, a form of plant life found in all waters, salt and fresh, foul and pure. If the fish is so injured that some spot becomes uncovered by the slime a barely visible fungus will be likely to lodge there, and when it is once lodged the process of its reproduction is very rapid. It soon extends over the gills and kills the fish. The primary purpose of the slime of the fish is to reduce its friction when in motion and increase its speed. It also serves as a cushion to the scales, which it thus protects from many injuries. The slimy covering makes the fish hard to hold, and so enables it the more readily to escape from its enemies. In some cases the slime has a very rank smell, and this serves as a means of defense against other fish.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Singing the Pain Away.

An eight-year-old child with a cut in her hand was brought to a physician. It was necessary for the best results to take a few stitches with a surgeon's needle. While the physician was making preparations, the little girl swung her foot nervously against the chair, and was gently admonished by her mother who stood near to assist.

"That will do no harm," said the doctor, kindly, "as long as you hold your hand still," adding, with a glance at the strained, anxious face of the child, "You may cry as much as you like."

"I would rather sing," replied the girl, with a smile.

"All right, that would be better. What can you sing?"

"I can sing 'Give, give, said the little stream.' Do you know that?"

"I am not sure," responded the doctor. "How does it begin?"

The little patient proceeded to illustrate.

"That's beautiful," said the doctor. 'I want to hear the whole of it."

All the while the skilled fingers were sewing up the wound, the sweet, childish voice sounded bravely through the room, and the only tears shed on the occasion came from the eyes of the mother.

It is, I believe, a physiological fact that some expression of one's feelings tends to lessen pain.—Congregationalist.

Wasps Make Paper.

Wasps were the first and original paper makers, and as geometricians and architects vie with their relatives the bees. One has only to study the stories in that gray apartment house called a wasps' nest, to wonder at and admire the skill of the builders. The wasps build their nests of a material made by gathering bits of weather-worn wood and chewing them up, making a true paper pulp. These builders are equal to emergencies. A wasps' nest was once involuntarily unroofed that was under a board. Several days later it was discovered that the nest was well roofed by neat paper shingles. Never before, probably, had these wasps or their ancestors been called upon to roof a domicile, but these did this original work with much show of the knowledge of the principles of roof construction.—Chautauquan.

A BASEBALL CRITIC.

News, Notes and Opinions About the National Game.

Here is the voice of a base ball critic, who wants to reach the ear of the National league. He speaks directly to the league magnates thus:

"You got a long ways away from the people last season. You seemed to think the public cared about your petty differences and your schemes of making money. You forgot all about the grand, glorious game of baseball. You watched the turnstiles like the agent of a 10-cent Uncle Tom's Cabin Company. Your first query after a game hasn't been the old-time eager inquiry 'What's the score?' The public has begun wondering if the sport itself is not a secondary consideration and if—since you take pains to advertise it so thoroughly—your overwhelming desire is not to get hold of their quarters and their half dollars."

The "rowdy ball" bugaboo will be once more held up to terrorize the magnates. This in spite of the fact that the Board of Discipline appointed at the St. Louis meeting last spring did not have a single case brought before it during or after the season. several of the club owners have expressed themselves as being in favor of abolishing the board. President Soden, of Boston, the dean of the magnates, favors its retention. He thinks its effect has been salutory. Hanlon, of Baltimore, and Kerr, of Pittsburg, are outspoken in their opposition to the Board of Discipline or any other outside tribunal for the regulatin of affairs which concern the League alone. Both will strongly oppose any increase in the powers and jurisdiction of the present board.

The system in vogue up to last season, of fining the players, meets with strong opposition. President DeHaas Robinson, of the Cleveland Club, who once took a case to court of a fine imposed on one of his players by an umpire, says: "I will always fight the proposition to have an incapable umpire fine my players for objecting to his poor decisions. As the rules now stand the umpires have plenty of authority to discipline the players, without taking money out of their pockets."

It is believed that the failure of the Cleveland club to yield profits in the past five years has been directly due to the policy of Frank Robinson, who has taken no steps to suppress Tebeau and his ruffianly ball players. The patrons of Cleveland have been represented as being disgusted with their team's tactics, and the fact that the games have not been patronized even when the team stood high in the race is taken to mean that the cranks of the Forest City have not been shamming.

A WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS.

Mrs. Annie Yeamans Indulges in Some Reminiscences.

Mrs. Annie Yeamans, who has been on the stage more than 50 years, and is now 60 years old, contemplates writing a volume of reminiscences. She has had some interesting experiences during her long stage career.

"I was born in the Isle of Man," she says, "and am very proud of being a Manx woman. My mother was Manx too, but my father was Welsh. They emigrated to New South Wales when I was a baby, and I did not leave Australia until 1865. I married an American, a New Yorker, and I have lived in the United States most of the time since 1868, so long that I seem to belong right here."

Her father an actor, she was drilled in stage work from her earliest youth. At the age of 10 she went on at Sydney. At 15 she joined a circus, married a circus man, worked summer in the circus and winter in the Sydney stock company. Dialect being her forte, especially the Irish, the Scotch, the German and the Lancashire, she was always in demand in the winter season. Having been a dancer to begin with, circus manoeuvres were not difficult for her. "I did everything," she said, "I rode in the entree. That was side-saddle, when the horses and performers went through quadrille and other difficult things. I did 'menage' work—jumping fire, bar fences and that. I did 'principal' work, jumping through paper balloons and such things. I had 'character' and 'double' acts, just the sort of things you see at all circuses, only that I was without a specialty in the sense that I attempted each one. We traveled a great deal. There was a lot of work to do, and after a time I toted my babies along with the rest of the paraphernalia. But somehow it never seemed very hard.

After settling in the United States in 1868, Mrs. Yeamans sent for her father and her mother, with whom she had left her two eldest children in Australia. They came to New York and settled there, a family of stage-folk, save the Manx mother. "Though she, dear old darling! was just as interested in plays and players as anyone could be," says this 60-year-old daughter, dutifully.

Since then the mother and grandmother has died, aged 87, so that longevity runs in the family. Mrs. Yeamans has also lost her husband, her father and her second daughter, Emily. "I have laid them all away; there are just Jennie and I," says the clever old actress, and tears come behind the spectacles, while the firm old mouth grows too tremulous for speech.

Mr. H. B. Plant, the railroad magnate, bids fair to succeed in making Tampa, Fla., the great winter sporting center of the South. The coming wheelmen's meet will be a far greater event than that of last February at the latter place.

Eisenach. Der 17 Verbindungen umfassende Studentenverein Wingolfbund, der seit dem Jahre 1850 alle zwei Jahre in der Pfingstwoche in der Wartburgstadt seinen Kongreß abhält, wird gleich den deutschen Burschenschaften hier zur Erinnerung an den deutsch-französischen Krieg ein Denkmal errichten, wenn es auch bescheidener ausfallen wird, wie das Burschenschaftsdenkmal. Es wird in Gestalt einer ehernen Gedächtnißtafel von 2½ Meter Höhe ausgeführt werden, auf der sich in Hochrelief ein Genius abhebt. Dieser hält in der einen Hand einen Palmen- und Lorbeerzweig, in der anderen ein wappengeschmücktes Schild, das die Namen sämmtlicher in dem großen Kriege gefallenen Kommilitonen tragen wird. Die Erztafel wird an einer im mittelalterlichen Befestigungsstil ausgeführten Bastion angebracht werden, die an einem der schönsten Aufgänge zur Wartburg, nämlich am sogenannten Pfarrberge, sich erhebt und so den meisten Burgbesuchern in's Auge fallen wird.

Hamburg. In Gegenwart des Generalobersten Grafen Waldersee sowie der Spitzen der Civil- und Militärbehörden wurde der auf der Schiffswerft von Blom u. Voß erbaute größte Schnelldampfer der Hamburg-Amerika-Linie glücklich vom Stapel gelassen. Der Dampfer erhielt den Namen „Graf Waldersee."—Die „Hamburger Nachrichten" enthalten eine Zuschrift aus Stuttgart, welche die Angaben über das von der Cotta'schen Verlagsbuchhandlung für die Bismarck'schen Memoiren gezahlte Honorar als übertrieben bezeichnet und mittheilt, daß für den Band 100,000 Mark stipulirt seien, und zwar ein- für allemal, so daß alle Ergebnisse aus Uebersetzungen und späteren Auflagen ausschließlich und ohne Einschränkung dem Verlage vorbehalten blieben.

Bremen. Der Schleppdampfer „Centaur" überfuhr auf der Weser bei Vegesack ein Boot, von dessen Insassen der Schlächtermeister Krohne und Zimmerlehrling Havighorst, beide aus Blumenthal, ertranken.—Der Bremer Rechtsanwalt Dr. Werner Müller, der wegen Unterschlagung von Mündelgeldern geflüchtet war, wurde in Osnabrück ergriffen.

Lübeck. Ein orkanartiger Sturm richtete hier großen Schaden an. Von dem Giebel eines hohen Geschäftshauses der Hauptstraße wurde ein Reklameschild heruntergeworfen, Schiffsvertauungen losgerissen, die Fähren mußten den Betrieb einstellen. Der Orkan verursachte auch große Störungen im Fernsprechverkehr.

Oldenburg.

Oldenburg. Demnächst werden es 100 Jahre, daß das oldenburgische Münsterland, und zwar die Aemter Cloppenburg und Vechta, mit dem Herzogthum Oldenburg vereinigt wurden; zur Erinnerung an diese Centenarfeier wird seitens der betreffenden Gemeinden des oldenburgischen Münsterlandes die Errichtung eines Monuments geplant.

Großherzogthum Hessen.

Darmstadt. Der Rechenschaftsbericht des Komites zur Unterstützung der durch den Wolkenbruch vom 9. Juni im Kreise Erbach Geschädigten beziffert den Gesammtschaden auf 178,423 Mark. Vom Ministerium wurden 30,000 Mark zur Verfügung gestellt, durch Sammlungen wurde 25,972 Mark aufgebracht; es standen also zu Entschädigungen an Private 55,972 Mark zur Verfügung, die zur Deckung der für Ersatz von 50 Prozent des Schadens benöthigten Summe von 46,320 Mark ausreichten. Den Gemeinden und dem Kreise können zur Bestreitung der Kosten für die erlittenen Schäden aus dem „Ueberschwemmungsfonds" vom Ministerium unverzinsliche Darlehen, in zehnjährigen Raten rückzahlbar, überlassen werden.

Gießen. Bei der hier stattgehabten Stadtverordnetenwahl war eine überaus rege Wahlbetheiligung (60 Prozent) zu konstatiren. Die Liste des freisinnig-nationalliberalen Kartells kam nur theilweise zum Siege. Die Sozialisten blieben in der Minderzahl. Gewählt wurden 8 Freisinnige, darunter 3 Neugewählte, 3 Nationalliberale, sämmtlich wiedergewählte Vertreter, während die Sozialisten jetzt über 2 Mandate von 30 in der Versammlung verfügen.

ELLEN'S STRATEGY.

BY MINNA STANWOOD.

Mrs. Angier, often said she really did not know how she ever came to take Ellen, and those who knew them both wondered too. For Mrs. Angier was sharp, prim and elderly, and Ellen was—well, the last girl in the world that one would suppose could suit Mrs. Angier. When Ellen stood before her with her great frame drawn to its full height and fixed her expressionless blue eyes on her face, little Mrs. Angier said she never knew what to do. This must have been a novel mental condition for Mrs. Angier who had always ruled her household, which had hitherto consisted of her daughter and her one maid, with a rod of iron.

"I get the meals, I wash the clo'es, I clean up, clean up, clean up. What more you want? I ain't no slave to work all the time!" blazed Ellen, one afternoon when Mrs. Angier attempted to expostulate with her for sitting so cosily in the kitchen crocheting her endless cotton lace. There was a dull red flush on the girl's high, bare brow, and Mrs. Angier retreated from the kitchen with barely a trace of her usual prim dignity.

One morning Mrs. Angier, with a letter in her hand, entered the kitchen where her maid was noisily washing dishes. Although Ellen had never broken or even chipped a dish each click of the china touched a tender spot in Mrs. Angier's soul, and she spoke sharply,—

"Ellen, I wish you would be more quiet."

"Ain't I quiet?" demanded Ellen, facing around.

"Oh, yes, you are. But about the dishes, I mean," faltered the mistress, avoiding the eyes. "Oh, Ellen, I came to tell you that I have received a letter from my daughter, Mrs. Morrill, saying she is coming to make me a visit. She will be here to dinner. I wish you to get her room ready."

Ellen had resumed her dish washing and made no response.

"Did you understand, Ellen?" questioned Mrs. Angier, fearing the girl was displeased with the news.

"Ma'am?" returned Ellen; lifting her head.

The tone implied such perfect comprehension that Mrs. Angier left the room without further remark.

When the station carriage containing Mrs. Morrill stopped before the house Ellen appeared, quietly put little Mrs. Angier aside, went down the walk and relieved the visitor of her travelling bags.

"That feller on the waggin's dumb!" she remarked, casting a wrathful look at the driver, who regarded the two with cheerful interest from his seat on the box. "Or perhaps he ain't got no legs," she added, scornfully.

"He never was very attentive to his passengers," returned Mrs. Morrill pleasantly.

"Be you her daughter?" gasped Ellen, devouring Mrs. Morrill's face with her eyes.

The lady smiled fearlessly into the eyes and answered, "yes."

A dull flush slowly mounted to Ellen's brow, as she said,—

"Why, you are blonde, and she's—eak!"

Ellen stood by and watched almost greedily while the ladies embraced and followed awkwardly when they entered the house with their arms about each other.

Would you take them up to my room Ellen, please? One at a time if they're too heavy for you."

"I could take you, too," returned Ellen, starting on.

"How odd she is, mamma. Where did you ever get her?" exclaimed Mrs Morrill, dropping wearily into a chair

Mrs. Angier closed the door softly took a chair beside her daughter and poured out her tale of woe.

There was something so extremely ridiculous in the idea of her determined little mother living in subjection to that raw-boned, gawky girl, that Mrs. Morrill laughed outright several times during the narrative.

"I never heard of anything so funny in all my life. But don't fret, mamma dear, such an unnatural state of things can't continue. Affairs will adjust themselves, somehow, see if they don't."

"But you haven't an idea what she is," objected Mrs. Angier, pathetically, whereupon her daughter laughed again.

Mrs. Morrill became an object of intense adoration to Ellen, who let slip no opportunity to show her regard. The house was kept in perfect order, and Mrs. Morrill's room received many extra touches that kept it in a delightful state of daintiness. But it was upon the cooking that Ellen expended her supreme efforts, and each successive meal had some unusual delicacy to surprise and please the guest.

Mrs. Morrill received the girl's attentions good-humoredly and spoke many words of kindness and sympathy which never failed to bring to the girl's face that unpleasant flush which always appeared when she was much moved.

One evening Ellen knocked at Mrs. Morrill's door, and without waiting to be bidden entered the room.

"I knowed you was crying," she said, hoarsely. "What's the matter?"

"Ellen!" exclaimed Mrs. Morrill, angrily.

"Don't be mad," said Ellen, calmly. "You cry every night you do be here."

Mrs. Morrill raised her tear-stained face and regarded the girl with a mingled look of amazement and terror.

"Is it her?" demanded Ellen.

"Her?"

"Yes her!" repeated Ellen with an energetic jerk of the thumb toward her mistress' room.

"Mamma? O, no!"

"Then tell me!" cried Ellen, flinging herself to her knees before Mrs. Morrill, and clasping her arms around her. "Tell me who's the dumb thing tills I kill um."

"You frighten me," exclaimed Mrs. Morrill, recoiling from such violent sympathy.

"I won't hurt you. But I'm goin' to settle your hash. Who is it now? Will I have you sitting roun' crying out those eyes? You what spoke vords kine to me. You only vun. I guess not. Think I'm dumb?"

"You are very kind, Ellen, and I thank you, but my unhappiness you can't do anything to lessen," spoke Mrs. Morrill, sadly.

Suddenly Ellen stood, and demanded sternly,—

"Where's your man?"

"My man?" repeated Mrs. Morrill, in amazement, "Oh, you mean my husband? I haven't any now—I fear."

"What's that?" with a thrust of the hand toward a photograph on the bureau.

"Yes, that's Mr. Morrill. But—why, really, Ellen you have no right to catechise me in this way."

"Yes I have. Go on! Go on!"

But Mrs. Morrill arose and threw herself at the bedside in a passion of weeping.

Instantly Ellen was beside her clasping in those great arms the quivering form of the woman she loved.

"There a, there a, there a, there a, there a," she said soothingly. "Nothing's vorth it. No, no, no! No, no!"

And because she didn't know what else to do Mrs. Morris sobbed out on that broad breast the whole story of her misery. How with the love of her happy girlish heart she had married her husband, and had tried, for his sake, to live with his people, who despised her simple, unfashionable ways, and treated her coldly; but at last, thinking her husband, too, had turned against her, she had left them all and came home to stay. How she had never told her husband her intention, and had not the courage to tell her mother, and how wholly miserable she was.

"You shut up now, and go to bed. There's a girl of the name Ellen got a hand on this. You find it out!" and with these extraordinary words the girl left the room.

Presently she put her head in the door and asked,—

"Name Tom?"

"Why, Ellen, what difference can it make? His name is Thomas G Morrill."

"Tom. All right. Go to bed."

The next morning the youth in the elegantly appointed law office of Morrill & Gates, handed the senior partner a telegram addressed to "Tom Morril." The superscription so surprised Mr. Morrill that he raised an inquiring glance at his clerk, on whose face the look of amusement quickly gave place to one of concern.

Tearing open the envelope, Mr. Morrill read the following:—

To Tom Moril:

She wat is left is dying. Come to huston.

Ellen.

The remarkable nature of the message admitted of no delay, and Mr. Morris started for the next train, with all speed.

When he stepped from the train at Houston he was approached by a woman of massive proportion who said in decided tones,—

"You're him! Her man."

"May I ask your name, madam?"

"Vy, of course. I'm Ellen."

"I really can't say that I'm much the wiser for that information," replied Mr. Morrill, who began to think himself the victim of some practical joke.

"Don't be mad. Come along," responded the girl, cheerfully, taking possession of Mr. Morrill's satchel. "No, I lug it. Vat you tink? She dying? I said that to make you come. She might could die. She might could cry those eyes out, an' spoil that pooty face. You care?"

"If you mean my wife, certainly I care. But I confess the whole thing's a secret to me," replied Mr. Morrill, regarding Ellen suspiciously.

"You'll find out. She runned away an' then got sorry again. How you let all them wimmens sass her? Pooty capers if the do be rich mugs."

"Run off? Of whom are you talking?"

"Mis' Morrill. A pooty one like her ain't going to stan' a peck o' cats clawin'. you find it out. Here take your truck. I go this way."

And Ellen thrust Mr. Morrill's bag into his hand and disappeared down a side street.

The intimation that his wife had run away from him was a great surprise, and altogether alarming, and caused Mr. Morrill to take a review of his brief married life as he walked slowly toward the home of his wife's girlhood. Although he thought her choice of a confidante in rather questionable taste, and wished she had seen fit to take a different course, he was forced to admit that his mother and sister were rather trying, and he found himself saying, "Poor little girl," as he turned into the familiar path to the house.

He was not surprised that Ellen should answer his ring, nor amused by the ceremony with which she ushered him into the parlor and asked the name, for he began to be touched by a reflection of his wife's misery.

Mrs. Morrill was so overcome by Ellen's tidings that her husband was in the parlor waiting for her that she could not control herself sufficiently to go down. With deft fingers Ellen touched up the bright hair, and slipped a fresh handkerchief in her belt, then drawing Mrs. Morrill's hand through her arm, took her down to the parlor. As she softly closed the door, she heard Mr. Morrill say with a world of tender reproach in his voice, "Lucy!" and her face mantled red as she said to herself, "That'll fetch her. 'Twould me. It's all right now. Ole cat don't fine it out."

The outcome of it was that young Mr. and Mrs. Morrill had a home of their own in which Ellen served a beloved mistress in all the fidelity of her strange, warm heart. Mrs. Angier heaved a sigh as of a slave set free when she saw the carriage door close upon Ellen's broad back, and descended upon Ellen's successor.

SOUR DOCK HAS ITS USE.

Canaigre Is Its Name and It Will Revolutionize the Tanning Industry.

Canaigre—you pronounce it "kahnah-gray," and it means the weed known as the sour-dock—has recently been found to possess an important economic value, and its employment in the tanning of leather bids fair to revolutionize that industry.

Until the discovery of the properties of canaigre there had hardly been any real improvement in tanning agents in a hundred years.

So far canaigre tanning and bark tanning are identical, but while the hide must remain for three months in the vat in the bark solution, being removed, drained and manipulated many times in the process, the canaigre acid tans it in twelve hours.

The tannic acid extracted from canaigre has a peculiar quality which indicates that nature intended it for preservative purposes. It is impossible to burn and destroy leather in its solution, as it is very easy to do with a solution of tanbark too strong for the hides, and the cells of the substance to be tanned will absorb enough to complete the change and then will take no more, and no alteration in the tissue takes place afterward. In a few hours, varying with the sort of hide to be tanned, the acid of the canaigre has done its work, and the saving of three months' time and a vast deal of human labor in the production of leather indicates that eventually the whole leather using world is to be the beneficiary of this humble plant.

The cost of an acre of canaigre, including the planting, cultivating, irrigating and harvesting, it is estimated, is $16.50. The returns vary from $65 to $75 per ton, sliced, and the yield is from twelve to twenty tons to the acre on new land, and rises higher, with cultivation. The drying shrinks the product two-thirds, but the producer can count on a clear gain of $200 to the acre.—New York Herald.

A LITTLE TOO QUICK.

The Official, in His Zeal, Swallowed Dirty Water Instead of Soup.

Numerous complaints had come before a certain public official in regard to food served to the inmates of one of the public institutions, and he determined to investigate for himself, in order to see whether the matter really required attention, says the New York Journal.

Making his way to the particular buildings in question just about dinner time, he walked straight over to where the kitchen was located. At the very door he encountered two muscular-looking men carrying a huge, steaming boiler.

"Put that kettle down," he ordered brusquely, and the men at once obeyed.

"Get me a spoon," he next commanded.

The man that brought the spoon was about to say something, but was ordered to keep silent.

"Take off the lid," was the next command; "I'm going to taste it."

The two men were utterly cowed by the official's brusqueness, and wonderingly watched him gulp down a good mouthful.

"Do you mean to say that you call this soup?" the official demanded. "Why, it tastes to me more like dirty water."

"So it is sir," replied one of the men, respectfully. "We have just been scrubbing the floors."

How an Old Man Was Converted.

"This here speculatin' in wheat on the Stock Exchange is gamblin' pure and simple," said the farmer, who was a deacon and a strict disciplinarian, "an' the Lord won't prosper them that wins by it."

"Well, father," replied his son, "I'm sorry to hear that, for I placed that money you gave me and made $900 by the deal."

The old man coughed, wiped his glasses and then said:

"Well, well! Providence does work in mysterious ways! The parson was sayin' last week that the church needed paintin'; an' besides—thar's a mortgage on the farm that orter be lifted, an' one o' two other little accounts that's got ter be squared. Well, Well!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Sinking Mountain.

Dshebel Naibo—"The Sinking Mountain,"—an isolated Algerian peak, is now only about 800 feet high, and is known to be slowly but surely disappearing. In the time of the Caesars it was nearly twice its present height. Near the "Sinking Mountain" is a large, clear lake, called Fezzara, which is said to have risen over a large city that sank in the year 400 A. D.

A curate introduced his somewhat insignificant looking wife to the great lady of the parish in the words of Autolycus: "A poor thing, madame, but mine own." The wife, who did not want for spirit, retorted, indicating her disagreeable husband: "A poorer thing, madame, but mine owner."—House hold Words.

NEWS OF THE WHEEL.

CHANGES AND IMPROVEMENTS IN THE LATEST MODELS.

Trying to Lift Construction Out of the Rut—A Low-Priced Sound Machine—Duplex Rear Forks—Chainless Wheels—Notes of Varied Interest.

Although the change is hardly apparent in the bicycle models for 1899, strong efforts are being made by manufacturers to lift bicycle construction out of the rut into which it has fallen and give the riding public something new. The changes will not come all at once. Indeed the signs that herald it are so indistinct that there is danger of overlooking them altogether. But the seeds of unrest have been sown and if one but knows where to look the first faint indications of the coming changes may be perceived. Then is the time to heed them. A few months ago—when the factories were deciding upon the changes to be made in the '99 models—few doubted that we were nearer finality than ever before. The chainless had made little impression, and in chain machines differences in minor details were all that existed, and the same state of affairs promised to hold good during '99. Many makers frankly admitted their inability to make both changes and improvements. Others made heroic efforts to accomplish this result. Quite a different condition exists now. The air is full of signs of a change—if one is but able to see them. Plans are making for radical departures in constructional methods. Most of them will bear but little fruit for some time to come, but a few will be made to take affect at once. It is to frame construction that most attention is directed. Entirely apart from the influence of chainless machines—although this is by no means insignificant—a disposition is shown to depart from accepted standards. The shaping and bending of the tubes no longer engross the entire attention of the makers. Duplex lower rear forks, for instance, are beginning to make their appearance. Sometimes this is due to a belief in their superiority; at others, by a desire to obtain a talking point; whatever the reason, the fact is undeniable. The new ideas will be elaborated, tested, put out for trial. If all goes well the supreme effort will then be made. The chainless will smooth the way. It will be a change that is almost an improvement, and will dispose men's minds to favorably receive further movements in a similar direction. It necessitates greater changes in frame construction than have been made in years.

The day has gone by for the bicycle to be the vehicle of the privileged few. At the present moment we are on the eve of a tremendous development. A new era in cycling is about to commence—a time when a man or woman will think little more of buying a machine than getting a pair of boots or a new spring hat. Good machines can now be bought at such reasonable prices that no one will think of walking when they can use a wheel.

A SAIL TRICYCLE.

A huge demand is going to spring up directly for a low-priced, sound machine among the great masses of the people, and the output of bicycles from the wide-awake manufacturers who cater for this new trade will be ten or twenty times greater than has ever been thought of before.

When every artisan and laborer, every schoolboy and schoolgirl is able to buy a bicycle; when the policeman, the postman, the telegraph boy, and the soldier possess a mount, the cycle will indeed be with us. Cycling can hardly be said to have arrived at maturity yet.

Which is the deadliest—horse, gun, or bicycle? The question refers, of course, only to accidents occurring to private individuals, and does not take war into account. Still, the gun holds an easy first, while horse and bicycle are running a race for second place, and last year finished a dead heat.

One large English insurance company paid, in 1898, $70,000 for gun accidents, $80,000 for accidents caused by horses, and the same amount for accidents caused by bicycles.

So the "bicycle face" is no fallacy after all. It is a product of cycling, prevalent more amongst women than men, and feminine beauty of countenance will soon rank with the things that have been. Let us weep! A physician says that the real bicycle face may easily be recognized, for it is covered with scars, the result of tumbles. We had not noticed it, and we can't agree with the discoverer's recommendation that women's bicycles should be built with a speed limit of four miles an hour.

Kite flying is no longer an innocent amusement, especially when the flyer is mounted on a bicycle and the kite is a large one. A cyclist who recently indulged in this recreation, found his the power of the kite. Had he stuck to the machine, he might have been in heaven by now.

Here is some one who computes that there are 80,000 cyclists in Berlin, of whom 30,000 neglect to procure the card which the law of Berlin requires every cyclist to carry. Such is the state of affairs in a land where registration is in force.

The time required for a journey round the earth by a man walking day and night without resting would be 428 days; on a bicycle, 100 days; an express train, 40 days; sound, at a medium temperature, 32 1-2 hours; a cannon ball, 21 3-4 hours; light, a little over one-tenth of a second; and electricity, passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second.

It is a good plan to cease pedalling when negotiating wet street car rails or a particularly tricky bit of greasy street. So long as the machine has sufficient momentum to carry it at a fair pace over the danger without pedalling, it is a mistake to drive, as every effort made by the feet tends to throw the rider and the machine off the balance. It is worth remembering that pedalling aggravates the difficulty of sideslip.

There will be more revolutions than ever in Brazil, for American cycle manufacturers sent $100,000 worth of cycles there during the first half of 1898.

Buy a bicycle stand. It saves the rough usage of your handle-bars.

When taking your machine to pieces, bear in mind that there are balls in the crown of the machine as well as in the head, or you will lose many.

Be careful, when riding near the curb that your pedal does not foul the curb and throw you.

Clean your bicycle immediately after a ride, if not too tired. Don't leave it until you want to go on a ride.

READER OR ACTRESS.

Mrs. Sarah C. LeMoyne on the Advantages of Each Career.

"It would be difficult for me," says Mrs. Sarah C. LeMoyne, actress and reader, "to say off-hand whether the career of an actress is preferable to that of a reader. Both have their advantages and disadvantages. The actress has one paramount advantage in the fact that one successful role will bring her more praise and reputation, so far as personal popularity is concerned, than could be won by a reader in ten years. I think reading is the more difficult. For where the actress has to devote her study to one character alone, the reader, in presenting one play from the platform, must assume a great variety of characters and endeavor to strike the keynote of truth and accuracy in each.

"In the matter of personal comfort, of course the reader's position is preferable. She needs, for instance, only one handsome gown during the evening, while the actress is compelled to hustle between acts in the variety of elaborate costumes. But they are in many respects the same. Both actor and reader, to be successful, must, in the first place, have the gift of personality. To appear on the stage, platform or pulpit, the art of speaking correctly, which comes spontaneously, is essential.

In acting, the way you make your first entrance, deliver your first speech as the author has given it, at once impresses the audience. This point is, perhaps, splendidly illustrated in music. When, for instance, Wilhelmj raises his bow, the precision and the way the bow must strike and the poise of the bow at once impress you.

"There is only one law for people who appear before the public—man or woman. They must have their body absolutely under control, from the nape of the neck to the tip of the toes. The head will take care of itself. The poise of the body, the way you stand, the position of your limbs, are absolutely essential for what is called 'ease.' You must first of all have four feet firmly on the ground, and your chest expanded. This gives carriage. The same training for the platform is necessary for the stage. The great Lamperti used to say 'Sing, sing for heaven's sake with your legs.' And so I would paraphrase by saying: 'Read, read for heaven's sake, read with your legs.'"

Gear Cases.

The gear case, which last Spring was thought by many to be absolutely necessary to make a machine complete, seems to have been forgotten entirely. A dealer, in speaking of the matter, said that the riders became interested in gear cases when the chainless wheel made its appearance, but because none of these cases that were placed on the market were sufficiently light, and because they detracted from the appearance of the machine, there was no demand for them. He said, however, that the gear case will be introduced at the cycle show in a better form, and that next season a majority of the chain wheels will have them attached. In England very few bicycles are ridden without a chain guard.

Money in Horses.

During the past year John E. Madden has realized nearly $125,000 in horse races. And counting stakes and bets won, he has made $100,000 clear. During the season Madden sold Plaudit to William C. Whitney for $25,000. He disposed of Glenheim to A. H. & D. H. Morris for $15,000; for Frohsin he got from Perry Belmont $6,500, and Howland brought $3,000, while Great Bend was sold for $2,400. Mr. Madden also disposed of Rhinelander for $3,800, Scannell for $3,000, and more than 40 others at prices greater than $500 each.

Central Journal Bowling League.	Won.	Lost.	Highest Score.
Roselle	14	1	843
Park	9	6	852
Elizabeth	10	8	885
Westfield	7	8	933
Newark Bay C. C.	7	11	955
N. J. A. C.	4	11	944
Cranford Camino	3	9	811

Out of the seven clubs entered in the Central Journal Bowling League, the Park Club, of North Plainfield, is now second in line in the contest for the championship. The showing is an excellent one, much better than for several years and seems to show a resumption of the interest in the game. Every year it has been the custom of the Parks to start off well but to fall behind and wind up at the end of the season unpleasantly near the wrong end of the line. Captain Fred O. Ball is doing great work with his team this year, however, and it is to be hoped that he will hold them up to the present standard right through the season and prevent any landslide for the Parks toward the last.

F. O. Ball is secretary of the league and has announced the various averages of the teams and individual bowlers for scores and number of spares. The figures show some interesting facts. Although the Parks are second in line in the league the club stands next to last in average team scores. It is a fact that most of the Park's victories have been with comparatively low scores. Somehow their opponents never manage to roll up their high scores against the Parks. The Park team is also, as will be noticed, rather lax in making spares.

Mr. Hibbard, who is comparatively a new comer at the Park Club and on the bowling team, stands the highest of the local bowlers in the contest for high average scores. He is only third from the top with two of the famous "Big Five" of the defunct Elizabeth Athletic Club, veterans both of them, ahead of him. The showing on his part is therefore particulary creditable. Captain Ball is seventh, the next highest of the Park Club team.

	Average scores.	Average spares.
Roselle	807	23
Elizabeth	806	23
N. J. A. C.	791	22
Westfield	799	23
Newark Bay	785	22
Park Club	766	18
Cranford C. C.	727	20

In the contest for the highest individual average score the men whose averages are 160 or over are as follows:

1.	Pope, Elizabeth	173
2.	Morgell, Elizabeth	169.4
3.	Hibbard, Park	167.1
4.	Smith, Roselle	166.6
5.	Mulford, Roselle	165.8
6.	R. I. Townley, Westfield	165.2
7.	F. O. Ball, Park	165.1
8.	Cooper, N. J. A. C.	164
9.	Bodine, Newark Bay	163.9
10.	A. C. Griffith, Newark Bay	163.8
11.	Lane, Elizabeth	163.2
12.	Pitcher, N. J. A. C.	162.4
13.	Day, N. J. A. C.	162 4
14.	Sharp, Cranford	162.2
15.	Keys, Elizabeth	161
16.	Warner, Roselle	160.8
17.	Thiers, Park	160
18.	Davies, Newark Bay	160

In the race for the highest average number of spares, Lewis, of the N. J. A. C., is first with 5.6. Dr. Thiers leads the Park Club van at seventh place with an average of 4.8.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The Bennet-Moulton Company will make its last appearance in Music Hall tonight when they will present "McKenna's Flirtation," a roaring Irish comedy. The company will produce the play with special accessories, and will give a finished performance. The piece is especially adapted for the specialty acts.

* * * * * *

The New Year has opened most auspiciously for the Proctor continuous vaudeville houses. Never in their history have they held such remarkably large audiences as during the past holiday season, and never have the patrons been of higher class. The deduction from these facts is obvious, vaudeville as presented by Mr. Proctor, is what the great mass of the amusement loving public want. At the Pleasure Palace, East Fifty-eighth street and Third avenue, New York, (not far from the Grand Central depot), week of January 9th, the usually strong bill will be presented headed by John C. Rice, a favorite New York comedian, and his clever wife Sally Cohen, in a bright little farcial comedietta entitled "Our Honeymoon." Another humorous pair are John T. Thorne and Grace Carlton, and the supporting acts are almost equally good. At Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, Frederic Bond will revive "Her Last Rehearsal," an amusing comedy with a pretty love story running through it, and presented with a very novel stage setting. Twenty other acts complete a bill satisfactory in every particular.

Who Should Pay the Taxes?

Previous to the meeting of the Borough Council last evening the members informally discussed a subject in reference to the taxes levied on Dr. Cooley's "Brookside Retreat." It appears that when Dr. Cooley and Dr. Davis dissolved partnership the former swore off $5,000 for debt and the latter did the same thing. The matter will be investigated at an early date.

Slipped on Ice and Fractured Leg.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 7—Mrs. B. Conover, of Dunellen, met with a painful accident this morning when she fell on some ice and fractured her leg near the ankle. She had just stepped off the back porch on some ice when her feet slipped and caused the fall. She was assisted to the house and Dr. Brakeley was called.

COTTONWOOD TREES.

At One Time Considered Valueless but Now in Great Demand.

It will be news to many people to read that the cottonwood, which only a few years ago was looked upon as one of the worthless woods, and which fringed with luxurious growth the courses of these Southern rivers for no earthly utility, as it seemed, have come into great demand. In rafts and barge loads they are arriving constantly at Cairo. They are drawn up by endless chains cut into butts as they reach the door of the mills, with the water still dripping from them. These butts go between the planing and shaving knives and as they revolve the veneer peels off in sheets of various sizes. It is a quick and a cheap process. The cottonwood thus peeled finds a variety of uses, but above all it is the raw material for packing boxes. The trees grow rapidly, and where land is too low to be useful for anything else. The employment of cottonwood lumber is one of the new and admirable economies of the Lower Mississippi Valley.

In early days Jewett Wilcox steamboated up the Missouri. He used to tell an excellent story about the use of cottonwood lumber for house building at Omaha. Timber was scarce. The pioneers would set up a sawmill near the river and cut boards out of green cottonwood logs and build houses. They couldn't wait for the lumber to season. Cottonwood boards when green will do more queer things than a crash suit in its first wash. Wilcox used to say that when the sun began to get in its work on those brand new Omaha houses of the early times you could see them walk away in all directions.—New York Sun.

A WOMAN'S STILETTO.

The Hatpin Now Thought to Be Dangerous to Wear.

Ladies' hats have prevented many a man from seeing a stage performance. Now there is a fear that ladies' hatpins are preventing some poor fellows from ever seeing anything again, by causing blindness.

A gentleman was the other day sitting next a young lady in an omnibus in London, when the sudden stoppage of the vehicle caused them to be slightly jolted against each other, with the result that the point of the lady's hat pin came in contact with his eye. He suffered momentarily, but not severe pain, and shortly afterward left the omnibus, thinking he was suffering from a mere scratch. The lady, who was a total stranger to him, proceeded to her destination, never suspecting the injury she had caused. During the night the gentleman awoke in the most intense agony, which had not abated when he consulted me some twelve hours after the accident. I found that the pin had penetrated the eye at the margin of the cornea and passed obliquely through the iris and lens, a portion of iris protruding from the wound. Though an immediate operation saved the eye itself, for all practical purposes the sight is lost, and one is only surprised that worse results did not follow the entrance into the eye of an instrument which could not by any means be considered as surgically clean.—London Times.

WRITING THE SCARLET LETTER.

Hawthorne's Wife Inspired Him by Her Tact and Courage.

The old saying, "Every cloud has its silver lining," should often bring us comfort when the world appears to be frowning upon us. A rare example of this was shown by Hawthorne's wife, who proved herself to him a true "friend in need." One wintry day he had received notice that his services would no longer be required at his office. Weary and downcast, he returned to his humble home. His young wife stood waiting for him, and noticed at once that something was wrong. He told her his troubles. Straightway the brave little woman with her own hands kindled a bright fire; fetched pen, ink, and paper, which she set beside him; then, with a beaming face she touched the sad man on the shoulder and said: "Now you can write your book!" Immediately the cloud cleared, and things presented themselves to Hawthorne under a changed aspect. He felt a freed man; the office appeared as a cage from which he had escaped. "The Scarlet Letter" was written and proved a marvelous success, and fame rewarded Hawthorne and the brave little wife who had faced the cloud and found its silver lining."

FRIGHTFUL COLLISION.

Trains Crash Together on the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

TEN PEOPLE WERE KILLED

FORTY OTHERS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN INJURED.

Business Men's Excursion From the Coal Regions Had Passed Wreck at Bound Brook—Running on Wrong Track When Local Train Collided Head-on.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Jan. 9—Two passenger trains on the Lehigh Valley Railroad collided head on near Greenbrook tanks shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon.

According to the best information now attainable ten persons were killed and forty injured.

One track was blocked at Bound Brook on account of the freight wreck this morning. A excursion train passing through was compelled to take the west bound track.

Through some misunderstanding a west bound accomodation train was allowed to come west on the same track.

The trains met at the curve near Greenbrook tanks so the engineers could not see each others trains until they were close by.

The trains were running at full speed. The engineer of the westbound train jumped.

The engines came together and toppled over on him with a great crash.

The first car in the excursion train was telescoped. The other cars were partially wrecked.

Many of the seriously injured were taken over to the Jersey Central Railroad.

Seven were brought to Plainfield and taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Nine men and one woman were taken through on the 2:29 train to St. Francis and City Hospitals at Jersey City.

The injured brought to Muhlenberg Hospital are:

SCHAFFER, OLIVER, of 830 Lincoln street, South Easton, passenger, bruised about the head.

PENDERGRAPH, JAMER, engineer of engine No. 486.

BORREA, NICHOLAS, Shamokin, Pa., fractured leg. His wife and two children were also on board. Mrs. Borrea is hurt internally, and the two little girls each have broken limbs.

To Oppose Licenses.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Several applications for hotel licenses will be made from Westfield to this term of court. The Christian Citizenship League has made a list of all the signers on the petitions, preparatory to opposing the granting of of all the applications.

FIRST SEVERE SENTENCE

JUDGE RUNYON GIVES PHILLIMORE A BIG DOSE OF PUNISHMENT.

Prisoner Has a Record of Being Arrested Three Times in Three Days—He Pleaded Hard, But it Did No Good.

Arrested three times in three days. That is the record John Phillimore, of North avenue, Netherwood, has made for himself. The first two times he got off easily, but when he came up before City Judge Runyon this morning he was given a sentence that will keep him in the county jail at Elizabeth for the balance of the winter.

Friday Phillimore and his son were arraigned before the City Judge for stealing coal from the Central Railroad. Phillimore was fined $2 and allowed to go. Later in the day he was locked up for being drunk, and the next morning sentence was suspended upon him, with a warning not to come there again.

But Phillimore did not heed the warning and after fortifying himself with two quart bottles of whiskey, went up to Frank Hollenbeck, his son-in-law, on North avenue, and began to abuse him, calling him names and shouting loudly to the annoyance of the neighbors. Hollenbeck went to the City Judge's office and swore out a warrant for Phillimore's arrest, and Officer Saunders locked him up.

This morning, when arraigned in court, the prisoner was in a penitent mood. He denied being drunk, denied being disorderly, and even denied being at Hollenbeck's house until confronted with evidence that he was. Then he said that his son-in-law wanted to put him out of the way so that he could get the insurance money, and ended with promising the court to leave town at once if he would only suspend sentence on him again. But Judge Runyon said he had been troubled enough with Phillimore already, and gave him fifty-nine days in jail and a fine of $100.

LICENSE FIGHT LED BY ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

SUDDAY SELLING OVER IN SUMMIT.

The Great Reformer Puts His Detectives to Work in a Union County Town.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 9—Anthony Comstock is putting up a strong fight against the granting of saloon licenses in Summit. Saturday he drove two applicants out of the field and had the applications of two others held up until the Grand Jury could investigate charges that Mr. Comstock's detectives stand ready to make.

The Summit men whose applications were withdrawn were John Rooney and Samuel Katz.

William F. Hennessey, of Park row, New York, in a sworn statement handed to the Court of Common Pleas, testified that Sunday, September 24th, he, accompanied by H. B. Kimball, entered the saloon of John J. Shea, in Summit, played several games of pool there, and had some drinks of whiskey; and also that Sunday, October 16th, they got into Pierson's Hotel, in Summit, drank whiskey and saw about ten men in the place, all drinking.

Judge Vail said if this was the case, the proper place for the witness to go was before the Grand Jury, as Sunday selling was an indictable offense. He would, in the meanwhile, hold up these licenses until he saw what action would be taken by the Grand Inquest. The licenses of John J. Shea and Frederick Bedelt consequently were laid over.

Lawyer Twombly appeared in the court as the representative of Mr. Comstock, and made a strong argument against the granting of any more new licenses in Summit.

Licenses were granted by Judge Vail to Terrence Dunn, of Linden; John Tafelski, of Linden; Michael A. Huber and Nicola Orchietti, of Westfield.

TOOK PITY ON HIS FAMILY.

Prisoner Said He Had Wife and Seven Children—Judge Let Him Go.

Officer Flanagan found Fred Sanderson, of Samptown, drunk on West Third street Saturday night and locked him up. In the City Court this morning the prisoner stated that he has a wife and seven little ones dependent upon him for support, so City Judge Runyon suspended sentence on him. Sanderson works for the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company as an ice cutter.

A Bad Fall.

Miss Try Mattox, of Webster place, had a bad fall last night on the ice at the corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues. She slipped and fell, striking the back of her head against a sharp stone and lay there unable to rise for several minutes. Miss Mattox was assisted to her home and will be obliged to be quiet for a day or two.

UNION COUNTY G. O. P. AT THE INAUGURATION.

Foster Voorhees' Friends to Go to Trenton 1,000 Strong.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR THEM.

A BRASS BAND TO ACCOMPANY THE POLITICIANS.

Assurances That it Will be the Largest Delegation That Has Ever Left Union County for Trenton—Representatives Expected to Go From all Parts of the Bailiwick—Reduced Railroad Fares.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—Details for the visit of the representatives of Union county to Trenton Tuesday, Jan. 17th, to attend the inauguration of Governor Voorhees are nearing completion, and the committee having the matter in charge have received assurances that the delegation will be the largest that has every left Union county to go to the State capital.

It is anticipated that fully 1,000 persons from all parts of the county will join the party that will participate in the inaugural ceremonies that will induct into office the first Republican of Union county ever elected executive of New Jersey.

While the Governor is not in favor of a demonstration upon his inauguration, he will in a measure give way to the wishes of his friends, and his townsmen and the citizens of this county are preparing to go to Trenton and "whoop things up" on the occasion of his taking charge of the executive office of the State. The delegation will go on special train or trains, as the size of the party may need. These trains will leave Elizabethport at 7:55 and the main station at Elizabeth at 8 o'clock, and will make stops as far as Plainfield, running then directly to Trenton.

The train probably will start from Elizabethport, or if occasion should require, a section may be run from Newark, but steps will be taken so that the Union county delegation will have cars together in one section. It is likely that a lunch car will be attached to the trains so that the party may enjoy all the comforts of the trip. The special trains will leave Trenton on the return at a late hour yet to be fixed.

Tickets for this trip, and which will also be good to go on any train on Monday, January 16th, and good for return until January 18th, inclusive, will be sold at the following rates: Newark, $1.44; Elizabethport, $1.33; Elizabeth, $1.28; Roselle, $1.28; Cranford, $1.28; Westfield, $1.26; Fanwood, $1.21; Plainfield, $1.11.

BLORE GETS VERDICT BY THE JUDGE'S ORDER.

CASE TAKEN TO HIGHER COURT.

Judge Vanbyckel Wants Certain Law Question to be Reviewed by Higher Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—"Does the counsel wish to talk?" asked Justice VanSyckel, when Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the Board of Chosen Freeholders in the case of ex-Jail Warden John G. Blore, against that body for salary for services rendered, closed his case.

"I just want to say," added the Court, "that it is of no use. I have made up my mind in the matter. I have decided to charge the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff."

The Court directed the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff for $491.84, including interest. This action was taken by the Judge because he wants a higher court to review the law questions of the case. An appeal was taken.

Blore is a vetran of the Civil War. He was appointed jail warden of Union county February 1st, 1891, and his term was fixed at five years. Failing to be re-elected last February, and acting under the advice of counsel, he refused to surrender the office to his successor. He continued to hold the office until June 21st, when served with a writ and copy of a decision of the upper court, declaring the act of 1897 unconstitutional. Then it was he brought suit against the county to recover the wages due him, from February 1st to June 21st.

MANY CONSECRATED IN CHURCH.

Impressive Service Held in All Souls' Church Yesterday Morning.

The services at All Souls' church yesterday morning were especially interesting from the fact that seven young people, two men and five women, presented themselves for the service of consecration and to be welcomed thereafter as members of the Christian church. It was a very earnest company of young people who responded to the pastor's words, and the impression left on the minds of all present must have been serious and ennobling. The names of the new members who were welcomed as making, for the first time, a religious profession, are Helen Wright Andrews, Viola Percy Conklin, Edward Cohen, Laura M. Walker, Philip C. Wells. While as associate members, having already united with Unitarian churches elsewhere, the pastor welcomed Caroline A. Barber and Cora A. Perry.

To Read Paper on History.

The members of the Branch Alliance of the Unitarian church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock instead of this afternoon. The paper on "American History," will be read by Mrs. E. W. Conklin.

TWO CARS LEAPED THE EMBANKMENT.

Freight Wreck on Lehigh Valley at Bound Brook.

FREIGHT CARS DERAILED.

ACCIDENT CAUSED BY THE BREAKING OF A JOURNAL.

Happened Just East of the Bound Brook Station—Fifty Feet of Track Torn Up—Seven Cars Derailed—Two Went Over the Bank and Scattered Their Load of Grain Over the Ice.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Jan. 9.—A broken journal and axle on an east bound freight train on the Lehigh Valley railroad, early this morning, resulted in the derailing of seven cars and the blocking of both tracks just east of this place. No one was injured.

The freight train loaded with grain was bound for Perth Amboy under the charge of Conductor Lawrence Dufferin, of Easton. Ambrose West, of Easton, was the engineer of locomotive No. 385, which was pulling the train. At 4:45 o'clock the train was approaching the Bound Brook station when the journal broke. The ties were cut and the ground ploughed up for a hundred feet west of the station. The woodwork on the bridge over the road was partially torn up. Then the broken car began to rip up the ties and rails for a distance of some fifty feet. The seven cars following were derailed, some upset and two of them pitched over the high embankment and scattered their load of grain over the ice below.

The east bound track was torn up and the west bound track was blocked by the wreckage. Freight traffic was suspended for the time while the important passenger trains were switched over to the Jersey Central railroad at the Port Reading crossing and went over that road to Central junction, near Roselle, and there returned to the Lehigh Valley.

Superintendent W. O. Spriggs was early on the scene and hustled through the opening of the tracks. The wrecking train came from Perth Amboy, early in the morning. The steam wrecker from Packerton arrived at 9 o'clock and an hour later, the west bound track was cleared. The other track will be ready this afternoon when the rails will be relaid.

Journalistic Visitors.

DEBT WAS WIPED OUT.

METHODISTS OF SOMERVILLE GIVE UP TWO DAYS OF REJOICING.

Mortgages and Notes to be Burned—Rev. J. R. Bryan Largely Responsible for the Act—Residents of the Town Contributed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Jan. 9—The First Methodist church of Somerville are having days of rejoicing.

The cause of all this rejoicing is the entire extinguishment of a long-standing debt on the church and parsonage property.

Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan is pastor of the church. When he assumed charge last spring there was an indebtedness of $8,100. At the first quarterly conference he told the official boards of the church that the debt must be lifted if the church would be prosperous. They were inspired by his energy, and during the summer about $3,000 was raised. The members of the congregation sacrificed their personal comforts to aid in lifting the debt.

J. B. Duke, the president of the Tobacco Trust, who has a residence here, offered a liberal suboription, which he has since paid. Many other friends outside the congregation have assisted in a most liberal manner.

Yesterday morning a sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. George Smith, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, who resides in North Plainfield. In the evening the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Dr. John Krantz, presiding elder of the Paterson district, and formerly a pastor of the church.

This evening after the services the mortgages, bonds and notes will all be cremated. The women of the congregation will serve a collation in the church parlors between the services.

OLD MAN DESTITUTE AND ALONE IN CABIN.

PITIABLE PLIGHT OF "WEE WEE."

Living by Himself He Has Been Sick and Only Had a Stale Loaf of Bread to Eat for a Week.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 9—P. H. Chevantner, a well-known character of this town and called "Wee Wee" has been missed from the streets for the past week. Yesterday two young men in taking a walk passed his cabin, which is situated near the railroad track between Westfield and Fanwood, and went in. They found the old man, who is 62 years old, sick. The room in which he was is devoid of furniture with the exception of a stove, a chair and a few bed clothes which he had spread on the floor for a bed.

Chevantner came to Westfield 33 years ago with his wife but he had only been here a week when his wife ran away and since that time the old man has lived alone in the little cabin which he owns. He said he had been sick for a week and in that time had had nothing to eat but a loaf of stale bread. He has a son who is a plumber in Long Island City but the old man will not allow anyone to write to him as he says his son is married and cannot be expected to keep him in addition to his own family.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION.

Managers of Young Women's Club to Introduce New System of Dressmaking.

The management of the Young Women's Club are about to introduce another system of dress-making, in addition to the Kellogue system, now being taught Monday evenings by Miss Isabel Scarborough. This is the McDowell system, which will be taught Wednesday afternoons and evenings by a teacher from the McDowell school in New city. The price of this system in New York is $20, but arrangements have been made by which club members may obtain the course, consisting of the system and ten lessons at $9. The afternoon class for non-club members will cost $15, in advance. This is considered an unusual opportunity and it is hoped many will take advantage of it. Names should be sent at once to Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., 823 Madison avenue.

Debut of Sauer.

Emil Sauer, the famous pianist, will make his American debut in the Metropolitan opera house in New York tomorrow evening. Sauer's first appearance in this country will be a notable musical event, probably the most notable of the present season. Sauer indisputably belongs to the artists who, by themselves alone, with their own resources, hold the attention of an audience the entire evening. Sauer will be accompanied by orchestra of 150 pieces. A number of Plainfield people will attend the concert.

Former Mayor Gilbert's Winter Trip.

Former Mayor and Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, of Eighth street, will, at an early date, leave Plainfield for the Bahamas, where they will remain for an indefinite time.

MASTER PIGGY WON FOR THE BENEDICTS.

Deciding Match Rolled on Park Club Alleys.

VERY LITTLE EXCITEMENT.

THE MARRIED MEN HAD EVERYTHING THEIR OWN WAY.

The Pig Occupied an Exalted Position Over the Score Board—Benedicts Had a Great Team—P. B. Matthews Was Not There, So W. M. McCutchen, Yale, Acted as Captain for the Bachelors.

Ten married men and a pig. Who could expect to defeat such a combination? Certainly not the Bachelors of the Park Club. Then to try to buck against the president of the State Senate. Even the "all powerful" boss of Somerset county, L. A. Thompson, couldn't down Senator Reed, so what could be hoped for the poor little Bachelors of the Park Club.

Saturday night the deciding match between the Bachelors and Benedicts was rolled on the Park Club alleys. Everybody says it was the pig that did it. At any rate the Benedicts completely wiped their opponents off of the score board and won by 86 pins. There wasn't a time when the reputation of the pig as a successful mascot seemed in danger.

The pig was a delightful little porker, loaned for the occasion by J. H. Howell. The excitement of the match was evidently too much for Master Piggy, for he never said a word. Steward Jones had him in a nice little wooden cage that he had hoisted over the score board and kept there during the game. There was some doubt as to which team the mascot belonged. There needn't have been any, however, for Mr. Howell bowled on the Benedict team, and he was not for turning such a valuable contribution to good luck over to his opponents.

Peter Matthews wasn't home, so Will McCutchen left his "Y" jersey at home, and appeared decked out in all the regalia of the marshal of the unmarried forces. Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy was a valued addition to that team. Young Arthur Peck rolled well as did several other of the Bachelors who were such from force of circumstances rather than preference.

As to the game, there isn't much to say about it. The Benedicts had everything all their own way and increased their lead as high as 128 pins. Then they gave up trying to do anything very remarkable. Councilman George T. Rogers made his mark at the windup with two strikes and eight, his final score being equal to that of that masterhand, Former Councilman J. C. Peck.

Last winter the Bachelors won the series in two straight matches. This year the Benedicts are victorious two out of three.

The individual scores follow:

Resolutions Against Roberts.

A special meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held yesterday afternoon after Sunday-school to unite with the other societies in the local union in passing resolutions to be sent to Congress requesting them not to recognize Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, as ineligible to his seat in Congress because of his disregard of the laws against polygamy.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION
THE DAILY PRESS PROVIDES IT.
SPARE MOMENTS MADE TO COUNT

THE DAILY PRESS has perfected arrangements with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, of Plainfield, whereby complete scholarships in each institution have been placed at its disposal These scholarships will be awarded to the persons securing the highest number of new subscribers to The Daily Press within the time prescribed and under the rules printed below. The scholarship in the Plainfield Business College will go to the person securing the highest number of subscribers, and the scholarship in the Gregg School of Stenography to the one securing the second highest number of new subscribers.

A consolation prize of a handsome-bound International Webster Dictionary, with complete reference index, will be given to the third highest standing contestant.

Read the following rules carefully, and then jump in and try to win:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with,

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

DEFY AMERICAN ARMS

Filipinos May Have to be Subdued by Force of Arms.

FOUR SHIPS FOR DEWEY.

Will Burn Iloilo Rather Than Surrender. Natives Attack Two U. S. Soldiers in the City's Harbor and One Will Die from Wounds. Derision Greeted the President's Proclamation.

Washington, Jan. 9.--The navy department has decided to send no less than four more vessels to Admiral Dewey, not including the Castine and the Helena, recently assigned to duty in Philippine waters. The vessels to be added to the great fleet at Manila are the gunboats Princeton, Yorktown and Bennington, and the supply ship Solace. Orders to carry the determination of the department into effect were sent by telegraph to the proper authorities.

Secretary Alger has issued an order changing the names of the military transports Mohawk, Mobile and Massachusetts. The Mohawk will hereafter be known as the Grant, in honor of General U. S. Grant; the Mobile as the Sherman, in honor of General William T. Sherman, and the Massachusetts as the Sheridan, in honor of General P. H. Sheridan. These vessels will carry the troops to the Philippines.

The war department has decided to send four regiments of regular infantry instead of three to Manila by the Suez route. In addition to the transports Sherman and Grant the department will put the transport Sheridan in condition for carrying troops from New York to Manila. Orders were issued directing the commanding general of the department of the lakes to send the Third infantry from Fort Snelling, Minnesota, to New York instead of to San Francisco for embarkation for the Philippines. The Fourth, Twelfth and Seventeenth regiments had already been designated to go by the Suez route. Each transport will carry one regiment and four companies of another regiment. The order of June 6 directing the commanding general of the department of the lakes to send six companies of the seventeenth infantry from Columbus Barracks, Ohio, to New York for embarkation, has been modified to provide for four companies instead of six. The remaining companies of the Seventeenth will go in the other two transports. The Grant will leave New York for Manila this month. She will carry the Fourth regiment and four companies of the Seventeenth.

Aguinaldo Talks Fight.

Manila, Jan. 9.--Aguinaldo has issued another most vigorous proclamation, addressed to his Filipino brethren, the foreign consuls and other foreigners, protesting against the intrusion of the Americans in the Philippines.

In his appeal Aguinaldo alleges that the verbal promises of the American authorities to him that the Philippines would have independence have been violated. He roundly denounces President McKinley's instructions to General Otis as against all ideas of right and justice, and calls upon the Filipinos not to desist for a moment in the struggle for liberty which they have so gloriously begun.

The proclamation of the Filipino leader has created considerable excitement here.

It is reported that the members of the so-called revolutionary reserves in Manila have been secretly ordered to immediately join the insurgent forces in the interior.

The First California volunteer regiment, which embarked on board the coast steamships Campania and Maritima on Tuesday, presumably for Iloilo, are still detained in Manila Bay.

General Otis attaches no importance to the manifesto. He says he feels confident that the opinion of the better classes of the Filipinos is not expressed in it, but as to whether the Filipino masses can be controlled and the Filipino army kept in check he does not know, although he hopes for a pacific outcome of the trouble.

Trouble at Iloilo.

Manila, Jan. 9.--Colonel Potter, the special emissary of General Otis between Manila and Iloilo, arrived to-day with dispatches from General Miller at Iloilo. The situation when he left there was practically unchanged.

The streets were barricaded, and it was reported that the principal buildings had been "kerosened," the insurgents having threatened to destroy the whole business section by fire at the first shot of bombardment. The banks were shipping their treasure to the United States transport Newport and other vessels. The family of the American vice consul had gone on board the Newport.

Colonel Potter reports that President McKinley's proclamation had to be typewritten aboard ship, as the printers on shore declined to do the work, and when the text of the proclamation was read to them ridiculed the notion that conciliation was possible.

Privates Harry Silvey and Frank Kirkpatrick of the Sixth United States artillery while guarding a water boat astern of the Newport were attacked by the natives of the crew. Private Silvey's skull was fractured fatally and Private Kirkpatrick fell overboard but escaped with a flesh wound.

Spalding Wants Freedom.

Chicago, Jan. 9.--Charles Warren Spalding, convict and ex-banker, is an applicant for official clemency before the state board of pardons, which will convene at Springfield on Tuesday. The petition filed in his behalf by his attorney, Ross C. Hall, declares that the former head of the Globe Savings Bank has already suffered sufficient punishment for his alleged crimes, and death will soon claim him unless he is again allowed the associations he once enjoyed.

Republicans Give Up South Dakota.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 9.--The legal contest over the governorship has been abandoned. This decision was reluctantly reached by the Republican leaders here on account of the expense involved in a contest.

HELD FOR THE CORCORAN MURDER.

Sister and Two Brothers of the Monahan Family Committed to Jail.

Scranton, Jan. 9.--Mary, Tom and John Monahan, sister and two brothers, were arrested on warrants issued by Alderman Donohue of Wilkesbarre and served by Sergeant Kline of that city for the murder of former Postmaster Michael Corcoran. Kline also had warrants for two others, named Clark and Langan, which he was unable to serve. The warrants were issued upon the evidence obtained by Detective Seidman on last Wednesday when he forced a confession from Dave Williams, one of the persons implicated. Williams's confession follows:

"I was standing in front of the hotel a little after one o'clock on the morning of the murder, when Tom Monahan, Langan and Clark came down the street. They told me Michael Corcoran had had a fit and wanted me to go into the house with them and help them. I consented. Tom Monahan led us around to the back door. He knocked at the door and somebody from the inside said: 'Tom, is that you?' He replied: 'Yes.' The door was opened by Mary Monahan. 'How is he?' asked Tom. 'He's fixed,' the woman replied.

We entered and Tom Monahan led us to the bedroom occupied by Mr. Corcoran. The door was open. Corcoran lay on the bed as if sound asleep. Tom took a revolver out of his hip pocket. When Mary saw this she exclaimed: 'No, Tom, don't kill him. I cannot stand that. I am sorrry for what I have done already.' Tom paid no attention to her, but walked up and placed the revolver near the sleeper's head and fired the shot. Mary ran out of the room. Monahan, Clark and Langan then went to work on the safe and after they had opened it took between eight hundred and twenty-two hundred dollars out. They offered me my share of the money, but I refused to take it and told them that I would never have killed Michael Corcoran.

"Mary Monahan then asked what kind of an excuse she would make for the affair. Tom went out into the back yard, and got a clothes line, which they tied around the man they had murdered. They then conjured up the scheme to loosely tie Mary Monahan for an excuse or blind. Tom then took the watch and also the ring from the murdered man's finger, after which he again rifled the safe and took the papers. He also found another watch in the safe and took that. In the stand drawer was another watch and $15, which Mary said belonged to her so they did not disturb it. They then told her not to say a word or get loose until they got away. The gang then threatened me and said they would kill me on sight if I ever told what I knew."

Senator Morrill's Successor.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 9.--Benjamin F. Fifield, whom Governor Smith has appointed to succeed the late Justin S. Morrill in the United States Senate, represented Montpelier in the legislature of 1880 and proved a strong and influential member. This is about the extent of his participation in politics, though he was a delegate to the national convention of his party and served as United States district attorney from 1867 until 1880. In 1883 he was elected president of the State Bar Association. His principal work has been railroad and corporation cases, and as counsel for the Central Vermont Railroad since 1865 he has been engaged in some of the most important of the corporation litigation in New England.

It is understood here that Mr. Fifield will not serve for a longer period and will not stand for an election when the state legislature meets.

Former Governor Dillingham will probably be elected senator by that body. There were four candidates urged for the vacancy, and Governor Smith, rather than offend any faction, went outside to make his choice and then left the final selection to the legislature.

Quay's Case is Argued.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.--The Quay conspiracy case was called before the state supreme court Saturday. Ex-District Attorney Graham, who has been retained by Mr. Rothermel, the recently elected district attorney, as special counsel in the case, presented a motion asking the dismissal of the petition for the writ of certiorari on the ground of insufficiency of facts in the averments of the petitioners and want of jurisdiction of the supreme court.

Chief Justice Sterret, who presided with the full court of seven justices, informed Mr. Graham that his motion would be considered after argument had been heard on the petition. A decision is expected to-day.

Dawson Starving Men.

Dawson, Jan. 9.--With all her gold Dawson to-day contains a larger percentage of miserable men than any other place in existence. Hundreds nightly throng the saloons for shelter. They have neither food nor money nor employment. A movement is on foot, started by United States Consul McCook, to appeal to Congress for aid for invalid and indigent citizens of the United States now here.

Large numbers of persons suffering from want of the necessaries of life appeal almost daily to him as well as to the Dominion authorities.

The Philadelphia Exposition.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.--The directors of the Philadelphia Exposition Association have elected P. A. B. Widener president and chosen Dr. W. P. Wilson to be director general of the exposition, which it was decided should be opened about September 15 next and close about November 10.

The national government has appropriated three hundred thousand dollars for the exposition, contingent upon an equal amount being raised through other sources.

A Kansas Man Sues Himself.

Fort Scott, Kan., Jan. 9.--David Jennings, county treasurer of Labette county, Saturday brought suit against himself to prevent the collection of a special tax against his business property at Oswego, and upon his petition the district court granted him an injunction restraining him from levying against his own property for the collection of the tax. He alleges in his petition that he made a formal tender of a certain amount of money to himself and refused to accept it.

MEDAL FOR ROOSEVELT

Alger Says if He files Evidence to Entitle it One will be Given.

IS NOT LIKELY TO COMPLY.

Secretary Says the Colonel Must Show More Than Duty Done to Get the Distinction. Believes Gen. Wood Was at the Bottom of the Round Robin Affair Rather Than Roosevelt.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9.--"I shall be delighted to reward Colonel Roosevelt for the bravery he displayed at San Juan to any extent in my power. He will be awarded a medal of honor, provided he files evidence with the department showing that he performed an extraordinary act of heroism, as required by the army regulations."

This statement was made by Secretary of War Alger.

By his repetition of the statement that he would be delighted to see Governor Roosevelt receive a medal or any other honor, the secretary manifestly desired it to be understood that he had only the most friendly feelings for Col. Roosevelt.

"Of course," he continued, "a medal of honor is a much higher reward than a brevet, and it can only be obtained by a conspicuous act of bravery, voluntarily performed, and not in the line of duty.

"In charging up San Juan Hill Colonel Roosevelt was carrrying out the orders of his superior officer. If he were to be rewarded with a medal it would be necessary to reward in like manner every officer and man who participated in that charge, and carrying out the same principle, it would only be just to award a medal to every officer and man who did his duty in the campaign before Santiago.

"Now, as a matter of fact, a medal is only given under the rules and regulations of the department for conspicuous deeds in gallantry, such as the rescue of a comrade under a galling fire, or the recovery of colors in the possession of the enemy by a man who acted on his own responsibility.

"I am proud of Colonel Roosevelt's work at Santiago; he made a gallant record and was promoted to a colonelcy to succeed Colonel Wood. If he can produce any evidence showing that he is entitled to a medal of honor I assure you I shall be delighted to award it to him."

A close friend of Secretary Alger, who is aware of the feelings that official has for Colonel Roosevelt, says that the secretary bears no ill will to the New York governor as a result of the "round robin" petition circulated at Santiago.

"The secretary was provoked about the 'robin,' he said, "not especially against Roosevelt, but against all the officers who signed that document, and when General Shafter was at the war department he spoke to him about it, deeply regretting its preparation and submission, because of the distress which it created in this country.

"The secretary has an idea that General Wood more than Colonel Roosevelt was at the bottom of the affair, and he harbors no resentment for the colonel of the Rough Riders."

Railroad Agent Killed.

Easton, Pa., Jan. 9.--The murderer of Night Operator H. H. Wurster of Bingen, a small station on the North Penn branch of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, seven miles below Bethlehem, is in jail here and has confessed.

Wurster was murdered at his post at about 12.45 Saturday morning. The discovery of the murder was made at about three o'clock. Llewellyn Stout, a youth of 17, living near by, killed Wurster. Wurster was 24 years old and leaves a widow and a child. He was the night station agent and had charge of the money drawer, ticket office and express company's office. The office was rifled of $15.

City of Pullman to be Sold.

Chicago, Jan. 9.--The Pullman Palace Car Company is going out of the business of conducting a model town. The model city that was George M. Pullman's pride will no longer figure as an asset of the company. This is the result of the proceedings instituted by Attorney General Moloney in 1894 to compel the company to do only the business authorized by its charter, the manufacturing of railroad cars.

The suit was one of the incidents of the big strike of 1894.

Pullman was the realization of the late George M. Pullman's dream of a model community. The population of Pullman is 12,000.

Irving Not to Quit the Stage.

New York, Jan. 9.--The World publishes a cablegram from Henry Irving in which he says: "I shall begin work again at Easter and with my friend Ellen Terry look forward with delight to meeting our American friends and cousins this fall. I am quite well again and only resting."

This statement finally disposes of the rumors that Sir Henry contemplated retiring and that he had dissolved his partnership with Ellen Terry.

New Jersey Lawyer Accused.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 9.--Lawyer Frank M. McDermott, in compliance with a rule granted by Judge Depue, will have to show cause before the supreme court at the February term why he should not be disbarred for unprofessional conduct.

Among those accusing the lawyer are Frederick F. Gould, James E. Hewell, Thomas N. McCartner, Jr., and Alfred Depue, of the Essex Bar Association and Mrs. Annie Dowd.

Imprisoned for Surrendering Ponce.

Madrid, Jan. 9.--General San Martin, formerly military commander at Ponce, Porto Rico, who surrendered that place to the Americans without orders, has been condemned by a court-martial upon charges of cowardice and sentenced to imprisonment at Ceuta for life.

A SOCIETY GIRL WHO POSES.

How Miss Bradley of Washington Became a Professional Model.

Miss Kate Mickles Bradley, daughter of the late Col. George W. Bradley, U. S. A., has become a professional model, and her adoption of this rather unusual vocation has come about in a most natural way, and makes a pretty story.

A few months ago Miss Bradley and her mother returned to their home after eight years' absence in the West. At the time of her departure Miss Bradley was an almost helpless invalid, but during her sojourn West she seemed to have been touched by a fairy's wand and transformed into a perfection of physical vigor and grace.

Miss Bradley moves in Washington's most exclusive army and social circles, and her unique and beautiful "song pantomines," in which she illustrated melodies by means of gestures, have been the feature of many entertainments given by the smart set during the season just closed.

While giving these prose poems she wore an aesthetic gown with Greek effects, the bodice low and the arms bare, and her dark hair caught in a classic knot at the back of her shapely head.

Mr. Lucien Powell, the artist, was present on one of these occasions, when he was so impressed with the beauty of her work that he gave her a letter of introduction to Mr. Jerome Uhl, and another to Mr. Richard Brooke. Mr. Brooke, in turn, sent her with a letter to the Art League, where she was immediately accepted, and began her experience as a model by posing for the head and shoulders before the portrait class of the league. She then posed for Mr. Uhl's painting, "A Morning Call," which was intended for the Cosmos exhibition, but was reported by the jury on selection as being too large.

The Bradley home is exquisitely artistic in its appointments, and numbers among its attractions a small but complete conservatory, Mrs. Bradley being as devoted to her flowers as her gifted young daughter is to her art.--Washington Times.

SHE GETS PHOTOGRAPHS.

A New Vocation which a Woman Pursues on the Fringe of Society.

The craze for illustration in the weeklies and monthlies and recreation and fashion journals of the day has created a new occupation, that of the photograph getter. The photograph getter accumulates a collection of rare likenesses and rents them out at so much a head, to be used for illustrating articles. People who are known to be approachable are not worth so much in the field as those who are suspected of objecting to notoriety. The pictures of conspicuous society women who are frequently heard to declare that they would not give their photographs to anybody for publication are rated at $5, or perhaps as high as $7. Those of women whose features have appeared once or twice in proximity to type bring only $2.50, but all have a value. Only pictures of professionals are valueless to the photograph getter. They are a drug in the market, no matter how fair of form and feature or how unique or artistic. The fact that the subjects go to the photographer on business and not for diversion spoils the pictures for the photograph getter.

The photograph getter, whether gently born or not, old or young, fair or homely, must be a diplomatist of no mean pretensions in order to succeed at her task. It is also essential that she should be if not actually in the swim at least so close on the verge thereof that the little eddying currents reach her and she obtains more than a superficial idea of what is going on in mid-stream.--New York Sun.

BASE INGRATITUDE.

The Redbirds Assaulted the Saver of their Nest.

I got into a row with a pair of cardinals one morning, says Maurice Thompson, in the Atlantic Monthly, the whole proceeding on their part showing shameless ingratitude. Hearing some bluejays making a great noise in a wild plum thicket not far from the tent, I took up my bow and went to see what was the matter for such a hubbub. A mob of jays had surrounded a little hawk, which I soon discovered in the middle of a plum tree, where he sat quite still, evidently afraid. He saw me, however, and made a dash to break the line of his enemies; but he could not go far, they worried him so. I ran forward under cover of some low foliage, presently reaching a point from which I could shoot at short range, and brought him down. Now the jays turned tail and flew away. But it had chanced that I shot from very close beside a cardinal's nest; indeed, my right elbow jostled it at the recoil of the bow. Then came trouble. Both redbirds assaulted me, pouncing at me with vicious beak-snappings, almost striking me in the face. They seemed not to account it anything that I had slain the marauder who would have made a meal upon one of them or their tender nestlings. Such is avian gratitude.

GIMM WINS THE 24-HOUR RACE.

Pittsburg Boy Captures the $1,000 Purse by a Few Feet.

New York, Jan. 9.--At no bicycle race ever held in Madison Square Garden has there been a finish more thrilling than that of the twenty-four hour contest that ended there a few seconds after ten o'clock Saturday night.

During the last minute of the long and trying ride four men, who had been pedaling about without rest since Friday night, rode like fresh sprinters, each as if life was at stake, while seven thousand persons stood on their chairs and yelled steadily

The race was won by Louis Gimm of Pittsburg, by half the length of a wheel, while only a few inches separated the second and third men, Pierce and Turville. Frederick, the fourth man, was a length behind Turville. Four hundred and fifty miles were covered.

The race, which was the first of the kind ever held in this country, was remarkable for the fact of there being five men from which to pick the winner when the last mile was begun, but more remarkable for the furious finish of the last minute. At one minute before the time expired a bell was sounded. Pierce who had been riding second in the single file, then circling the track, immediately jumped, and, like a flash, gained a lead of thirty or forty yards. The other three followed, and all four rode like demons from that time until the end. Pierce held his lead for three laps, but he had jumped too soon and "killed himself," and in the last lap of the big race he was overhauled and beaten out by a few feet.

The reason for the hard struggle of the men was the scale of the prize list. It meant a difference of hundreds of dollars to have second place instead of first. The first prize was $1,000 and the second $400. There were eight prizes. The other three winners, Julius, Hale and Miller, were removed from the track at 9.45 o'clock to give the others a chance.

Bryan Attacks Expansions.

Chicago, Jan. 9.--The third annual banquet of the Andrew Jackson League was held at the Tremont house Saturday night, and on this occasion, as on the two former, Wiliam J. Bryan was the guest of honor. In the course of his speech Mr. Bryan sad:

"The gold Democrats had a chance to crush out the trusts during Mr. Cleveland's administraton, but they did not do it. The gold Republicans are having their opportunity now, but they are not improving it. The trusts will fall when the gold standard is overthrown, and not until then. The gold standard means falling prices, and falling prices will create trusts more rapidly than any gold standard party can destroy them.

"The Chicago platform was good when it was adopted; it grows better with age; it was strong in 1896; it is stronger now.

"But enough of old issues. What of the new questions? Our party cannot ignore the issues raised by the war. It must speak out against militarism now or forever hold its peace. A large standing army is not only an expense to the people, but it is a menace to the nation, and the Democratic party will be a unit in opposing it.

"A word in regard to imperialism. Those who advocate the annexation of the Philippines call themselves expansionists, but they are really imperialists. The word expansion would describe the acquisition of terrritory to be populated by homogeneous people, and to be carved into states like those now in existence. An empire suggests variety in race and diversity in government. The imperialists do not desire to clothe the Filipinos with all the rights and privileges of American citizens; they want to exercise sovereignty over an alien race, and they expect to rule the new subjects upon a theory entirely at variance with constitutional government. Victoria is queen of Great Britain and empress of India; shall we change the title of our executive and call him the president of the United States and emperor of the Philippines?"

City Treasurer Murdered.

Newcastle, Jan. 9.--John Elevins, city treasurer of Newcastle, was found at mightnight Saturday in his office, unconscious and dying. His head had been beaten to a jelly, the safe broken open and perhaps $200 stolen.

Blevins went to the tailor's for a new suit of clothes. The garments were not ready and he went to his office, which is over the jail, to wait until the tailor had finished.

When at midnight he had not returned home, his son went to his office. He found his father lying on the floor unconscious, in a pool of blood. He died soon afterward.

The robbers and murderers had left no clue to their identity. The prisoners in the jail said they heard a sound as of something falling about nine o'clock, and that was about the time Blevins went to his office.

Germany and Our Meats.

Berlin Jan. 9.--The terms of the Posadowsky meat bill provide for a double inspection of cattle and swine killed in Germany one before and the other after slaughtering; on the other hand the government absolutely refused to yield to the Agrarian's demand to make the bill such a measure as would practically prohibit importation.

American products will be fairly examined once at the custom house and when they are pronounced wholesome will receive the imperial stamp enabling them to circulate throughout the country, thus dispensing with the present irksome and expensive system of repeated examinations by various local authorities.

Where the Grip Started.

Washington, Jan. 9.--The observations made by the Marine Hospital service and the reports received by Surgeon General Wyman show that the prevailing influenza or grip, which is epidemic in many cities and towns throughout the East and South, started in Turkey and Asia Minor about the middle of November, and spread westward, following the established lines of transatlantic travel.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

Senate Will Discuss Expansion Policy on Tuesday.

CROKER STIRS SILVER MEN

The War Investigation Committee Will Probe the Embalmed Beef Scandal, Col. Wood Defends the Packers and Says Any Meat Would Spoil in the Cuban Climate Unless Properly Cared.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9.--Many witnesses are to be examined this week by the war investigating commission regarding the beef supply of the army during the war with Spain The commission has granted the request of General Eagan commissary general of subsistence, that he be allowed to appear again to reply to the statements of General Miles about the quality of the beef furnished the troops in Porto Rico. Telegrams have been sent to the principal packing firms of the country extending permission to them to furnish witnesses, and already representatives of several contracting firms have arrived in Washington. The commission has informed Swift & Co. that their witnesses will be heard and it is said that some interesting testimony will be offered. It is reported that Swift & Co. are prepared to show that a government inspector inspected all the beef supplied the army, both before and after killing and dressing. Inspector Defoe, who, it is said represented the government, has been asked to appear before the commission and is expected this week.

General Eagan has made public the statement of Lieutenant Colonel O. E. Wood, chief commissary of the Seventh Army Corps testifying to the good quality of the beef furnished the men and in refutation of General Miles's charge that the beef was embalmed. Colonel Wood's letter is dated at Camp Columbia, Havana, December 31, and includes an extract from a report that he made to Major General Fitshugh Lee on the same subject. In this report Colonel Wood said:

"The meat supplied by Armour & Co. is excellent in quality, but after delivery from a refrigerator car must be handled properly and without any delay. Whenever a well founded complaint has reached me, I have at once given such directions that it has been corrected, except in such cases where regimental boards have taken the matter in their own hands in defence of army custom, and condemned the entire issue of beef, when a careful and judicious trimming away of the tainted parts would have left the bulk of the meat sweet and good, thus causing a useless waste of the most desirable part of the soldiers' ration."

Anti-Expansionists in the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 9.--Mason, Republican of Illinois, Saturday offered the following, which went over until Tuesday next, when he will address the Senate upon it:

"Whereas, All just powers of government are derived from the consent of the governed, therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the Senate of the United States, That the government of the United States of America will not attempt to govern the people of any other country in the world without the consent of the people themselves, or subject them by force to our domination against their will."

The presentation in the Senate of a memorial from a Confederate post in Florida opposing the proposition to pension Confederate soldiers was made the text of some remarks by Mr. Allen Populist of Nebraska, who said:

"I do not suppose there ever was a serious purpose on the part of the senator from North Carolina, Mr. Butler, who offered the amendment to pension Confederate soldiers. I think that the author of that proposed amendment was simply, like the president of the United States carried away by enthusiasm. I think that altogether too much notice is being taken of it. It would be a great injustice to the rank and file of Confederate soldiers to say that they would take seriously a proposition to receive pensions from the United States government after they have cared for themselves over a third of a century and for their cemeteries and their dead. It strikes me very forcibly that this whole thing can be closed by saying that both the president of the United States in his enthusiasm, and the author of the proposed amendment in his enthusiasm, were for the time carried away, and it would be well now to close the whole incident with the happy thought and recollection that all sectionalism has been closed by the late Spanish war."

Dick Croker's Manifesto.

Washington, Jan. 9.--Mr. Richard Croker has stirred up a hornet's nest among the Democrats in Congress. His emphatic declarations in support of the policy of expansion and against the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, has aroused the "aunties" and the Bryanites to a realization of the fact that Tammany's influence will be exerted against an anti-expansion policy and against free silver.

It has tended to widen still further the breach between the eastern Democrats and those of the West and South. Many of the leading men in Mr. Bryan's following assume to make light of the matter, but the bitterness of their comments shows they realize that Mr. Croker has struck a severe blow at their faction by declaring for expansion, for a large army and navy and against the doctrine of free coinage.

Havana, Jan. 9.--Two hundred Spanish officers and soldiers are in the Presidio penitentiary serving sentences imposed upon them for military offenses.

The Spanish authorities, instead of taking them to Spain to serve out their terms, left them, among five hundred other convicts. As it is no part of the business of the American authorities to punish Spanish military prisoners whose common offense has been disrespect to officers, all will probably be released after trial by a board of officers which will be appointed to inquire into the cases.

A DINNER IN HONOR OF SAMPSON.

The Admiral and Gov. Roosevelt both for a Greater Navy.

New York, Jan. 9.--The Colonial Club gave a dinner to Admiral Sampson on Saturday evening. The admiral received a very enthusiastic greeting and when he arose to speak he was roundly cheered. Enthusiasm reached a high pitch as the events of the evening developed and each one of the distinguished naval heroes was honored by a special ovation. The arrival of Governor Roosevelt late in the evening was the signal for a tempestuous outbreak of good feeling.

In responding to the toast, "Our Guest," Admiral Sampson said that the winning of a victory like any other accomplishment, was a matter of business. It had to be done by hard work, not sentiment. To win a victory one must have the force to do it. Battles were not won by excessive bravery, though bravery was an essential factor.

It was necessary in winning a victory to bring to bear a force and power that exceeded that of the enemy. Without such a superior force any effort of courage and of arms would be extremely hazardous. As a nation we should not give up as completed the work that has been undertaken. We should go still further in the direction of progress. It behooved the country to prepare itself for the future contingencies which were visible even at this time.

Governor Roosevelt said he could hardly express the satisfaction it gave him to think that he had been connected even in a small way with a navy which has reflected such great and undying fame upon the nation.

He hoped that the people would not be content to dine and applaud the naval heroes, but would see that their legislators did not neglect the work of continuing to build up and strengthen the navy. No matter how patriotic the naval heroes were, their efforts would go for naught without the practical results of careful preparation in giving them the very best fighting machines obtainable.

All honor to the men whose foresight and public spirited efforts within the past fifteen years had helped to build up the American navy. Credit in this respect was due to men of both parties. Ships built under Republican and Democratic administrations took part in the recent war. It should be remembered that it took many years to build a modern warship, consequently those who wanted to keep up the high standard of our navy must be constantly on the alert and constantly at work. If our sailors are going to do their best they must have the best ships and enough of them.

"I have been myself an eye witness to the deplorable results of a struggle of brave men with inferior arms against an enemy with the best of modern implements," said Governor Roosevelt. "Our artillery at Santiago was practically at the mercy of the Spanish forces for the reason that the Spaniards were provided with smokeless powder, while our men had the old fashioned black powder. Every puff of smoke from that black powder drew the immediate fire of the Spaniards and made our artillery helpless targets for an enemy whose exact whereabouts could not be located.

"We need to have an effective system of coast fortifications," said Governor Roosevelt in conclusion. "We need ample means of protection from hostile attack, but more than anything else we need a first class navy, a force that is able to go out and find the enemy and smash it on sight."

Professional Courtesies to Corbett.

New York, Jan. 9.--McCoy has consented to allow ex-Champion Corbett to witness the fight on Tuesday. Tom O'Rourke, manager of the Lenox A. C., has been written to by the Kid. The latter says that after mature deliberation he has decided to withdraw his request that Corbett be barred from witnessing the fight. McCoy said:

"Corbett is in the same business as myself, and I do not think it the proper spirit to be at odds with him. My plan is to do good for evil. All feelings that have existed against Corbett in the McCoy camp are forever dead.

There is no doubt that McCoy will enter the ring on next Tuesday night fit to fight the battle of his life. While he confidently expects to beat Sharkey within twenty rounds, this fact has not stood in the way of hard training he has indulged in.

Dewey's a Republican.

New York, Jan. 9.--The Associated Press says:

Owing to the persistent use of Admiral Dewey's name as a possible Democratic candidate for president in 1900, and the doubt which has arisen as to his political belief, an inquiry has been instituted in Montpelier, the Vermont home of the naval hero.

Charles Dewey, president of the National Life Insurance Campany, said his brother never had voted since he entered the navy in 1854.

"I have always considered," said Mr. Dewey, "that George was a Republican, but not a politician in any sense of the word. I believe he is a Republican, the same as his brothers and his father, and he would, naturally, inherit the political principles of his father's family."

Three Killed in Pittsburg Fire.

Pittsburg, Jan. 9.--A fire which broke out in the Hotel Richelieu at 3.15 Sunday morning resulted in a property loss of only about $15,000, but three lives were sacrificed and five people were badly hurt. The dead are:

Mrs. Katherine Boyle of Pittsburg, Penn.

Amos S. Landis of Grapeville, Penn.

George A. Walters of Camden, N. J.

The three victims were guests of the hotel, and all were suffocated by the dense smoke.

Marlborough Coming to Front.

London, Jan. 9.--The Duke of Marlborough's appointment as paymaster general merely gives him a status in the government and a starting point for further and more important preferment.

The paymaster generalship is purely an honorary office without pay or specific duties.

AN INTELLIGENT HORSE.

The Sorrel Took a Motherly Care of All the Other Horses.

"On Sunday," says the Parsons (Kan.) Eclipse, "a mover in a prairie schooner passed through this city, going west. He had a small drove of mules and several horses, all loose, following the wagon, and among them was a beautiful sorrel horse, with bridle and saddle on, but no rider. People on the streets noticed that the sorrel seemed to be overseeing the herd and would round them up occasionally. As the caravan reached Central avenue the sorrel ran ahead and stood in the middle of the street, looking up and down, as if watching for danger. After satisfying himself that the way was clear he rounded up the herd and the caravan started again. Having reached the 'Katy' crossing, the animal again went ahead and, standing in the center of the tracks, looked intently each way. When the herd had partially crossed the track he suddenly pricked up his ears and, hurrying to the rear, he rushed the herd across on the run. A train was coming from the south and passed shortly after he had got safely over. He hurried to the next track, which branches off several rods from the main line, and seeing a train coming from the opposite direction, rounded up his herd and waited until it passed. It was a most remarkable performance, witnessed by a large number of people on the streets. The horse was evidently a high bred animal, built like a racer, with small ears and very intelligent head. During all this time the mover did not get out of his wagon, but left the management of the whole matter to the horse."

VITALITY OF THE LIFE PLANT.

Almost Impossible to Distroy It—Has Grown When Pressed and Laid Away.

There is a creeping moss found in the islands of Jamaica, Barbadoes and other parts of the West Indies, known as the life plant. Its power of vitality is beyond that of any other member of the vegetable kingdom. It is absolutely indestructible by any means except immersion in boiling water or the application of a red-hot iron. It may be cut up and divided in any manner, and the smallest shreds will throw out roots, grow and form buds. The leaves of this extraordinary plant have been suspended in the air of a dry room, they have been placed in a close air-tight box, without moisture of any sort, and still they grow. Even when pressed and packed away in a botanist's herbarium it has been known to grow. Evergreen leaves sometimes remain on the tree for several years; for instance, in the Scotch pine, three or four years; the spruce and silver fir, six or seven years; the yew, eight; Abies pinsapo, sixteen or seventeen.

Politeness Its Own Reward.

A lawyer whose office was on one of the upper floors of a tall building was about to enter the elevator one morning, but stepped back in order to let a lady who seemed to be in a hurry precede him, says the Youth's Companion

The "conductor," it appeared, had been waiting for just one more passenger to complete his load, and when the lady stepped inside he shut the door and the elevator shot upward.

"Politeness," muttered the lawyer, "is not always its own reward."

A few minutes later, however, ascending by another "lift," he passed that load of passengers, stuck half way between floors—where they remained half an hour—by some accident to the machinery.

"I take it back," he muttered, in the same tone as before. "Politeness is its own reward!"

Hopeless Task.

"What strange methods some men adopt to get wives," she remarked as she looked up from the newspaper which she had quietly appropriated as hers by right because she was first at the breakfast table.

"What's happened now?" he asked.

"Why, a New York widower has made application for one at the barge office where immigrants land," she explained. "He says he wants a woman who is thoroughly respectable, of kindly disposition, fairly good-looking, good to children, obedient——"

"Hold on!" he interrupted. "What's that last?"

"Obedient."

"He might as well give up."—Chicago Post.

Thorough Business Proposition.

The opportunity which The Daily Press has offered to two young men or women of progressive spirit to become possessed of a splendid business education, through their best efforts in securing subscribers for the paper, has attracted widespread attention.

The value of the prizes offered are evident at a glance. Both the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, in which institutions the winners of the first and second prizes will be entitled to enter for complete instruction in the various studies necessary to become competent to go out in the world to earn a livelihood, are standards in their line.

There are scores of young persons who are anxious to become fitted for a business life by perfecting themselves in such studies as bookkeeping, stenography, commercial law, spelling, writing, etc., but who are unfortunately situated in the world so that finances are a bar to their aspirations. The contest which The Daily Press has inaugurated opens the field of such an education to the two who evidence the greatest hustling ability in this proposition of securing new subscribers. The work which the contest involves is typically business. The young persons who enter it—and already there are a number who have announced their intention of doing so and have started towards the successful point by turning in a number of new subscribers—will find that competition will be strong, and that it will be a case of the survival of the fittest.

Never before have Plainfield young people been granted the chance of working in a contest where such practical and valuable prizes are the goal, and the interest evinced in it in the brief interval since the announcement Saturday presages a strong fight among the contestants.

A Senatorial Aspirant.

We acknowledge the receipt of an epistle from Mr. Benjamin S. Gratz, of Jobstown, N. J. It seems that this gentleman has a strange buzzing in his head which leads him to aspire to be the next United States Senator from New Jersey. He sets forth his political principles and makes an appeal "to the Honorable, the Senate and the Members of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey" to choose him as the successor of Senator Smith. We presume that in favoring us with a copy of his appeal the Jobstown statesman proposes to overcome with his arguments and enlist our help in prevailing upon the members of the Legislature to consider his claim in a favorable light.

It is with profound regret that we convey to him the answer that we cannot see our way clear to do it. It would be treason of the highest degree for us to attempt to deprive Mr. John Kean of the coveted honor at this late day. Mr. Kean is our neighbor and whatever glory he attains from the honor of representing the State in the highest legislative body will be ours in part, too.

It is obvious that the aspirations of Gratz have been nurtured too quietly. He should have sprung his canvass somewhat earlier to have succeeded. Still there are other selections of United States to be made, and we advice the Jobstown man to bottle up whatever hopes he has left after Mr. Kean is made Senator by the august Assemblyman and Senators of the State, and trim his sails so as to be on hand and well-prepared for the election of 1900 when New Jersey's other National representative, Senator Sewell, will have completed his term and necessitated the election of a successor.

SCHOOL FOR MUSCULAR CHRISTIANITY.

St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, of Jersey City, is progressive under the leadership of Rev. Edward L. Stoddard. Connected with the church is an auxiliary known as the Young People's Institute. A gymnasium is maintained by the institute, and recently a department of boxing has been added to the gym.

Meanwhile we shall ever hold in fond remembrance the name of Benjamin S. Gratz, of Jobstown.

In his message to the New York Legislature Governor Roosevelt favors gradual extension of suffrage to women. Col. Roosevelt is a married man and doubtless appreciates the good part that women may take in governmental affairs by direct vote. Governor-elect Voorhees, the confirmed bachelor that he is, cannot be expected to view the equal suffrage question with the same degree of confidence that his brother-Governor does. If the advocates of woman's suffrage would make a masterstroke they should see to it that Voorhees is conquered by Cupid during his reign. Surely, there are enough handsome and attractive girls in New Jersey to furnish the first essentials of such an undertaking.

As a rule, Democrats in Congress decline to discuss for publication the statement against silver and in favor of expansion, made by Richard Croker, further than to say that they accept Mr. Croker's assertion that the statement was made as his individual opinion; and that as such it is worth no more than the opinion of any other individual Democrat of equal prominence. Privately, a number of them have expressed the opinion that so far as anything he can accomplished by going to the Democratic National Convention, is concerned, Mr. Croker might just as well stay at home.

The Seventh Congressional district, which contains the city of Newark, and is one of the most populous districts in the whole country, has but one Republican paper, and not a Democratic one. Now here is a chance for some millionare who has got more money than he knows what to do with, and isn't particular about how much he loses, of satisfying his spendthrift tendencies by starting a party paper. And there is a whole lot of fun running a paper when the expense part of it is merely incidental.

We have a population of 80,000,000 of people, the country teems with young men full of life, hope and ambition. Why not give these young men a chance to develop our newly acquired possessions and build up a country rivalling in grandeur and patriotism our own United States?—One of Richard Croker's arguments for acquisition of the Phillipines.

All of which sounds beautiful. But we do not think that very many "young men full of life, hope and ambition" will go to the far-off Phillipines to make use of their get-there to-it iveness. In fact, it is not necessary for any young man qualified as Sir Richard mentions to go any further than the city of New York to succeed.

State Road Commissioner Budd comes out in favor of trusts and urges farmers to combine like the eminent financiers of the commercial and mercantile world. If for nothing else, Mr. Budd's admonition is interesting because of its difference with the understanding of what the average agriculturist thinks about such matters.

The Legislature convenes tomorrow. It will be Republican in management, but indications point that the Democrats will be heard from in due time.

A $15,000,000 electric lighting trust has been organized in New Jersey. This proves beyond question that New Jersey is light-headed in their dealings with the trusts.

In these days of varied changes the weather prognosticator that looks wise and says nothing is one that is most respected in the community.

Senator Sewell expresses the hope that the Legislative session will be of short duration. The people echo the sentiment.

It was a Chicago man who said that the scarcity of religion in prison is probably due to the fact that it is free.

Cheaper gas! Give it to us quick.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

There can be no question about Charles A. Reed's qualifications for the presidency of the State Senate. He is a lawyer, is well up on parliamentary law and invariably as cool as an icicle and as self-possessed as the Reed who wields the gavel in Washington—New York Tribune.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A great improvement is noticed in the condition of the waiting rooms at the station since the attention of the police was directed to the number of loafers who make that place their headquarters at night. The gangs have now been broken up and the smoking room is comparatively deserted at night, except for the passengers who are waiting for trains. The day crowds still hang around, to be sure, but the officer when he makes his regular visits to the station always drives them away.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion build up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Guaranteed.

JOTTINGS OF THE DAY.

ENTERPRISINGLY GATHERED AND CONCISELY TOLD BY REPORTERS.

Newsy Notes of More or Less Importance Bunched Together for the Ready Reference of Press Readers

—We are receiving Maine smelts every day, they are the finest. Rogers.

—White's store will hereafter not be open later than 7 o'clock every evening.

—Wm. Parker, the butler at Brookside Retreat, who underwent an operation at the hospital recently, was discharged Friday, cured.

—The police filed 150 complaints with the Street Commissioner Saturday against residents who had not cleaned their sidewalks.

—Frank Gotlack, of Scotch Plains, who had his arm amputated at the hospital last week, is doing well. He expects to go home next week.

—The Y. P. S. C. E., of Trinity Reformed church, will meet Wednesday evening after prayer meeting. No service this evening on account of union meeting.

—The first of the union meetings, under the auspices of the pastors, will be held this evening in the First Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

—In the account given in Saturday's Press of the death of the late Howard W. Corlies an error or two was made. The deceased was associated in business with his grandfather, J. Howard Wright. Mrs. J. Parker Maron is not a sister, as stated, but Mrs. Delancy is one of the three sisters who survive him. Mrs. Mason is a sister of Mrs. Corlies.

AT THE INAUGURATION.

be provided with handsome badges and canes, and will probably meet at Republican headquarters in the Dix building. From there they will march to the railroad station, headed by a brass band, and board the special train. In Trenton they will march to the Taylor Opera House, or to such point as may be assigned to them in the inaugural parade. It is expected that this delegation will be the guard of honor to Governor Voorhees in case he consents to participate in a parade, although the Freilinghuysen Lancers, of Newark, which organization is arranging to attend the inauguration, is endeavoring to secure that honor.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Abernethy, of West Seventh street, has been visiting friends in Jersey City.

Miss Brady is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, of Park avenue.

Miss Sheria, of Raritan, has accepted a position as stenographer with the firm of Murphy & Glatz.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

THE REALM OF WOMAN.

Odds and End Ends of Timely and Varied Interest.

Paper vests can be bought now in place of chamois skin. They cost a quarter as much as the chamois, are equally warm, and less bulky.

There is a hygenic way of dancing as well as of doing other things. A dancing teacher says that to make a good dancer it is necessary to breathe properly. No one will dance gracefully who does not throw out the chest and take long, deep breaths and a long step.

There is a wealthy, stylish, pretty woman living at one of the big New York residence hotels who has worn a hoop almost ever since she can remember. She has them made for her now, small ones, and no one would imagine she wore them, but they are there just the same. She is a plump woman, and her idea is that she is a little more satisfactorily and modestly dressed with the crinoline.

A woman physician says she believes that the first and most important step in education should be a knowledge of fundamental physiological laws, an ignorance and disregard of which bring about conditions of body which hinder or prevent entirely a perfect performance of the duties of life or an enjoyment of its pleasures. Rules for health and self-preservation are given out by workers in many lines of sociological work among the poor. Such physiology, the doctor believes, should be taught thoroughly—not the number of bones in the human body, but a general knowledge of the laws by which it is governed.

The New York Cooking School was founded in 1876 and incorporated two years later. In 1887 the school had only one teacher. The last report (1897) shows ten teachers and one superintendent (Miss Huntington). The rooms in the United Charity building are well suited to the work and the furnishings are neat and attractive. According to the report the courses of lessons include classes from thirty-two different churches, missions, schools, or clubs, besides two classes in Brooklyn, three for hospital nurses and several classes for outsiders. The school has sent out teachers to the South, where successful classes have been established among the negroes. Practice classes for women in plain and fancy cooking, children's classes in invalids' cooking are special features of the work. Visitors are welcome to the practice classes every Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A Handsome Bodice.

A dainty blouse, to be made entirely in chiffon, mounted over a silk or satin foundation; or the bodice part made in plain or fancy silk, or whatever material is employed for skirt, with sleeves and yoke of chiffon, the frills being of lace. Pattern is arranged with a lining foundation, the darts in which stitch up, then cover front with the full material front, which joins in plain with shoulder, armhole, and under-arm seams, but gather across figure also at waist to lining size, the fronts hooking invisably down centre, and on either side of fastening is gathered a lace frill. The foundation yoke is to be cut in chiffon, plain silk or satin, and covered with the full yoke of chiffon, which is gathered along lower edge back and front, also over shoulders. The sleeve is arranged over a lining foundation, which can be cut in chiffon or silk. The full sleeve is twice folded down centre to form two tucks, which run along and draw up to length of lining sleeve, to which the fullness could be caught invisibly here and there to retain it in position. Quantity of 42-inch chiffon, 3 yards; 22-inch foundation silk, 3 1-4 yards; lace, 6 yards.

Recipes for Custards.

Slice four or five bananas very thinly, lay them in a glass dish, and sprinkle them quickly with sugar, and a few drops of water. Make a custard by beating four eggs with three tablespoonfuls of castor sugar, and mixing them gradually with a pint of milk, which has been heated but not boiled. Put this mixture into a jug, stand the jug in a saucepan of boiling water over the fire, and stir continually the same way round until the custard thickens. Remove it from the fire, and continue to stir at intervals, until it is quite cold. It may then be flavoured as desired. In this case, a few drops of essence of almonds, and two or three tablespoonfuls of brandy, will be the best.

A NEW OCCUPATION.

Profitable Work For Bright and Original Women Only.

A place of uncommon interest to women is a signless, nameless, reserved-looking establishment on a crosstown block, where things never seen nor dreamed of in shops are sold and ordered and planned for weeks, even months, ahead. The woman who conducts it is not a house decorator, tapestry hanger or designer or furniture, but her province is to provide feminine contrivances and knickknacks.

"I make it a rule to have everything done in the best, most attractive way possible," said the proprietor; "but if I get hold of a piece of work that shows originality I write immediately to the sender, stating my demand for ideas and encouraging her to further effort. It is originality of design that I am on the lookout for, and I can get plenty of stereotyped, painstaking workers here to carry out suggestions. Any little entertaining concert that will give brightness and individuality to a room sells rapidly once it is introduced. Now those pickaninnies, the darky faces looking through the watermelon rind, a New Orleans girl does those, and they ring true. She sent six as a sample and I have ordered 200 more. They take first hand. It was her own idea having the frame just of the colored cardboard. The battered hat and ingenious face grinning from the pink rind is comical, and would light up any dreary corner.

"Any business to be successful nowadays must be inventive," went on the genius. "There must be constantly thought out new things to sell. Fashion was not so restless and fidgety some years ago as she is now, and people did not tire so readily of approved modes and combinations. Time was when in fancy work, if the pattern was pretty and executed neatly, the materials used of the best, and the article when finished had the stamp of prevailing fashion, it was a ready seller; but now a thing must not only be pretty or tasteful, but it must excite surprise and interest.

"I assure you that creative genius is as much prized and as much called and catered to in a comparatively simple business like mine (I rarely sell anything over $30 and the majority of knicknacks are less than $20) as in large meaning or aesthetic enterprises. The list of things that luxurious people surround themselves with to look at, to use, and to have because it is customery to have them, is probably as full and complete now as it ever can be, but the shapes, sizes, kind of materials employed and ways of employing them in the making of these etceteras provide an inexhaustible field for originality and one that repays effort."

Decorative art is too set and too large suggesting a term to apply to this special sphere, and "fancy work" is too trivial, but the creative genius coins annually an income well up in the thousands; and mistresses of households here in town, over in Boston, out in Chicago, and just across on Long Island, count her their main reliance in a score of matters, from a children's fancy ball or dancing party to practical spring and fall refurnishing and the selecting of favors for a birthday party or Christmas or New Year's celebration.—New York Sun.

SERVANTS IN GERMANY.

How Wages Compare With American Prices—The Tip System.

It is only within the past two years that there has been any intimation of a servant problem in Germany. Up to this time the market was so overcrowded that maids especially could not afford to be too fastidious in regard to the work required or the arrangements made for them. The stream of girls from the country has now been warned against coming into the cities by the police, and instead is turning toward the factories, while girls who were formerly content to be cooks now leave good places in order to hire out by the day as "ausulften," or helps, because of the greater liberty to be enjoyed in this way. Although these changes are felt, the difficulties here, in comparison with American conditions, are inconsiderable. The average cook or maid-of-all-work is content with a wage of $5 a month, while a housemaid usually receives from $3.75 to $4.50. A very experienced cook, "eine perfekte kochin," as she would probably dub herself, may draw $7.50 a month. Such wages are, however, comparatively rare.

Although wages are low, it is always expected that they will be supplemented by the fees and gifts. Tipping is carried to absurd lengths in Germany. If the streetcar conductor helps you on the train or changes a gold piece for you he expects 5 pfennings (1 1-4 cents) for his pains, and in return will touch his cap most respectfully to you and wish you good-day when you leave the car. It is also quite usual to give him the change from a fare if it does not amount to more than 5 pfennings. If a maid delivers a note at your door she expects at least 10 pfennings (2 1-2 cents), and generally receives more. Another opportunity for obtaining fees is given butlers and housemaids by the Berlin custom of locking the street doors and extinguishing the gas on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night. Tardy guests must then be lighted to the door and the servant who performs this office often makes several marks from an evening party.—New York Tribune.

Citizen—"Mr. Greatmann, I heard a curious debate the other evening. The subject was: 'Can a politician be a Christian?' What's your opinion?"

"Mr. Greatmann (local statesman)—"He kin, but he'll git licked."—New York Weekly.

Bayern.

München. Das Oberlandesgericht hat das Verkaufen gefärbter Rohwurst, wenn der Verkäufer den Käufer auf das Färben nicht aufmerksam macht, als strafbar erklärt, verschiedene Gerichtserkenntnisse haben außerdem das Färben von Hack- und Schabefleisch bestraft.

Aschaffenburg. Der Ausschuß der unterfränkischen Invaliditäts- und Altersversicherung hat dem unterfränkischen Verein für Errichtung eines Sanatoriums für unbemittelte Lungenkranke die Summe von 70,000 Mark auf zehn Jahre zu 2 Prozent vorgeschossen.

Griesbach. Innerhalb kurzer Zeit haben zwei große Brände die Umgegend in Schrecken versetzt. In Niederhofen ist vom Anwesen des Bauern Dambeck Stadel, Stallung, Getreideboden und Holzschuppen niedergebrannt. Das Wohnhaus wurde gerettet. Zwei Tage darauf ist Stadel und Stallung des Bauern Reiter in Würding ein Raub der Flammen geworden. In beiden Fällen wird Brandstiftung vermuthet. Man klagt über Zunahme der Unsicherheit auf dem Lande.

Hösbach. Der verheirathete Fuhrmann Adam Johann Heeg stürzte mit seinem Fuhrwerk Nachts von der Straße den Abhang hinab und wurde am anderen Morgen todt unter den Trümmern des Fuhrwerks aufgefunden.

Luhn. Neulich früh kam eine hiesige Bauersfrau mit der Hand in die Futterschneidemaschine, wobei ihr glücklicher Weise nur die Haut von der Hand abgeschürft wurde. Am Abend nun wollte ein Nachbar dieser Bäuerin seiner Tochter zeigen, wie der Unglücksfall sich wohl zugetragen habe, demonstrirte es aber so deutlich, daß ihm selbst die Maschine erfaßte; der Schlaumeier büßte dabei einen Daumen vollständig ein.

Memmingen. Die bei unserem benachbarten Grenzorte Egelsee durch das königliche Straßen- und Flußbauamt Kempten erbaute neue Brücke über die Iller wurde dem Verkehr übergeben. Die eigentliche Brücke ist in Eisen von der Nürnberger Maschinenbau-Aktiengesellschaft ausgeführt und überspannt bei einer Breite von sieben Metern einschließlich Fußwege mit einer Oeffnung von 62 Metern Stützweite die Iller, so das bayerische Ufer mit dem württembergischen verbindend. Wegen des regen Verkehrs zwischen Bayern und Württemberg an dieser Stelle entschloß sich unser Nachbarstaat zu einem entsprechenden Beitrag zum Brückenbau.

Passau. Domkapitular Johann Baptist Reiser ist nach längerer Krankheit, jedoch unerwartet, gestorben. Reiser war geboren zu Ingolstadt am 27. Juni 1828, stand sonach im 71. Lebensjahre. Es ist dies seit wenigen Tagen der dritte Todesfall im bischöflichen Domkapitel. Es sind die Domprobst- und zwei Domkapitularstellen erledigt.

Regensburg. Zu der Erbauung eines neuen Centralgefängnisses hier wurde im Osten vor der Stadt, in der Nähe des Garnisonlazareths, ein großer Grundkomplex angekauft und der Kauf bereits verbrieft.

Würzburg. Der Student der Medizin Jubjiro Higuzi aus Japan wurde von der hiesigen Strafkammer wegen drei Vergehen des Betrugs zu drei Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt. In München war er wegen ähnlicher Reate schon mit vier Monaten bestraft worden.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Kaiserslautern. Der 18jährige Lumpensammler Leithmann gerieth in einem Steinbruch bei Winnweiler unter herabfallendes Gestein und wurde erschlagen.

Ludwigshafen. Von dem neuen Lagerhaus am Luitpold-Hafen stürzte der Schlosserlehrling August Ott von Mannheim aus dem dritten Stockwerk und brach das Genick.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Hier sind auf 14 Bürgerausschußmitglieder 10 vom liberalen Zettel gewählt worden; 4 wurden von den vereinigten Demokraten und Sozialdemokraten gegen die rechts stehenden Parteien durchgesetzt. Bezeichnend ist, daß zwar die Sozialdemokraten sich als relativ stärkste Partei erwiesen—sie haben 2200, die Liberalen 1700, die Demokraten 900, die Konservativen 800 unabgeänderte Wahlzettel aufzuweisen—daß aber ihre demokratischen Verbündeten sie abermals so sehr im Stich ließen, daß alle eigentlichen Führer der Sozialdemokraten gründlich durchgefallen sind, während ein paar Demokraten mit sozialistischer Hilfe auf das Rathhaus gelangten.

Altensteig. Gelegentlich des letzten Marktes kam einem Bauern von Ueberberg der Erlös für ein Paar Ochsen abhanden. Anfangs glaubte der Bauer, er habe sein Notizbuch, worin die 1000 Mark in Papiergeld verwahrt waren, verloren. Ein Schuhmacher von [illegible] machte [illegible] Lugs darauf in auffallend [illegible] große Auslagen, daß Landjäger Döttling die Verhaftung desselben vornahm. Der Dieb gestand auch alsbald, daß er das Notizbuch mit dem Geld aus einem Körbchen entnommen habe, welches der Bauer aus Versehen in dem Gefährt stehen ließ, mit welchem er vom Markt nach Hause fuhr.

Cannstatt. Das ewig Weibliche hat nunmehr auch in unser Rathhaus seinen Einzug gehalten, und zwar in Gestalt einer Stenographie- und Maschinenschreiberin, welche dem Oberbürgermeister attachirt ist. Die Dame wurde dadurch städtische Beamtin.

Heilbronn. Ein schweres Unglück hat sich in der Silberwaarenfabrik von P. Bruckmanns Söhnen ereignet. Ein offenbar an Verfolgungswahnsinn leidender Arbeiter, der wegen Magenerkrankung schon 20 Wochen außer Dienst war, kam kürzlich gegen Mittag in die Fabrik und stach mit einem langen Dolchmesser zwei Arbeiter, Familienväter von acht und fünf Kindern, ohne Anlaß nieder, zog sodann einen Revolver und erschoß sich. Bei den Schwerverletzten, von denen einer einen Stich in die Nieren, der andere einen solchen in die Leber erhielt, scheint jede Aussicht auf Rettung ausgeschlossen.

Hohenbuch. Zwei Dienstknechte entwendeten ihrem Herrn Malzkeimen und ähnliche Futtermittel und haben solches ihren Pferden gefüttert. Hierdurch fand eine derartige Ueberfütterung statt, daß ein sehr werthvolles Pferd buchstäblich zerplatzte und auf der Stelle verendete.

Ulm. Die bürgerlichen Collegien unserer Stadt haben auf Antrag des Oberbürgermeisters Wagner den Münsterbaumeister, Professor Dr. v. Beyer, das Ehrenbürgerrecht der Stadt Ulm ertheilt. Diese Entschließung wird überall, soweit der Name unseres Dombaumeisters gedrungen ist, gewiß mit Freude und Genugthuung begrüßt werden.

A STRANGE CASE.

A Young Girl, Supposed to Have Died, Returns to Life Totally Blind.

Ethel Gilliam, young girl living in Portland is the subject of close attention on the part of doctors and others as the result of remarkable powers developed since her equally as remarkable resuscitation from supposed death.

Ethel was taken suddenly ill. At the time she was an apparently strong, robust, healthy girl, with every faculty alert. After a long illness she died, so it was thought. The body was cold and clammy and soon became rigid. She was placed in a casket and all arrangements made to consign the remains to the earth.

A glass case was over the face of the child, and about an hour before the services, while the heart-broken mother was taking her last look at the face, she saw the eyes open as if from a deep sleep. The cover was only laid on the casket. The mother removed it and the child at once sat up, and in a pained voice said: "Oh, mamma, I wish you had not recalled me. But why is everything so black? Why do you not light the lamp?"

An examination then showed that the child was totally blind, though every other faculty was perfect. Although blind she seemed endowed with a wonderful power that enabled her to read and see by the sense of touch alone. She told her parents that she had been in heaven and had seen Jesus and the angels and many friends who had gone before.

She can read by passing her fingers over the printed or written page and can describe persons whose pictures were handed to her. The latter power was first discovered by a photographer. The sick girl was handed a watch, and she told that it was a gold watch and the time of day by passing her fingers over the glass.

To make sure that her power was genuine a paper was held between her face and a photograph, and she described the picture perfectly as that of an old gentleman with gray whiskers, wearing a dark suit and a cravat. She read from books and papers handed to her by the use of her fingers.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Fly and the Scissors.

Many Kentucky people who have seen the wonderful work of Carl G. von Schoeler, the Kuttawa engraver, will testify to the truth of this story, told in The Paducah News, though it will sound much like a pipe dream to the uninitiated: "A house fly went off with a pair of scissors at Kuttawa a few weeks ago. This sounds strange, especially when it is added that the fly was just a common, everyday specimen of that domestic pest. In that respect, however, the fly differed from the shears. The scissors were among the wonderful minute tools intended for the cherry-stone work-basket made by C. G. von Schoeler, the engraver. Although so small that their outline could not be distinguished by the ordinary eye, they were perfect in size and mechanism, it being possible to cut human hair and cobwebs with their tiny steel blades. It took several days of Mr. von Schoeler's time to produce them, too.

The scissors lay on the carver's work-table. The fly started across the table. His legs became entangled with the scissors, and he took flight. The shears were so light that the insect moved away with ease before Mr. von Schoeler could rescue his precious little prize. The fly has not been seen since. Neither have the scissors. The former owner of the scissors says the fly is at home cutting out a new pair of light trowsers for summer use."—Louisville Courier Journal.

KITTY'S INTERVIEW.

"A lady to see you, sir." Jeremy Grigson used very unparliamentary language, but taking into consideration the fact that his visitor might be close at hand, in compliment to her sex his anathemas were uttered in German.

"Madam," said Jeremy Grigson with a severe bow, "I have an excellent memory, but I cannot recollect having made your acquaintance on any previous occasion."

"You have an excellent memory? Thanks." She made another note. "May I sit down? I am rather tired."

"Certainly, madam." Jeremy placed a chair for her.

"I am from the Weekly Chatterer," she said. "Can you let me have a photograph to go in with the interview?"

"Never had one taken in my life," said Jeremy. He was not a handsome man, yet there was something in his face better than good looks.

"Not even when you were a baby? Almost anything would do."

"Not even then."

"Allow me one question: What have I done that I should be interviewed?"

"Don't you know that the whole town is talking of your book?"

"I don't know anything about it," he said, savagely, "except that I sold the copywright for twenty pounds, and that the twenty pounds is spent."

She had got hold of an immense fact but she dropped her pencil, and her flippant, aggressive air with it.

"What a shame!" she said; "what a wicked shame. Your publishers will make hundreds and thousands out of that book. It is creating a furore. Such a case should not be possible, and especially when a man really needs the money."

He looked attentively at her for the first time. He had seen already that she was young and pretty; but he noticed now that there was a worn, pinched look about her small, very pretty face. He had seen the same look growing on other faces in Bohemia; it had grown upon his own; and he knew the meaning of it.

"You understand about needing money?" he asked her.

"I should think I do," she answered, sharply. "Do you suppose I should be here now if I didn't?"

"Sometimes people work at a trade because they like it."

"If it were a trade I liked, everything would be different. I aspired to literature once, but I could not even make dry bread by it. Ever since I have been hanging on to the skirts of journalism, and sometimes there is a great deal of mud on them. If you only knew how people treat me now and again when I go to interview them! You may thank your stars and your genius for having placed you above all that, at any rate."

"Are they often as brutal as I was?" he asked, gently. "I am awfully sorry; won't you forgive me?"

"Don't mind about it," she said huskily. "I know very well what I must have seemed to you—an impudent, brazen, bold wretch. I am horribly nervous by nature, and I put all that side on just to cover up the fright, and impress people with the idea that I intend to get any information I want, no matter how reticent they try to be. Often they tell me more than they intend—as you did just now—merely to get rid of me, because they think I am writing down a whole lot that they don't want said about them. I should stand a bad chance if they only knew that I am quite as anxious to get away from them as they are to get away from me.

"If this interview is any object to you," he said, in an awkward, shamefaced way, "I will tell you all you want to know. I am not quite such a churl as I pretended to be. Only—well, I am proud as well as poor, and suppose there is no need to make the details of my poverty public?" He glanced first at the meagre furnishing of the room, and then at his threadbare clothes.

"Oh!" It was actually a little cry of pain. "Do you think so badly of me as that still? I will go now. I wish I had not come."

She turned very white as she rose, and caught at her chair to steady herself.

"For heaven's sake, don't faint!" cried Jeremy, desperately. He made a stride toward her, and, without a word of apology, he caught her by the arm and pushed her back into the chair. "What did you do it for?" he asked, with a great show of indignation. "What is the matter with you?"

"I couldn't help it," she said. "If I had gone on walking I should have been all right, but the short rest finished me. I am very tired, and——" She gave a little gasp, and her eyelids fluttered.

Jeremy dived into a wall cupboard, and came forth with a brandy bottle. There was very little in it, but enough for the purpose. He stood over her in a threatening attitude until she consented to drink a teaspoonful. He tried to insist on a second.

"I cannot, really," she said. "I dare not. It would go to my head at once, because—because——"

Jeremy Grigson knelt down beside her and took her hand.

"Is it because you have had no luncheon?" he asked.

"Yes," she said; and her color began to return. "Do you know how it feels?"

He nodded with sympathetic gravity.

"Been there dozens of times," he said; and he did not let go her hand, neither did she withdraw it. "Possibly you have walked the whole way from the Chatterer's office to this house?"

"Hasn't it gone into six editions?" she cried in a tone of accusation.

"I don't deserve the blame for that," I said, in a way that was meant to show her that I felt the injustice of her accusation. "Blame the public, if you wish. The public are invariably idiotic, the editor of the Universe announced in connection with that book of mine. He was right, though the fact that the public steadily refused to buy the Universe points in the other direction."

"Oh, it's all very well to try and throw the blame on the public," said Miss Windram with a shrug, "but is that quite generous of you, Mr. Glyn?"

"Perhaps it isn't. Was it on account of the book you avoided me so carefully?"

"Oh, there were other things. The Geographical Society gave you a gold medal, didn't they?"

"They were right there. They couldn't get out of it."

"I dare say. That may be all very well, but people who get gold medals conferred on them can't expect to be treated as ordinary people."

"That's quite a side-issue. I decline to discuss it."

"And that's all?"

"All? all? Heavens! what did you expect?"

"Sense—that is, a moderate amount of sense; reason—that is, a modicum of reason; frankness—that is, a soupcon of frankness. Supper? Oh, let them go to—to supper."

And she let them.

We were left practically alone.

"Are you engaged to any man for supper?" I asked of Miss Windram.

"Yes," she replied.

I believe that I detected a mournful tone. If I had not detected that note I would have left her side. I did not leave her side.

"And I am engaged to some woman. Let us get to some place together," said I.

The reasonableness of the suggestion—that is, the modicum of reasonableness—seemed to strike her.

We reached one of the conversatories without having to tell a single lie, but that was probably because we met no one en route; every one was at supper. I steered her to a seat under a palm. The light was very dim. A fountain flashed under the electric lamp in the distance.

"Tell me all," I said.

That was how it commenced. I saw that she was very pale; and I had felt her hand trembling as it rested on my sleeve a moment before. I perceived that she fancied I had led her hither to tell her something, and I was anxious to reassure her. It was I who wanted to be told something.

"All?" said she.

"All," said I.

"It was mamma," she said quite meekly.

"I guessed as much. And that is all?"

"Isn't it enough? You're a man. You know her."

"Ah—now."

"Now. I said now."

"But a year ago—"

"And a month?"

"And a month. If you hadn't remembered the exact date I should probably be at supper now. A year and a month ago she was my one enemy. She knew that I loved you—yes, a year and a month ago I loved you in a sort of way—not the way I do now; and she knew that you loved me—in a sort of way. She commanded you to keep me at a distance. Your mother is not a woman of genius, but upon occasions she can be quite as disagreeable as though she were. She prefers, however, being disagreeable by deputy. You were her deputy a year ago—and a month."

Miss Windram got up from beside me and took a few steps to the side of the conservatory, up which a splendid rose was clambering. She had her eyes fixed on a spray. It would have been out of the reach of most girls, but she was very tall, and she managed to break it off the parent stem.

She returned to her seat.

"Well?" she said.

"Then my poor uncle—"

"Poor?"

She gave a laugh.

"My poor rich uncle died, leaving his money to me, and your mother told you that you were to draw me on. I could swear that those were her exact words. Did you pluck those roses only to tear off their petals?"

One rose lay wrecked at her feet; the other dropped from her hand and lay complete among the crimson flakes. She put her hands before her face.

"But instead of drawing me on you persistently avoided me, and, in fact, did everything that was in your power to make me believe that you were sincere when you told me, at the command of your mother, that you had never heard anything more ridiculous than my suggestion that we should love each other; and that you hoped I would not think it necessary to repeat anything so absurd. You have failed in your aim, Rosamond; you did not make me believe in your sincerity. Was I right?"

I am certain she gave a sob; but she did not take her hands down from her face.

"Look at your feet," I said suddenly. She was startled, and glanced down quickly. Her gloves I perceived, were ruined. "Look at your feet. Which is to be my future—our future, Rosamond? Which? The wrecked rose or the other?"

She picked up the complete rose and handed it to me.

I kissed it, and then—

Then a man came up and said that we would do well to hurry into the supper-room if we wanted a bite of anything.

THE BRAVEST BATTLE.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not;
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or noble pen;
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From mouth of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently, bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield.

No marshalling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave!
But oh, these battles! they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

Joaquin Miller.

THE TIME OF ROSES.

"Why have you so persistently avoided me ever since—since—well, ever since Lady Barkston's garden party?" I inquired of Miss Windram, so soon as I succeeded in elbowing my way through the dead wall of Mrs. Bennett Wyse's guests who stood between us.

The result of a brief calculation, entered on the next morning, was to convince me that, during the six minutes it took me playing the part of a pick, in order to reach Miss Windram, I made as many enemies as I had made during the thirty years of my life preceding Mrs. Bennett Wyse's "At Home."

"Have I avoided you, Mr. Glyn?" she asked, opening her eyes very wide and—but this was doubtful—very innocently.

"The question is not if you have done it, but why you have done it!" I said with some measure of severity.

"Suppose I deny that that is the question?" she suggested rather pleasantly, though without quite such a show of innocence as had been associated with her previous inquiry. It is quite possible to speak pleasantly without any particular exuberance of innocence.

"Suppose you deny it? Well, in that case you will have—have denied it," said I. "But it so happens that you won't deny it, Miss Windram."

"I'm not so sure of that. If any one would make it worth my while I might."

"No one will make it worth your while. There is nothing left for you but to speak the truth."

"Great heavens! It is come to that?"

"Why have you avoided me? We were good friends up to that day—I have put a blue mark opposite that day in my diary."

"Yes, we were good friends; good friends are those who have a sound quarrel every time they meet, I suppose?"

"Precisely; friends whose friendship is strong enough to survive a quarrel."

"Did we quarrel that day?"

"We certainly did not. Where would society be if a man and young woman quarreled because, when he asked her—"

"Is there any need for you to tell every one in this stifling room what one problematically foolish young man asked a certainly idiotic young woman?"

I felt that there was something in her question. I had not, however, been speaking louder than usual; it only seemed so because of a sudden diminution in the volume of sound proceeding from the two hundred guests of Mrs. Bennett Wyse, who had all been speaking at the same moment. I tried to explain this to her; and then she asked me what I thought of Signora Duse as an interpreter of emotion as compared with Madame Sarah Bernhardt, and if I held that an actress who was an admirable exponent of the strongest emotions might be depended on to interpret the most powerful passions.

"It's a nice question. I felt bound to say. "Let us clear out from this ruck, and I think I'll be able to tell you all that I know regarding the higher emotions. These people are not to be depended on; one minute they are talking fortissimo; they next they are pianissimo."

"Would you have them rehearsed, Mr. Glyn?"

"Well, a good deal might be done by judicious stage management."

"And a conductor with an ivory baton? There is something in that; I admit. Your idea is that they should become forte when you are speaking, so as to afford a sort of background for your wisdom."

"Wisdom? What man with the least pretence to wisdom would come into a crowd like this for the sake of talking to a girl who has persistently avoided him for the past year and a month?"

"What man, indeed?"

"And this brings us back to the original question. Why have you so persistently avoided me?"

I could see that she was a trifle put out by my persistence in returning to the topic which had originated with me. She had apparently found some imperfection in the feather tips of her fan and thought that it would be unwise to neglect the opportunity of pulling off all the uneven fluffs. Some of them settled upon my waistcoat, and a few made a bee line for the cadaverous nostrils of our neighbor, General Firebrace. He sneezed with much force of character.

"Well, you see, so many things have happened since May third last year, Mr. Glyn," said Miss Windram, when she had satisfied herself by the repeated opening and closing of her fan that she had remedied the defect in its construction.

"What things—in addition to your avoidance of me?" I asked.

"Well, you have published a book to begin with. Isn't that something?"

"If we avoid all the people who have published a book our circle of a quaintance would become appreciably narrowed," Miss Windram. 'Anything else?"

"I had no choice. This represents my whole fortune until such time as I am paid for the interview."

She pulled three half pence out of her pocket, and showed it to him lying on the worn palm of her little gray glove.

Quite involuntarily he lifted to his lips the hand he was holding. Then she drew it away and tried to return to her former manner.

"Just tell me where you were born," she said, "and how the central idea of your book first occurred to you, and I will go."

"You will do nothing of the kind," said Jeremy, firmly. "I am just going to have my tea—'high tea,' because I am a homely sort of fellow. I will not tell you another word unless you stay and share it with me."

"But I have to write up the interview now at once. It must be put into type to-night."

"Very well. You can do it here while our enfiets are being cooked. You will find plenty of paper, pens and ink on my writing table, such as it is. Here are a few notes for you." He filled half a sheet of paper quickly, in a small, clear hand. "Now I shall leave you for half an hour to your work, if you will solemnly promise me not to run off while I am away."

"I don't want to run off in the very least," she said; and she looked away from him to hide the tears in her eyes. But he saw them all the same.

When he came back he was accompanied by a waiter laden with material for a feast brought from the nearest restaurant, and he had letters in his hand, because he had encountered the evening postman on the doorstep.

She wanted to help him to spread the tablecloth and arrange the food, but he said it would make him ill if he did not wait on himself, because he was so used to doing it. So she read her manuscript aloud to him instead, and he criticised it as he stumbled about with plates, knives and forks.

They took their meal together in merry, picnic fashion, like children who had known each other all their lives, and when hunger was satisfied they exchanged some further confidences. They were both alone in the world, both dependent on their pens, although in vastly different lines, and they were both young, notwithstanding the fact that Jeremy's hair had a sprinkling of gray in it. Her name was Kitty, and he told her that had been his mother's name. She was very glad, although she scarcely knew why.

"I have several literary irons in the fire," he said, presently, "and those letters look like business. May I open them? Thanks. Then, if the news is good, you will be the first to congratulate me; and if it is bad, it will be some consolation to hear you say, 'Poor dev'—beg your pardon, I mean 'poor fellow.' I have not spoken to a lady for three years."

He opened the first letter.

"Good," he said. "The Tip-Top Magazine accepts Mr. Grigson's serial, the first instalment of which will appear next month. That manuscript has been lying at the office of the Tip-Top for six months, and I have written about three times without being able to elicit a reply."

"Nothing succeeds like success," said Kitty. "Open the next."

He did so.

"Still better!" he exclaimed. "I applied for a post just vacant on the staff of the Pulverizer. It means three hundred a year for a weekly column of criticism. The last man was a great swell, and he gave it up because one of his own books was smashed to atoms by mistake in another part of the paper. Well, I have got the post."

"Splendid!" she cried. Now the last one."

"Best of all!" he cried, as he glanced through it. "Because it shows human nature in an agreeable light. My publishers inclose a check for two hundred pounds in consideration of the phenomenal success of 'The Book,' and they will be happy to allow me to make my own terms for the next one. Kitty, I am waiting to be congratulated."

He had called her by her Christian name quite unconsciously.

She sprang to her feet, blushing furiously, and began hunting for her gloves.

"I can't say half I mean about it," she stammered. "Won't you take for granted how glad I am? I must go now; the evenings are long, but they don't last forever. I want to thank you and I don't know how."

"When may I come to see you?" he asked, retaining her hand again.

"Oh, never! I live in such a wretched place, and you are among the great ones of the world now, you know."

"Of course," he said, coolly. "It does not matter in the least whether you give me your address or not, because I am going to escort you home, and then I shall find it out for myself. Are you ashamed to be seen with me? We could stop at a sailor's on the way, but there would be certain drawbacks to that compromise."

"My clothes are infinitely worse than yours," she said, humbly.

"Quite a different case," he assured her. "I believe you would look well dressed in a 'gunny sack.'"

Then they set out together. He did not offer to take a cab. An hour earlier he would have done so, but he was, comparatively speaking, a rich man now, and he dared not run the risk of seeming to patronize her poverty. She understood, and liked him all the better for it.

This was a day to be remembered in both their lives.

Three months later there was a much talked-of little wedding breakfast, at which most of the guests were literary celebrities, but another interviewer "wrote it up" for the Weekly Chatterer.

Jeremy had married Kitty.

CHARLIE MARO.

"About four years ago the cruiser on which I was serving shipped a boiler maker while we were on the Mediterranean station," said a chief petty officer of the navy, on leave of absence. "Our former boiler maker's time expired while we were at Gibraltar, and as he was not in good physical shape he wasn't re-enlisted, but took his discharge and returned to the United States by a mail steamer. So the ship was shy a boiler maker, a very important and necessary petty officer down below in the engineer's department, and when the ship pulled into Naples harbor the chief engineer went ashore to see if he couldn't dig up a boiler maker to ship at the rate. There's a clause in the enlistment regulations permitting commanding officers to ship necessary men on foreign stations in short-handed emergencies. The chief engineer brought back to the ship a Greek named Charlie Maro. The man couldn't speak any English—to speak of—but he was a good man at the boiler making business, and he was duly shipped aboard of us for three years. He was a wild, hairy-looking lot, Maro was, and he got a good deal of a laugh at the hands of the crew, especially the younger fellows, from the time he first came over the side. The derision his queer appearance and his extraordinary attempts at English excited among the men forward often got Maro going during the first few months of his cruise, but after awhile he got to be an old story, and the men gradually let up on him. Maro thought that there wasn't any other country on the map except Greece. He thought that the 'Greeka man' was the hottest kind of a tomale when it came to scrapping by land or sea, and, after he got hold of enough English to make himself understood, he used to take some of the young apprentice boys up into the eyes of the ship and tell them, with many gesticulations and furious words, the different kinds of tar Greece would knock out of Turkey if the two countries ever came to an open rupture.

"The ship was around on the Pacific station when the war broke out between Greece and Turkey more than two years ago. When the news of the outbreak of the war got to Maro, our boiler maker, he like to have had heart disease and a whole lot of other sudden things from pure excitement.

"'Da Greeka man willa bim! bim! bim! da Turka man,' was Charlie Maro's way of putting it, and he didn't see that the Turks had a ghost of a show. All hands forward encouraged him in the belief. They all acquiesced in expressing the belief to Maro that Greece would simply eat Turkey up. Then a bo'sun's mate who knew how to crack the most impossible kind of steers with a face as solemn and wooden as an Indian's took Charlie in hand and told him some things. He told Maro that the United States was so much in sympathy with Greece in the struggle with Turkey that the Navy Department had decided to turn over all of the ships of the American navy to Greek commanders.

"'Here's a big chance for you, Maro,' the bo'sun's mate told Maro. 'You just want to work your edge. Here you are already shipped on this cruiser, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if you ask for the command of this ship, in order to take her over to Greece to mix it up with the Turks, you'll get it, hands down.

"That idea impressed Maro a heap. He asked the bo'sun's mate who he'd have to apply to to get command of the cruiser.

"'Why, to the commanding officer, of course,' was his reply.

"Maro was tremendously important for a day or so while he let this huge idea grow within him, and he bullied the men detailed to work with him down below in the boiler room a good deal. The bo'sun's mate kept working him up to it, and finally Maro appeared on deck one morning, togged out in his very best mustering suit of blue-jacket clothes (when he ought to have been in dungarees, ready to begin work cleaning out the boilers after a run), and went up to the officer of the deck and asked permission to see the commanding officer at the mast. The officer of the deck was rather surprised to see the man all done up in his mustering togs when all hands were at work, but, as he is obliged to do when an elisted man requests permission to see the commanding officer, he sent word to the skipper, who soon emerged from his cabin and appeared at 'the stick.'

"'Well, my man?' said the skipper to Maro, who stood bold upright and saluted with a flourish.

"'Sare,' said Maro to the skipper, 'I hava da honor to here-a-by take da command of-a da ship.'

"'Hey?' said the commanding officer putting his hand at his ear and looking as if he hadn't heard aright.

"'Da ship,' repeated Maro. 'For-a da navee of-a Hellas—da Greeka navee—I hava da honor to take da command.'

"All hands among the enlisted men were up on the to'gallant fo'c'sle, taking the thing in, and they broke into a roar that you could have heard five cable lengths' distance. Maro heard it, and, suspecting that his confidence had been abused, got red and flabbergasted. He suddenly bolted for the engine room hatch and made his way below, and it took three marines to drag him aft to the sick bay, where the surgeon, at the skipper's command, gave Maro a half hour's examination as to his sanity. Maro was game enough to decline to give the name of the enlisted man who had told him he was eligible for the command of the ship upon its being 'turned into the navy of Greece,' but the thrashing he gave that bo'sun's mate when he got him 'on the beach' was certainly savage."—Washington Star.

TROUBLE IN THIRD REGIMENT.

Charges Made by Officers and Men May Cause a Lively Row.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 9—The officers of the Third New Jersey Regiment, now located at Athens, Ga., are indignant at unfavorable criticisms of them which have appeared in several New Jersey papers and complain bitterly that they have been unfairly attacked. They have written letters to their friends in this city denouncing the attacks as not warranted by the real facts. Threats are made in the letters that when the regiment returns from the south some libel suits will be instituted. On the other hand it is claimed that letters received here from several of the rank and file, and also from some of the company officers, make serious charges of incompetency against some of those higher in command.

The indications are that there will be some lively scenes here when the regiment returns home and then the real truth will have to come out.

$150 Diamond Ring Missing.

James Connely, of West Third street, has reported to the police the loss of a diamond ring belonging to his wife and valued at $150. The police are investigating the case and think that the suspected thief is in Philadelphia. Mrs. Connely had the ring but a short time before it was stolen. A boarder in the house is suspected of making way with it, for he used often to admire the ring on Mrs. Connely's finger. The loss was discovered Christmas Day, and at the same the boarder disappeared.

An Aged Woman Passes Away.

Rebecca Walton Hobbie, widow of the late Benjamin Hobbie, died yesterday at her home, 1303 Watchung avenue, in the ninety-third year of her age. Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19eod 9

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Flataw & Dunn's vaudeville company will appear in Music Hall tomorrow night. Judging by the success of Manager Edwards' previous engagements of vaudeville companies the show will be of highest standard. In fact, nearly all the members of the aggregation are picked from the Keith and Proctor's circuits, and everyone knows that none but the best appear in houses managed by either Proctor or Keith. After the vaudeville bill there will be a farce presented. It is entitled "Courage," and abounds with plenty of laughter.

Major J. B. Pond is happy to announce that W. F. Frame, Scotland's famous comedian, has achieved a triump unprecedented in the annals of the profession wherever he has appeared since November 23d last, when he made his American debut in Carnegie Hall for the New York Caledonian Society. In the cities of Lawrence, Mass.; Pawtucket, R. I.; Worcester, Mass.; Cohoes, N. Y.; Ottawa, Ont.; North Adams, Wakefield, Fitchburg, Lowell, Hartford, Holyoke anp Pittsburg, Pa., he has booked return engagements, invariably at a higher fee. This is a success unprecedented in the Lyceum for the past twenty years. Frame and his company will be at Music Hall Friday evening.

The fanciful and unusual story told in "The Sorrows of Satan," at the Broadway Theatre, New York, seems to have renewed the widespread interest created upon the publication of Marie Corelli's novel, from which the play was dramatized. The play follows closely the text of the book. Satan, as Prince Lucio Rimenez, a cosmopolitan of untold wealth and resources, saunters through the galeties of modern life as society's counsellor. He tempts, to sorrow when his advice is heeded, and to rejoice when a pure soul rejects, as it elevates him just that much nearer his lost home. The play is spoken of as the dramatic novelty of the year, and its four acts are set with a lavishness of scenery and electrical effects that are startling and ingenious.

BASKET BALL.

The interassociation basket ball matches at the Y. M. C. A. will be resumed Friday evening.

Plainfield will be represented at the basket ball game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this evening by a team composed of Walter L. Long, George Proctor Smith, Berry Egan, Max Moraller, Eric Moraller, Raymond Carroll and Fred Bonney.

The Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. has satisfactorily settled the question of safely seating the visitors in the gymnasium gallery at the Y. M. C. A. building and the basket ball games will be resumed once more. This evening, the team from the New York Institete will play in this city against the local association team. An exciting game is looked for.

The girls of the Plainfield High School have resumed practice after the Christmas vacation. An effort is being made to arrange a match in the near future. According to the request of Superintendent Maxson, all the games in the future will be played with boundary lines. That question has been an unsetled one for some time until Mr. Maxson decided to settle it.

Justices and Constables Organized.

Like their Plainfield judicial brethren, the Justices of the Peace and constables of Monmouth county have organized to retain control of the offices already held and secure legislation in their favor. The Legislature has of late passed laws that affect the fees of Justices and constables, and the "combine" purposes to make a united effort toward preventing the further enactment of laws that are antagonistic.

WRECK KILLED SIXTEEN.

Thirteen Taken Out of Debris and Three Died in the Muhlenberg Hospital.

TWENTY-FIVE PASSENGERS SERIOUSLY HURT.

COMPLETE AND CORRECT LIST OF DEAD AND BADLY INJURED.

Collision Was Due to Someone's Blunder—South Plainfield Operator Disclaims Responsibility—Great Work at the Muhlenberg Hospital—Interviews With Survivors.

Two passenger trains on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, each loaded with men, women and children, crashed into each other near the Greenbrook tanks yesterday afternoon at 12:45 o'clock, dealing death and injury on every hand. It was one of the most disastrous wrecks chronicled in the history of New Jersey and by far the most frightful witnessed in the vicinity of Plainfield during the memory of the present generation.

The Daily Press told yesterday in its columns of the awful disaster and gave, in a few words, the manner in which this fatality occurred. There was a wreck at Bound Brook in the morning on the Lehigh Valley tracks. A break in a freight train blocked both tracks for a time. Before noon, however, traffic had been resumed on the west bound track and, between Bound Brook and South Plainfield, the road was run as a single track line.

A business men's excursion had been gotten up in the Pennsylvania coal regions by the Lehigh Valley. The Hazleton express, No. 20, brought the excursionists on their way to New York for a few days outing. The number was so large that the train had to be run in sections. It was about 12:30 when section two of the train, made up a number of coaches and a Pullman car, left Bound Brook, drawn by engine No. 485, Engineer James Pendergraph, of Easton. The fireman was Oliver Schaffer, of South Easton, Pa. The conductor was Harry Riddle, of Easton, with a crew of brakemen, Freeman Snyder and Charles Dalrymple, of Easton, and Newsagent William Keifer, of Easton.

About the same time one of the Bound Brook "scoots," as the locals between Bound Brook and New York are called, left South Plainfield, west bound. It was drawn by engine No. 309, with E. W. Rich, of Bound Brook, as engineer, and William Cheshire, of Bound Brook, as fireman. Leon Price, of Bound Brook, was the conductor of the local. Ralph L. Reed, of Bound Brook, the baggagemaster, and Daniel Sullivan, of Bound Brook, the brakeman.

The Hazleton express was crowded with the happy excursionists, all looking forward with eager anticipation to their arrival in the metropolis. The train was moving rapidly and had just left the cut near Lincoln and prepared to round the curve at the right by the "tanks," when the local loomed up ahead. Both trains were running on the westbound track. There was no time to stop for the woods at the curve hid the trains from each other until they were close together. Then came the crash.

The locomotives reared up in the air as they came together and then fell on the south side of the track, the engine of the express twisting about so that it faced the direction from whence it came. Both locomotives were totally wrecked.

The first car of the express was crowded, many of the passengers being women and children. The forward truck was knocked from under it, and the tender of the engine was forced right through the end of the car and half its length. One side of the car was split off. The back trucks were derailed, but remained under the car.

The sudden shock and the advent of the tender through the car drove the passengers into a heap. It was here where most of the fatalities occurred, the rest being confined to the occupants of the two cabs. Engineer Rick jumped and the others were thrown. The rest of the cars of the express were not damaged in the slightest.

The baggage car on the local was derailed but that was all the damage to that train except to the engine. None of the passengers in the latter train were seriously injured although all were severely shaken up by the collision.

Some of the injured were able to walk out of the wreck of the passenger coach. The remainder were carried out on the seat cushions and the doors taken from the cars. The dead were also removed. They were horrible sights although not excessively mangled.

A number of the injured were assisted and carried across to the Jersey Central tracks that run parallel with these of the Lehigh Valley at the place, and brought to this city. They were then taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. A number went on to Jersey City to be cared for in the hospitals there.

The dead were laid on the ground near by until it was arranged to take them back to Bound Brook in the Pullman car that formed the end of Hazleton express. They were placed on the seats and taken back to Bound Brook where part were removed to the freight house.

The dead and wounded being removed from the wreck, the work of removing the debris began. Aside from the two locomotives there was very little for the host of sightseers, that assembled, to see. The cars were removed and the two large steam wreckers from Packerton and Easton soon opened the tracks. The wreckage was all removed late last evening and the rails repaired.

One of the first acts of the railroad officials on learning of the accident was to telegraph to the surrounding towns for physicians. The Jersey Central placed a special engine at the service of the Plainfield medical staff. Drs. Fritts, Buchannan and Zeglio, Mrs. J. A. Haynes, with a stock of bandages, and a Press reporter, were hurried to the scene of the disaster in the engine. Dr. J. F. Hecht, of Raritan; Drs. F. A. Wold and C. R. P. Fisher, of Bound Brook; and Dr. W. J. Nelson, of New Market, also answered to the the call. Six physicians arrived from Flemington but too late to render any assistance.

THRILLING EXPERIENCES.

Press Reporter Talked With Survivors Soon After the Collision.

J. T. Triscurt, of 271 North Seventh street, Newark, was one of the half-dozen passengers on the Bound Brook local going west, none of whom were injured. Mr. Triscurt had a thrilling experience, but was not injured in the slightest. "Our train," said Mr. Triscurt to a Press reporter, "was composed of the combination baggage and smoker and one passenger coach. The few passengers there was on the train were in the last car. I was reading a paper when I heard the whisling of the engine, but thought it was probably to warn someone off the track. Suddenly there came the awful shock of the collision. I went flying through space over several seats and landed up against a window. The pane of glass was broken, but the sleeve of my coat prevented my getting gashed. The other passengers were not hurt, either, and we all disembarked to witness the scene of the catastrophe."

David Hand and Lewis Corell, of Shamokin, Pa., were among the Pennsylvanians who were on their way to the metropolis to enjoy the three days' visit allowed by the excursion tickets they were riding on. They occupied a seat together four seats from the rear end of the car. While watching the railroad employes and others who were on hand assisting to carry out the dead bodies from the car they occupied, Hand and Corell were congratulating themselves on a miraculous escape from a horrible death. Corell was rubbing his back from the sprain he received in the collision when seen by a Daily Press reporter. He told the following story of his experiences:

"My friend Hand and myself were going to New York to 'see the sights,' as they say of us people from up in Pennsylvania, but we are seeing sights now that were not down on the programme, and which I hope we will never see again. It is a providential act that we are able to do this, though. We had just passed the scene of the wreck of the freight cars a short distance east of Bound Brook and were talking of the sight when I heard the locomotive of our train whistling in a terrific manner. I looked out of the car window and saw the stretch of track ahead after the road makes the curve. I noticed the local train coming towards us, but for the moment thought that it was on the other track. Before I could think again, however, I felt an awful jar and was sent sprawling across three seats in front of me. For a moment I was dazed, and I seemed totally paralyzed. I attempted to move and I fell in a heap between the seats.

"There was a hideous hissing of steam, and, not yet realizing what had really happened, I instinctively put out one of my hands to help myself to rise. It makes me creep to think of where that hand landed. It was in the mangled face of a woman, who had been occupying a front seat and had been thrown to the spot where I lay by the force of the collision. I was horror stricken, but got up and what a terrible sight met my eyes! There was the tender of the engine jammed into the front of the car while the aisle was strewn with bodies, some writhing in agony and others lying motionless—instantly killed.

"Almost crazed with fear I picked my way between the dead and half-dead bodies of the passengers who had been further forward than I and got out on to the platform and jumped to the ground. For a brief time I felt as though the very next minute I was going to die from something of which I can give no description. Finally, however, I became myself again and I commenced to look around for my friend Hand. I found him setting up on the bank rubbing his sides from the strain that he received, but otherwise he was all right. It was certainly a miraculous escape that we had, for from what I could see we were about the only ones in the car that were not either killed or severely injured. Every seat in the car had two passengers in it."

AT THE HOSPITAL.

Hasty Preparations to Care for the Injured—Splendid Work Done by All.

The wounded began to arrive at the hospital soon after 1 o'clock. The superintendent, Miss Moss, had been notified prior to this, and every available cot was prepared and every unoccupied part of the building was emptied and made ready for the injured. All the nurses were called to duty, and as many more young women from the outside as would volunteer to help. As many of the physicians as were left in the city hurried to offer their services, but with all the bustle and hurry an air of order reigned over the whole institution.

The wounded ones were brought to this city on the Central Railroad

CAN'T FIND THE HORSE.

MUCH-INVOLVED CASE GROWING OUT OF SALE OF $25 STEED.

Charles E. Drake Bought the Horse But Did Not Pay for It—Monday Morning Animal Suddenly Disappeared.

Early in December Chas. E. Drake, of the borough, signified a willingness to purchase from John Becker, Sr., of Somerset street, a horse which the latter owned. An agreement was made whereby Drake was to become the owner of the horse for the sum of $25. It was a verbal agreement, but later Mr. Becker wanted Drake to sign a contract to pay so much for the horse on the installment plan. This Drake refused to do. A few weeks elapsed when Drake called on Becker and offered him $3 as first payment. It is said that the latter refused this amount.

Since that time there has been more or less trouble about the horse. Last Monday evening the horse was taken from Drake's barn, and Edward Becker, grandson of the former owner of the horse, was suspected of taking the animal. As a result he was arrested and taken before Justice Thomas last evening.

Lawyer Newcorn represented the plaintiff, while Lawyer George W. Bird represented Becker. After the Justice heard the case he decided that young Becker could not be held for the Grand Jury as was the wish of the plaintiff, so the case was dismissed. There is now a search warrant out for the horse, but the animal cannot be found anywhere, and is therefore inoperative. The outcome of the case will be watched with considerable interest.

Clothesline Thieves.

There is a band of thieves in this vicinity that are making special effort to rid families of clothes that are hung on lines in their yards. Very recently these midnight prowlers entered the yard of George Sterling, No. 123 East Sixth street, and stole valuable clothing which amounted to about $40. Last evening between 5 and 6 o'clock thieves entered the yard of a family living on Putnam avenue and stole clothes to the value of about $20. All of the clothing taken is costly and is a heavy loss to the owners.

GOOD BASKET BALL WAS SEEN IN Y. M. C. A. GYM.

THE "BOWERY BOYS" MET DEFEAT.

Plainfield Team Played Together in Great Shape—First Half Particularly Hard Fought.

An excellent exhibition of good basket ball playing was witnessed in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening when the regular team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. defeated the team from the New York Institute, the "Bowery Boys," by a score of 27 to 6. The Plainfield team was all present and played together in great shape. Their team play was remarkable and there was a noticeable improvement in accuracy in goal throwing.

The first half was particularly hard fought, the score at the end being 7 to 4 in favor of the home team. The game played by both sides was fast and spirited and honors were fairly divided. In the second half, the Plainfield boys continued the same game but the visitors could not stand the pace. They became winded, lost heart and then the home team rolled up score after score with increasing rapidity.

The team lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		NEW YORK INSTITUTE.
Moraller, E.	right forward	Swatz
Long	left forward	Grubnier
Egan	centre	Whitehal
Smith	right guard	Grueber
Moraller, M.	left guard	Glimmer

Score—Plainfield, 27; New York, 6. Goals from the field—Smith (2), Long (2), Egan (3), E. Moraller (2), M. Moraller (2), Swatz, Grubnier, Whitehead. Goals on fouls—Long. Fouls—Plainfield, 2; New York, 4. Referee—C. E. A. Heywood. Umpires—Dr. Lewis, of New York, and I. I. Vanderstyne, of Plainfield.

Union Church Service.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes preached at the union meeting held in the Presbyterian church last night. The text was "I also am a man," and in his discourse the preacher referred to Peter standing before Cornelius and declining to be worshipped. Rev. A. E. Main chairman of the committee from the ministers' association, who have these union services in charge, led the after meeting which was devoted to prayers for the unconverted. The sufferers in the wreck were remembered in the prayers.

Small Noonday Fire in the Borough.

A small fire occurred in the borough at 12:30 today in the wood yard belonging to E. P. Gavin, of Maple avenue and West street. The fire is supposed to have originated from either a spark from the boiler or from the great heat caused by the same being too close to the side of the building, and setting the weather boards on fire. Julius Stahl put the fire out with an extinguisher. The damage was $50.

Claim Against Lehigh Valley Settled.

Codington & Swackhamer have just succeeded in obtaining a settlement of the damages sustained by a resident of Plainfield on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The company preferred to settle the case upon the terms proposed by the claimant's counsel rather than to stand trial.

BIG BOUQUET FOR REED.

THE TALL SENATOR RECEIVES LOTS OF HANDSOME FLOWERS.

Legislature Convened at 3 o'Clock This Afternoon and Reed Was Chosen President of the Senate.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, January 10.—The Legislature was formally organized at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the election of Senator Reed as president of the Senate, and Acting-Governor Voorhees as Speaker of the Assembly. Quite a number of Senator Reed's friends are on hand to see him inducted into the second highest office in the State.

Mayor Wilson and the members of the Borough Council of North Plainfield remembered Senator Reed with a very large set piece of American Beauty roses. The Park Whist team did the honors in a similar way. The members of the Park Club ordered a very large and handsome display of flowers and they appeared in a prominent place in the Senate chamber. These flowers were in charge of W. Wilder Rowley, of North Plainfield, who was deputized by those who furnished the flowers to do that work.

Speaker Watkins was sworn in with the rest of the members of the Assembly, and, upon his election and qualification as Speaker, he will surrender the chair to Assemblyman Squires, of Union, and will officiate as Acting-Governor until the inauguration of Governor-elect Voorhees, on Tuesday of next week.

After the organization of the Legislature a joint caucus of the Republicans will be held to elect a candidate for United States Senator, to succeed James Smith, Jr. Ex-Congressman John Kean will be chosen, without opposition.

The Republican Assemblymen caucused last night and ratified their action taken in December, when the offices were allotted. The caucus was again open to reporters. The caucus decided to have the House today adopt the rules of the last House. This was done in order to maintain the rule which authorizes a majority of the members to order the previous question. Essex county refused to give up the bill clerkship or any other of her allotted offices to Cumberland, and the caucus decided to give Cumberland county two pages.

Senator W. M. Johnson, of Bergen county, will be the Republican leader in the Senate and Wood McKee, of Passaic, will be the leader in the House. Senator Pitney sent his resignation as Congressman to Acting Governor Watkins this morning. He is here and will take part in the organization.

PARKS VICTORIOUS ON STRANGE ALLEYS.

THE SUBSTITUTES ROLLED WELL.

Parks Won Two Out of Three From The N. J. A. C. Last Night.—Individual Scores.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bayonne, Jan. 10th—The bowling team from the Park Club, of Plainfield, rolled three games on the alleys of the New Jersey Athletic Club last evening and won the series, two out of three. The home team was in fine form for the first game and nearly reached the 900 mark. There were 159 pins that separated the two teams. Then the New Jersey boys fell down and lost the other two games by easy scores.

Two of the regular Park Club bowlers were absent and Arthur Peck and W. J. R. Thiers were substituted. For both it was the first match game rolled, too, on strange alleys. Peck is a young fellow of 18, but he made an excellent showing. Thiers rolled a particularly good game, never falling below 152. Hibbard was a little out of form in the first two games, but improved in the last.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.	1st.	2d.	3d.
Hibbard	121	138	179
A. Peck	145	140	138
W. Thiers	152	168	178

DISCHARGE CEREMONIES.

MUSTERING OUT TO TAKE PLACE AT ATHENS.

The Men Will be Allowed to Come North as They See Fit—They Will Receive Mileage Money From the Government—Preparations to Welcome the Boys Home—Served Over Eight Months.

The date for the muster out of the Third New Jersey Volunteers has at last been set, and January 31st the officers and men will be officially disconnected with the army of the United States, after a service of over eight and a half months. The regiment will be mustered out at Athens, Ga., where the regiment is now stationed in camp with the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, and it is said that the men will receive their discharge papers there, and be permitted to come home any way they select, either in bodies or singly. The Government will not send them home, so it is said, but will simply give them mileage money and let them spend it as they choose. In addition to the mileage they will receive a month's pay in lieu of furloughs.

When the First and Second New Jersey regiments were mustered out, they were sent first to Sea Girt and then given furloughs of thirty days. Upon their return to camp they were paid off and discharged. That plan did not work with the best of success, as the officers found it difficult to get the men together after the furloughs. The plan of mustering out the men where they are in camp and of allowing them mileage and one month's pay has been adopted as a much more satisfactory one, and will be used with the Fifteenth Pennsylvania as with the Third New Jersey.

There seems at present to be an idea that the Third will not come north together. The men have learned of the intention to muster them out at Athens, and to let them go whither they will, and many of them are planning for their trips home. One party, which includes a large number of men and some of the officers, expects to go to Savannah and come north by boat. Others are planning to visit points of interest on their way north, and do not expect to arrive home until a week or two after they are mustered out.

Although the headquarters of the Third are in Elizabeth the indications are that the command will not come here as a body. It is likely that an effort will be made to have the two Elizabeth companies, C and E, come home together, in which case they will undoubtedly be given a rousing reception. The other companies are said to be arranging to proceed directly to their home towns, where receptions will be tendered them by their fellow citizens.

OFFERING FOR HOSPITAL.

Collection to be Taken Up at the Union Meeting Tonight.

The union services will be continued in the First Presbyterian church this evening at 8 o'clock. The special needs that have been imposed on the hospital by the frightful railroad accident, appeal to the sympathies of all and an offering at the meeting will be made for that worthy charity.

The Silk Mill Enterprise.

The American Silk Journal says: "F. P. Zimmerman, W. J. Young and Thomas Bullock, of Paterson, are negotiating with the Plainfield, N. J., Board of Trade for the establishment of a silk mill in that town. It is proposed to organize a stock company with a capital of $25,000, one third to be held by Paterson parties. Mr. Young stated that he has orders already promised amounting to $100,000, and that 'two plants could be bought in Paterson, one for $3,200, and the other for $2,400.' It was claimed also that the silk mill would pay a dividend of from 70 to 75 per cent. annually.

An Illustrated Lecture.

Prof. Albert H. Smyth, professor of English in the Philadelphia High School, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Land of Shakespeare" in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The lecture will be for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the church. Prof. Smyth was one of the lecturers in the University Extension course, and his discourses were found particularly interesting by Plainfield audiences.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION
THE DAILY PRESS PROVIDES IT.
SPARE MOMENTS MADE TO COUNT.

THE DAILY PRESS has perfected arrangements with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, of Plainfield, whereby complete scholarships in each institution have been placed at its disposal These scholarships will be awarded to the persons securing the highest number of new subscribers to The Daily Press within the time prescribed and under the rules printed below. The scholarship in the Plainfield Business College will go to the person securing the highest number of subscribers, and the scholarship in the Gregg School of Stenography to the one securing the second highest number of new subscribers.

A consolation prize of a handsome bound International Webster Dictionary, with complete reference index, will be given to the third highest standing contestant.

Read the following rules carefully, and then jump in and try to win:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with.

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

BEEF NOT EMBALMED

No Treatment Given Army Meat Other Than Cooling.

GEN. MILES DISCREDITED.

The General Superintendent of Swift and Co. the Contractors Testifies Before the War Investigating Committee as to the Beef Supplied to the Army.

Washington, Jan. 10.--Fred W. Wilder, general superintendent for Swift & Co. of Chicago, appeared before the war inquiry commission Monday. He said he had general charge of all the packing, canning and slaughtering of cattle for the Chicago plant, and gave a general account of the practical working of the meat business.

He said that all the cattle were bought from commission firms at the stock yards, and there given an antemortem inspection by a government official, and then driven to the abattoir, being well cooled before killing. A gang of one hundred and fifty men, he said, would butcher about one hundred and twenty cattle an hour. The cattle were then subjected to a post mortem examination, also by government inspectors, who examined the lungs, liver and intestines. The company had had as many as twenty cattle a week condemned at this inspection, being about twenty out of nine thousand. The condemnation was mostly due to tuberculosis. The condemned animals are tagged by the government inspectors, and the carcas goes to the refuse tank, where the only use made of it is to take the grease for lubricating purposes and the remainder for fertilizers. The good meat is stamped by the government inspector and certified for the market.

Part of the beef ordered by the government during the war was sent from Kansas City, though most of it was from Chicago. The contract with the government called for the best fat steers, not less than six hundred lbs. per dressed carcass. These specifications were complied with.

Referring to the much discussed "beard" on the refrigerator meat, Mr. Wilder said the large wholesalers who supplied the best hotels in Chicago, "aged" all their beef before selling it, and got an advanced price for it after it accumulated the beard.

He said the meat was better in every respect after being aged. As to complaints regarding the army contract beef, he said the Manitoba shipment was the only one condemned.

This was shipped July 30, and was not thrown overboard till September 18. Witness had been in the export business ten years and in the Liverpool and London trade, where the beef was from ten to eighteen days in transit. He had never lost one quarter of beef.

Witness denied that any chemicals were used in preserving any of the meat sold by his firm, and said that in addition to other objections, it would be useless, would be a detriment to the beef, and an extra expense. The beef for export was not the best beef, but of a fair quality.

Rowing at Cornell.

Ithaca, Jan. 10.--Only seventy-five men have reported to the coach, Courtney, and to Captain Fisher of the 'varsity eight, in compliance with the call for candidates for the Cornell freshman eight.

The response was disappointing, inasmuch as last year one hundred and fifty candidates turned out at the first call. The candidates are a stocky, well built lot, however. They began preliminary work yesterday and for the present will be coached in squads by the members of last year's varsity eight, who are back, under the general direction of Coach Courtney.

The call for varsity candidates will not be made until the new men have been fairly started in their work, which should be in about two weeks.

A Lively Day in Wall Street.

New York, Jan. 10.--Into the five hours that comprise the regular session of the board was crowded the greatest amount of business that brokers have ever known in Wall street. By noon 550,000 shares of stock had been bought and sold. The total day's business aggregated over one million shares. This is the largest for years past.

The ticker hummed without an instant's rest. Nearly all of the so-called specialties were higher, but there were no sensational gains. Atchison, sugar, the Pacific stocks and the grangers were the strongest features. Bonds also were bought on a large scale. All Wall street is looking for the biggest boom in years.

Bank Safe Robbed.

Ashburnham, Mass., Jan. 10.--The safe of the Ashburnham Bank was blown to pieces by dynamite about 2 o'clock Monday morning. The interior of the bank was badly wrecked and all the windows were blown out. A sum of money, estimated at from $1,500 to $2,000, is missing. There is no clew to the robbers.

It is not believed that any large quantity of notes or drafts was taken. Deputy Sheriff Richardson is of the opinion that the work was done by amateurs.

The robbers, it is thought, came and left with a team as no trains were running for some time before and after the explosion.

Germany to Grab Again.

Melbourne, Victoria, Jan. 10.--Advices received here from the Tonga islands, via Auckland, N. IN THE PRIZE RING.

Sharky and McCoy Will Meet at the New York Lenox Club To-night.

New York, Jan. 10.--There seems no question but the twenty-round fight between Thomas Sharkey, the sailor pugilist, and Kid McCoy, will come off at the Lenox Athletic Club to-night. This is the same ring in which Sharkey and Corbett fought recently.

By the terms of the articles of agreement they will box with five ounce gloves for a purse of $20,000, of which 75 per cent. will go to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser. If the receipts of the club are more than $40,000 the fighters will each receive 25 per cent. of the excess. It was agreed that the Lenox Athletic Club should post the entire purse with "Matty" Corbett, who has been named as final stakeholder this morning.

Both the fighters and the managers of the Lenox Athletic Club realize that the unsatisfactory ending of the Corbett-Sharkey affair was almost a death blow to heavyweight fighting in this city, and in order to avoid a repetition of such a thing it was agreed that if the second or handler of either man imitated McVey's act of jumping into the ring to save his principal the bout would not be stopped, but the offender removed and the bout allowed to continue. The men will fight according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules, the only stipulation being that they shall break without hitting after coming to close quarters, and there shall be no hitting in clinches allowed.

To Prosecute Aldridge

Albany, Jan. 10.—Governor Roosevelt announced that he had selected Franklin D. Locke of Buffalo to take ex-Judge Countryman's place as special counsel for the executive department in the case against Superintendent of Public Works George W. Aldridge for criminal mismanagement of the canals.

In politics Locke is an independent Democrat. He was a Cleveland man in the days when David B. Hill was in control in the state, and took an active part in the anti-snapper movement. He was conspicuous also in the fight against Maynard. At the last national convention he voted for Palmer and Buckner.

The Connecticut Senatorship.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 10.--The managers of Senator Hawley's campaign for re-election deny the statement in a dispatch from Washington that they have given up expecting his re-election.

They say they are more confident than ever. They profess to have no doubts whatever of Mr. Hawley's renomination at the caucus Wednesday. There are three candidates, Senator Hawley, ex-Speaker Fessenden and ex-Governor Bulkley.

Coal Miners in Convention.

Pittsburg, Jan. 10.--The Coal Miners' National convention opened here yesterday with an attendance unusually large. Delegates were present from the bituminous coal regions of Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Alabama and Kansas.

Interest centered in the election of a national president. John Mitchell of Illinois, acting president, is opposed by Patrick Dolan of Pittsburg. Dolan alleges that Senator Mark Hanna is using his influence in behalf of Mitchell.

HOAR ON EXPANSION

Senator Says Constitution Does Not Allow Colonies.

REGRETS LEAVING PARTY.

Senator Hoar's Intimation that He Will Oppose the Ratification of the Treaty of Peace is Contrary to Expressed Prediction of His Fellow Republican Senators.

Washington, Jan. 10.--Senator Hoar addressed the Senate yesterday afternoon on the Vest anti-expansion resolution.

Great interest was manifested in the senator's utterances, and his intimation of his purpose to oppose the ratification of the peace treaty created a profound sensation.

Mr. Hoar began with a discussion of the constitutional phases involved, prefacing his argument with a statement of his personal position.

"I am quite sure," said he, "that no man who will hear what I say to-day will doubt that nothing could induce me to say it but a commanding sense of public duty. I dislike to differ from the president, whose election I hailed with such personal satisfaction and such exulting anticipations for the republic. I dislike to differ from so many of my party associates in this chamber, with whom I have for so many years trod the same path and sought the same goal. I am one of those men who believe that little that is great or good or permanent for a free people can be accomplished without the instrumentality of party. And I have believed religiously and from my soul, for half a century, in the great doctrines and principles of the Republican party. I stood in a humble capacity by its cradle. I do not mean, if I can help it, to follow its hearse. I am sure I render it a service; I am sure I help to protect and to prolong the life of that great organization if I can say or can do anything to keep it from forsaking the great principles and doctrines in which alone it must live or bear no life.

Mr. Hoar said that our fathers who framed the constitution were the wisest builders of states the world has yet seen. They had studied ancient history and had learned that while there is little else that a democracy cannot accomplish it cannot rule over vassal states or subject peoples without bringing the elements of death into its own constitution.

Mr. Hoar believed, he said, this country to be a nation--a sovereign nation. He believed Congress possessed all the powers necessary to accomplish the great objects the framers of the constitution intended should be accomplished. But he denied that it possessed the "astonishing" and "extravagant" powers under the constitution which the senator of Connecticut (Mr. Platt) attributed to it.

"As to every matter the United States as a nation possesses sovereign power, except only where sovereignty has been reserved to the states and the people." And again: "As a nation it possesses every sovereign power not reserved in its constitution to the states or to the people. The right to acquire territory was not reserved, and is therefore an inherent sovereign right. In the right to acquire territory is found the right to govern it, and as the right to acquire is a sovereign, inherent right, the right to govern is a sovereign right not limited in the constitution."

These propositions of Mr. Platt Mr. Hoar expressly denied. He affirmed that every constitutional power is limited to the one supreme and controlling purpose declared in the constitution itself: "In order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity."

"We have heard," continued Mr. Hoar, "of limited monarchies, constitutional monarchies, despotisms tempered by assassination; but the logic of the Senator from Connecticut makes a pure, unlimited, untempered despotism without any relief from assassins.

"The constitutional argument for slavery was ten times as strong as the argument of the senator from Connecticut. The slave master said he owned men for their good. The senator from Connecticut proposes to own nations for their good.

"The sovereignty which can be exercised by the nation as a unit is only that which is necessary for accomplishing the purposes of the constitution, and must be expressly granted therein, or necessary, or convenient, in the judgment of Congress to accomplish the purposes expressly declared therein. All other sovereignty is reserved to the states or to the people. The power to conquer alien peoples and hold them in subjection is nowhere expressly granted. The power to conquer alien peoples and hold them in subjection is nowhere implied as necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes declared by the constitution.

"It is clearly shown to be one that ought not to be exercised by anybody --one that the framers of the constitution thought ought not to be exercised by anybody.

"1. Because it is immoral in itself.

"2. Because it is expressly denied in the Declaration of Independence, the great interpreter and expounder of the meaning of the constitution, which owes its origin to the same generation and largely to the same men."

Mr. Hoar quoted the statement of Louis Napoleon, made in 1854, that "the time of conquest is past, never to return, for it is not by extending the boundaries of its territory that a nation can henceforward be honored and powerful, but by placing itself at the head of generous ideas and spreading everywhere the empire of right and justice," and added:

"Napoleon forgot what he had said when he grew a little stronger. He saw his opportunity in Mexico, as our friends think they see ours in the Philippine islands. But the sure and terrible feet of destiny overtook him in the midst of his pride and power."

PIES THAT WEIGH A TON.

Denby Dale is in the Habit of Making and Eating Them.

This country has long been pleased to consider itself the land of pies. But, as a matter of fact, a certain region of the English county of Yorkshire produces pies beside which no American pie would dare to make its appearance for very shame.

Denby Dale periodically makes pies weighing a ton and upward. There was a pie last summer which weighed only fifteen hundredweight.

The last Denby Dale pie was made, cooked, carved and distributed only last summer, in celebration of the jubilee of the repeal of the Corn laws. The meats of which it was composed weighed nearly fifteen hundredweight. Half a ton of steel plates went to form the dish in which it was baked, and the flour for the crust added an equal weight. The oven that received this burden of nearly two tons measured thirteen feet in length by nine feet in width and two feet in depth. When nicely browned, the giant pie, gayly decked with flowers and guarded by mounted police, was drawn in procession by fourteen horses to the place of feasting.

Here, at a fixed hour, it was solemnly carved with a knife close upon three feet long and a fork of proportionate size, and served on commemoration plates to all persons who paid for the privilege of thus tasting it. The edacious crowd numbered thousands, and few returned from the scene of festivity without a souvenir.

That was the sixth big pie to delight the epicures of Denby Dale. The first, which dates back more than a hundred years, was intended to mark the thankfulness of the inhabitants for the recovery of George III. from mental derangement. Nearly thirty years elapsed before another event occurred worthy of such signal regard. This was the battle of Waterloo. The oldest inhabitant cannot recall the Waterloo pie, but it was, no doubt, a famous affair, for, when another generation had come to maturity, it found a pattern for the great pie of '46, by which Denby Dale testified satisfaction at the repeal of the Corn laws.—New York Journal.

LUCK OF A BRIDESMAID.

She Caught the Bride's Bouquet and Discovered a Profitable Occupation.

Under ordinary circumstances, painting flowers in water colors isn't a source of immense profit. Nevertheless, there is a girl in Boston who is reaping a rich harvest from it. It all began in this way. The young artist was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of a wealthy friend; and was the lucky one who caught the bride's bouquet when it was thrown to the maids. The idea occurred to her that it would be a graceful thing to make a sketch of the bouquet and give it to the bride; and being clever with her brush and having a keen sense of artistic possibilities, she succeeded in combining the rather stiff bouquet, a fan, a polished table, and a shimmering pale green scarf into a delicious bit of color and sentiment.

The bride was in ecstacies. So were her friends. Soon one of the bridesmaids needed bridesmaids of her own. It wasn't the artist, in spite of her luck in catching the bouquet. This bride refused to be happy unless she, too, could have a sketch of her bridal bouquet. The artist charged a good price this time, and, to her surprise, found herself the originator of a social fad. She became as much a part of a swell wedding as the caterer, florist, or bridegroom. Being gifted with a share of the wisdom of the serpent, she saw that the thing was too good to last, and that the opportunity must be improved while it did last, so she boldly put her prices up to a most extravagant figure. That only set the seal upon her popularity, and made her still more necessary to a wedding. She momentarily expects the frost to strike her, but, meanwhile, she gathers her harvest of shekels and sings hymns of praise to the ancient and honorable institution of matrimony.—New York Sun.

A Cousin by Adoption.

A correspondent of the Bookman suggests an incident about Irving that is novel and interesting: That Irving was a friend of the Knickerbockers of Schaghticoke is well known, but not, I think, the reason why he adopted himself into the family. While Harmon Knickerbocker, who was presumably upon intimate terms with Irving, was a member of congress, he had occasion to present Irving to President Madison, and in so doing facetiously introduced him as his "cousin-german, Diedrich Knickerbocker, from old Schaghticoke." Irving was rather taken aback, but the sobriquet so took his fancy that he made use of it as a pen name when he wrote his famous history of New York, in which he refers several times to his "cousin the congressman."

Monkey as an Imitator.

At Cheltenham, England, there lives a retired Admiral and his wife, who have a favorite monkey. One day recently the lady, hearing a strange noise in the dining room, looked in to see what it was. The sight which met her eyes was a ludicrous one. Seated in the armchair, with the Admiral's smoking cap on his head, and the Admiral's spectacles on his nose, was the monkey, and in his hand was the open newspaper, which he shook and patted, while he jabbered and gesticulated with great emphasis at the cat, which lay blinking on the hearth rug. It was a clever and carefully studied imitation of the testy old Admiral's tone and manner when reading to his wife some passages from the newspaper which excited his wrath or indignation.

DEATH ON THE LEHIGH

Two Passenger Trains Come Together Head-On.

AN OPERATOR AT FAULT.

A Wreck in the Early Morning Had Put All Business on a Single Track. The Fourth Accident Within a Week Between these two Station of the Lehigh Company.

New York, Jan. 10.--Through a blunder of the railroad telegraph operator at South Plainfield, so it is now ascertained, thirteen persons are known to have lost their lives, and upward of forty are more or less seriously injured in the collision yesterday afternoon on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen, N. J.

The excursion train was filled with business men and their families, from Pennsylvania towns, and about one hundred men were on their way here to witness the McCoy-Sharkey fight tonight.

Both trains were on the west bound track owing to the fact that the east bound track, near Dunellen, was temporarily blocked by a wreck of freigh trains.

According to the best information now obtainable the accident occurred through the action of the operator at South Plainfield allowing the excursion train to go by, when the railroad officials say that he had been ordered to hold all trains.

However that may be, the excursion went by and met the east bound local from New York head on.

Both trains, it seems, were coming at full speed, and the two were crashed together with terrific force. Because there were comparatively few passengers on the local the loss of life was largely confined to the excursion.

As it was they tore into each other, crashing through the frail woodwork of the cars and strewing the tracks with the wreckage and the dead and wounded.

On the special train from the coal regions was a theatre party from Sunbury, Pa., consisting of ten persons, some of the most prominent people in the town.

The Dead:

Frank Fischer, shoe dealer, Mount Carmel Pa.
Jacob Heller, tailor, Mount Carmel, Pa.
William Hinkle, contractor, Mount Carmel, Pa.

Among those who arrived in the Central New Jersey local were O. R. Staine. Young Staine gave his experience as follows:

"I do not know much about the locality where the wreck occurred. I was reading the newspaper when the trains collided. The train was going at a pretty good rate at the time. I heard the locomotive whistle just before the collision. The next thing I knew there was a great crash and I was thrown over several seats. My right leg was caught in the seat and glass and splinters of wood were flying all about me. I was struck on the head by something which stunned me for a while.

"Then I heard the shrieks and cries of the wounded and the escaping of steam, and it was something horrible. I managed to crawl out from the car and was lifted from the wreckage by a couple of train hands. When I tried to stand up I found I could not. My ankle was sprained or broken. I was assisted to a pile of railroad ties and sat down. I had a good chance to see the wreck from where I was. It was indescribable. The front car of our train was almost split in two. The locomotives were nothing but a mass of twisted iron and brass. I could hear the cries and groans of those in the wreck. All the time the steam was escaping. A fire broke out in one of the wrecked cars, but was put out. I saw the train hands and others helping people out, tearing away the woodwork of the cars. The front coaches of both trains were smashed, and the rear cars were also badly smashed.

"There were a large number of persons on our train who, owing to lack of assistance, were unable to help themselves as I did, and I believe if they had had prompt assistance they would have perhaps survived. The escaping steam, it seemed to me, enveloped all of the front cars and made it hard for the people rescuing to get at the dead and wounded. It was a horrible spectacle and I never want to see another like it."

This is the fourth accident within a week on the Lehigh Valley Railroad in the six miles of track between Bound Brook and Newmarket.

Owing to another accident there in the morning, the two trains, bound in opposite directions, were compelled to use the same track.

Both trains were proceeding at top speed and the west bound train ploughed through the east bound train.

As soon as the news of the wreck could be placed on the wire physicians were called from Dunellen, Bound Brook and Newmarket.

Dr. Whitford of New Market, Dr. Drakeley of Dunellen and Dr. Fisher of Bound Brook were the first to respond.

The injured who had been extricated during the first few minutes after the disaster, were sent by special train to the Muhlenberg Hospital, in Plainfield.

A Jersey Central train standing by conveyed other injured men to Plainfield.

The local express was bound from Bound Brook for Jersey City, while the other express was on its way to Buffalo. The express does not stop, and the engineer was running under a heavy head of steam when the accident occurred.

Engineer Rich was in the cab of the local train. There were many passengers in the train on their way to New York.

The local was crossing near the freight train wreck to get on the clear track, when the express struck it at the railroad crossing.

As soon as the news of the disaster spread crowds began to flock to the scene of the accident. The work of rescue was immediately begun.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Republicans in Control at the Organization at Trenton To-day.

Trenton, N. J., an. 10.--At the organization of the legislature, which met at noon to-day, Senator Charles A. Reed of Somerset was selected president and Augustus S. Barber of Gloucester secretary of the Senate. He filled the office before and is popular. He is secretary of the Republican state committee.

Walter E. Edge of Atlantic is journal clerk, Edgar Williams of Essex engrossing clerk, and George W. Cooper of Somerset bill clerk. J. Frank Lindsley, editor of the Morris County Chronicle, is assistant secretary. He was landed by Senator Pitney. While Senator Johnson of Bergen will be the Republican leader, Mr. Pitney will be expected to conduct any fight that may be precipitated by Senator McDermott or any other Democrat.

The House organization is led by David O. Watkins as speaker and Thomas H. Jones as clerk.

The leading men in the coming legislature are lawyers, as is generally the case in Jersey legislatures. In the Senate the legal profession is represented by Senators Cross, Reed, Pitney, Johnson, McDermott, Van Cleaf and Martin.

In the House the speaker, and Messrs. Jones, Bell, Wakelee, McKee, Lewis, Wood, Blackwell, Abbett, Benny, Marks, Murphy, Manuel and Watschied are lawyers.

The oldest solon is Senator Tunger of Gloucaester, aged 63 years. Assemblyman White of Warren is sixty-two. The youngest senator is Mr. Stokes of Cumberland. He is thirty-eight. He has been the youngest member for the six years he has served. He is beginning his third term. Mr. Woolley of Monmouth is the youngest assemblyman. He is only twenty-three. The average age of the twenty-one senators is forty-eight. There are nine senators over fifty.

The average age of the sixty members of the assembly is forty-one. Eleven of them are over fifty, and nine are under thirty. The Senate contains twelve former assemblymen. Senator Cross was speaker of the House four years ago. Senator Stokes is entering upon his third term, and Senator Johnson upon his second, while Senator Ketcham of Essex is completing his second term. All the other senators are in their first terms.

John King of Passaic is the father of the House, not because of his age, but owing to length of service. This is his seventh term as an assemblyman although not consecutive. Carroll of Hudson is beginning his fifth term, but neither is his consecutive. McMurray of Camden is beginning his fourth term and Watkins of Gloucester and Martens of Hunterdon are starting on their third terms. Twenty-five of the assemblymen have never appeared in legislative halls before.

Byram Sentenced to Seven Years.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 10.--Seven years in state prison and $500 fine was the sentence imposed by Judge Fort on Geo. W. Byram, ex-bank president and lawyer, for uttering a check for $15,000. Another charge against Byram, the alleged uttering of a check for $10,000, was not pressed by the state. The time sentence imposed was the maximum. The maximum fine is $2,000.

Byram appeared before the bar as nattily dressed as ever. His hair was carefully brushed and his brown Van Dyke beard had been trained and trimmed into perfect symmetry.

He was impassive except when the judge finished his remarks in passing sentence.

Chairman Dingley's Condition.

Washington, Jan. 10.--Representative Dingley's condition is again such as to cause his family much concern. He is simply holding his own. His system, weakened by disease, refuses to respond to the nourishment and medicines given him.

The patient was in an extremely nervous condition, although it is said there has been no decided change. Through the night he has had periods of consciousness and recognized his friends, but there was much delirium.

GENERAL MILLER'S INSTRUCTIONS.

Told to Land and Communicate with the Insurgents.

Washington, Jan. 10.--The government's instructions sent to General Miller at Iloilo, were to land and get in communication with the insurgents. This is as far as his orders have gone, except that when he has established communication with the insurgent officials and people he is to make public the purposes of the United States government.

Not a shot is to be fired by the forces of this country unless they are attacked, or until further orders are given from here.

This programme was agreed upon between President McKinley and Secretary Alger several days ago.

Secretary Alger was at the White House for some time yesterday afternoon. He stated in the most emphatic terms that no alarming news has come from General Otis and he did not believe a shot had been fired so far, or that one would be fired.

He is confident that General Miller will be able to handle the situation successfully and obtain control of Iloilo without bloodshed. He is of the opinion that the insurgents have been so long imposed upon that they are naturally suspicious, and fear the worst if they surrender their strongholds into the hands of the United States.

Filipinos Blame Americans.

London, Jan. 10.--The Filipino junta of Paris has received a telegram from the Filipino agent at Hong Kong saying:

"Fight with the Americans unavoidable. We are not the aggressors."

A telegram from an English house at Manila says that the situation is strained and that there is much anxiety there.

The dispatch also contained news from Iloilo, the substance of which was that the American troops had not yet landed.

Harder Than 6 day Race.

New York Jan. 10.--The twenty-four hour bicycle race which ended in Madison Square Garden Saturday night, is declared by the riders and trainers to have been the most remarkable athletic contest ever held.

There has never been a long distance cycle race in which the leaders have been so close together, and there has never been a race in which head work and not speed was such an important factor.

The riders and trainers all agree that the race was harder on the riders than any contest they ever rode in or witnessed; much more so than a six-day race.

It was the alternating pace that killed the contestants. For four or five laps they would sprint around the little track at a two-minute-for-the-mile gait.

Then they would settle down to a four-minute gait, only to start another sprint in a few minutes.

A Quay Decision To-day.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.--No decision was rendered by the supreme court yesterday upon the application of Senator Quay, Richard Quay and former State Treasurer Haywood for a writ of certiorari argument upon which was heard on Saturday.

It is now believed that the court will make its opinion known to-day. The court spent some time in conference on Saturday after the argument had been heard, and it is rumored that it arrived at a decision. But there has been no time since that for the writing of a formal opinion.

Several members of the legislature were in court yesterday morning, but all of them were of the anti-Quay persuasion. Neither counsel for the commonwealth nor for the petitioners was present although representatives from the offices of Messrs. Shields and Shapley, Senator Quay's attorneys, were in the room.

Gov. Roosevelt and the Police.

Albany, Jan. 10.--Governor Roosevelt will have no announcement to make regarding the New York city police administration until he has gone over the field carefully, and certainly not until he has fully digested the report of John McCullagh as superintendent of the metropolitan election district. If a good military officer could be found to put at the head of the police department in place of the present police board, the idea certainly would find much favor with the governor. What is wanted is a non-partisan and not a bi-partisan administration of police affairs in New York city. Such an officer has been suggested in the person of General Roe, present commanding officer of the National Guard.

Alaska's High Taxation.

Washington, Jan. 10.--Governor Brady of Alaska, who has arrived here, is anxious for the enactment of the Carter bill, which has passed the Senate and is in committee in the House, making three judicial districts in Alaska. He says that there should be greater appropriations for administrative purposes, pointing out that the marshal is unable to make arrests on the numerous islands for lack of transportation funds, and that the governor has none to aid him with.

The governor wants the school appropriation this year raised to sixty thousand dollars. He says many people who rushed into the Klondike region are coming out, largely because of high taxation, and that thousands have started for the Atlin district.

A Workingmen's Convention.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 10.--The second annual convention of the State Workingmen's Federation was called to order by President James A. Lavery of Poughkeepsie, in the supervisor's room in this city, this morning.

About two hundred delegates, representing more than one hundred and fifty organizations, from all sections of the state are in attendance at the convention.

The federation was organized in this city last January by the amalgamation of the Workingmen's Assembly of the state of New York and the New York State Federation of Labor.

With the Maria Teresa.

Nassau, New Providence, Jan. 10.--The Italian bark Vedora, Captain Capurre, which sailed from Genoa on November 14 for Savannah, stranded at Cat Island on January 4 and became a total loss. The crew were saved.

WILD BIRD'S EGGS AS FOOD.

Many That Are Eaten in Europe and Regarded as Delicacies.

In Germany and Holland crows' eggs are considered a luxury among the poorer classes, and on Prince Bismarck's eighty-third birthday a present of one hundred of these was made to him. The eggs of the rook are also looked upon as delicate food by the Germans and Hollanders. The Chinese are not only fond of swallows' nest soup, but they eat the eggs of this little bird with great relish.

Among the South Sea Islands the natives depend largely upon this kind of food, which the birds prepare for them in nests, and so important is the source of this food considered that they will rarely destroy the birds. On the great rookeries they have found the eggs supplied abundantly for them for ages, and they gather them so easily that there is no disposition to destroy the birds. It is only when civilized man comes, intent upon destroying the birds for their feathers and plumes, that these great island rookeries have been depopulated.

In Friesland the farmers have almost tamed the sheldrakes like domesticated fowls. The sheldrakes have laid their eggs in countless numbers on the heaths of the Dutch Norfolk, and the farmers, instead of killing the birds or frightening them away cultivate their acquaintance and build artificial burrows or nests in the grass for them. In these nests the sheldrakes go on laying their eggs, despite the fact that they are almost daily robbed of them. In some instances the female birds will even permit the farmers to handle them to remove the eggs. In return for all this the farmers protect the birds, and after a certain season they permit the birds to sit on their eggs and hatch out young ones. The young sheldrakes are protected just as much as our young barnyard chickens are.

The chief eggs that are sold for eating in Holland and other European cities include those of the wild ducks and fowls, gulls, plovers, sheldrakes, meadow-hens, guillemots, peewits, redshanks, turnstones, snipe, curlews, dunlins, crows, rooks, cranes, herons, coots, storks, pelicans, vultures, hawks, owls and many of the smaller land birds. These wild birds' eggs are cheaper in many countries than hens' eggs, and they constitute the chief egg diet of both rich and poor.—Boston Transcript.

GAME RECORD OF THE KAISER.

A Fine Score for a Hunter Who Can Use Only One Arm in Shooting.

In view of the fact that the kaiser's left arm is withered and useless, his record of 33,967 head of game killed with his own hand during the last two decades is a remarkable one. It is contained in his game book, which has recently been published for private circulation among the royal personages and court circles of Europe. Comprised in this total are some "pieces" which do not fall to the lot of every sportsman. Thus there are a couple of so-called "aurochsen," a species of bison that is still to be found in certain remote districts of Europe. It was exceedingly plentiful a thousand years ago, but is now almost entirely extinct. Then there are 2,175 wild boars, sixteen thousand hares, seven elk shot in Sweden, three reindeer killed in Norway and half a dozen bears, three of which were laid low in Russia and the others in Hungary. Stags figure for 1,289, pheasants at 9,643, while the emperor has only managed to bag three snipes. The record of 121 chamois is distinctly good when it is remembered what an exceedingly difficult game this is to shoot, entailing as it does, mountaineering of the most arduous and perilous character.

It must be borne in mind in connection with this game book that the kaiser cannot use his left arm to support his gun or to take aim. He is obliged to rest his weapon upon the shoulder or arm of the keeper or loader who attends him on these expeditions, and to shoot with a light rifle or fowling piece, specially constructed for him.—New York Tribune.

A SERF'S FORETHOUGHT.

Bought His Freedom With a Barrel of Oysters.

Count Scheremetef, an immensely and powerful Russian noble who lived in the early part of the century, had among his serfs a man named Schalouchine, who had amassed an enormous fortune. He had offered as much as $250,000 for his freedom, but in vain. One day Scheremetef gave a dinner party, and to his disgust there were no oysters to begin the banquet with. "They were not to be had at any price," replied the steward. At that moment Schalouchine was ushered in among the guests, and Scheremetef bullied him as usual. "Your freedom," he yelled, "you cannot have it if you offer a million of rubles. A million, pshaw! a few dozen oysters would be worth more than that to me at this moment." "Do I understand then, my lord, that you grant me my freedom if I procured them for you?" "Yes," was the answer. Schalouchine had brought a barrel of oysters, having heard of the dinner. The deed of freedom was immediately signed, Schalouchine took his place among the guests, and his descendants are not only the wealthiest bankers in Russia but were ennobled about a quarter of a century ago.—London Illustrated News.

Fix the Responsibility.

The second thought of the wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad yesterday noon immediately suggests the question: Who was responsible for those two trains coming together with such frightful results?

The cause of this accident cannot be attributed to an unforeseen defect in any mechanism of the railroad system or to a combination of circumstances which could not be prevented. It is obvious that some man was criminally negligent in his duty of exercising care and caution for the safety of the lives of the passengers on the two trains that came together. Of course, it lies between the train dispatcher at Easton, who exercises control over the running of the trains on that section of the road, the telegraph operators at South Plainfield and at Bound Brook, and the engineers of the two trains.

If the train dispatcher had notified the operator at South Plainfield or the one at Bound Brook to hold either one of the trains at their station or to notify one of the engineers to sidetrack between the two points until the other train had passed it, the next turn of responsibility would fall upon the operator who received the instructions. The operator who received such instructions would necessarily have to furnish the engineer and the conductor of the train with the information. Or, if he failed to do so, the responsibility for the catastrophe would be on his head. But if he performed his part of the duty in delivering such instructions, as it is obvious should have been promulgated to have avoided the accident, the responsibility would fall upon the engineer to whom they were addressed.

Each of the men to whom the responsibility for the accident may be due naturally disclaims the liability for the occurence. We have no doubt but that the Coroners of Middlesex and Somerset counties, in whose bailiwicks the responsibility for the accident must first be fixed, will exercise a thorough investigation, insofar as their powers extend, to determine who is to blame for the immense loss of life and maiming of the survivors. It should be so.

The only view that can be taken of the cause of the accident is that it was due to gross and criminal negligence on the part of some man connected with the railroad company, and it merits a searching investigation.

Hospital's Splendid Work.

The work that the medical staff and the nurses at the Muhlenberg Hospital have done in caring for the unfortunates who were victims of the terrible castastrophe on the Lehigh Valley Railroad yesterday, is magnificent. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon them.

With the hospital already filled to its utmost capacity with local patients, and the attendants' time completely occupied in caring for them, when the urgent call came for the admission of the wreck victims the responce was quick and liberal. The sudden admission of so many poor human beings, crushed and maimed, many in their dying hours, necessarily turned the hospital from the routine ways, that ordinary patients involve, into emergency ways and means to provide room and proper treatment for them. But the hospital staff and all connected with the institution did nobly under the circumstances.

The sympathetic treatment that was received by the survivors of the disaster undoubtedly prolonged many a life to the point where it will result in the prevention of death. Praise of such work and under the circumstances is not conveyed in words, but is appreciated in the silent and inexpressable thoughts of the mind.

It is announced that at the union service of the churches this evening, which will be held at the First Presbyterian church, a special collection will be taken for the aid of the hospital in view of the special needs that have been imposed on the institution by the frightful accident. Such a collection should appeal to deep sympathies and great liberality. It is a well-known fact, frequently referred to in The Daily Press, that the finances of the hospital are always at low ebb, but at this time the physicians and nurses should not be handicapped for a single moment by the lack of any article which will aid to relieve the pain and agony of the poor wreck victims. That collection should be a big one.

THE HICKS PASHA GUN.

Among the relics of England's Egyptian campaigns is the gun shown in the illustration. It was captured by the Dervishes when Wad-en-Njumi annihilated the army of Hicks Pasha, and retaken in one of the Omdurman forts by Elmslie's battery. Two spokes are missing from the left wheel. Leaning against it is a great Baggara war drum.

Reed May Be Governor.

The Trenton correspondent of the Philadelphia Record says:

There are a good many lawyers and bright politicians who believe that as soon as Chas. A. Reed is elected president of the Senate Tuesday he will become Acting Governor. It is held that the recent decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the resignation of Acting Governor Voorhees and the authority of Speaker of the House Watkins in the exercise of the functions of that office also made plain the fact that the incoming president of the Senate must needs become the Acting Governor until the actual Governor takes the oath of office Tuesday of next week. That would make Reed Acting Governor for a week. On the other hand, however, it is contended that under the Court's interpretation of the constitution Speaker Watkins must continue to act as Governor until the regularly-elected Executive is inaugurated. It is generally understood, however, that the Speaker will continue as the Acting Chief Executive until Voorhees takes the chair.

Two American girls of the right sort can do a great many interesting things in Paris. The two girls in "An American Aspirant," a serial story which The Daily Press will commence publishing tomorrow, are the right sort. They represented their country as it should be represented. One succeeded in her object—to sing in grand opera. The other led a broken down but titled Frenchman a lively race and finally gave her heart to a deserving, manly American. The story is well told. It is full of interest and at the same time presents two forceful pictures of real value. One depicts the hardships attending the American aspirant for vocal success abroad. The other shows the cold blooded business side of the traffic in American womanhood and foreign titles.

All the talk about making Admiral Dewey the Democractic nominee for President is shattered by the announcement made by his brother up in Vermont, who says that the famous sea fighter is a Republican, but not a partisan one. His brother says the admiral had never voted since he entered the navy in 185.. He has never been where he could vote. His legal residence is in Montpelier, and he would vote there if anywhere.

The Bayonne Budget pays the following compliment to The Daily Press on the calendar issued from this office Christmas Day:

One doesn't wonder at the success of the Plainfield Daily Press when one looks at the pictures of the sturdy, energetic looking eighteen boys, with the circulation manager, C. F. Stout, who attends to the circulation of this well-conducted paper, which forms the interesting feature of its calendar for 1899. Plainfield has a nice paper and nice looking boys.

Mr. Frame received ovation after ovation. His reputation as one of the great comedians of the day is well deserved. His appearance when not in character disguise is not much in his favor; but instantly he begins his entertainment that is forgotten, and the audience cannot but in enjoy him. His characters were decided hits, and a study in themselves, his gestures most amusing, and his singing quite up to the mark. His best numbers, perhaps, were "Garibaldi's Cair is Vacant" and "The Bonnie Hoose o' Ivy." He proved himself generous in responding to encores, and the audience did not fail to impose on his good nature in this respect.—Ottawa Citizen. Frame will be in Music Hall Friday night.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

In selecting Editor Bateman, of Somerville, as his private secretary, Senator Reed extends the olive branch to his rival leader, ex-Senator Thompson. It is nice to be an olive branch when there is a good salary attached.—Newark News.

* * * * *

Somerset county received no recognition in the elections for Senate President or Speaker of the House until 1891, when James J. Bergen, Democrat, was elected Speaker and served two years. In 1896 Lewis A. Thompson, Republican, was elected President of the Senate, and resigned toward the close of the session to take the office of Chancery Clerk. Senator Charles A. Reed has received the caucus nomination for Senate President this year. Somerset is getting to be quite an important political bailiwick.—Newark Advertiser.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A slight degree of accuracy at least is necessary for the enjoyment of a joke. When Life tries to be funny and in a telephonic conversation with the Czar on the subject of Peace, quotes the Beatitude, "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall inherit the earth," one cannot help thinking instinctively that the joke would have had more point if its originator had not mixed the Beatitudes to secure its manufacture. The blessedness and prophecy attached to the Peacemaker is "higher up" and of quite a different character.

THERE IS A CLASS OF PEOPLE who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15c and 25c per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 10.—Mrs. Jeremiah Dunham has been spending several days visiting in Westfield.

Mrs. J. B. Conover fell and broke her ankle Sunday, and Dr. Brakeley was called in to set it. Mrs. Conover's accident is the second one of its kind she has suffered. She had just got out of the house again after being shut up for three months with a similar injury.

Henry Garretson's wife, two children and servant girl are ill at his home with the diphtheria. The contagion first appeared in the family and then began to run its course, attacking the mother and her little ones one after the other.

Mrs. Charles Apgar, of Westfield, spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Emily Apgar.

Eugene Runyon's sale of household goods will be held this coming Saturday night.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Jan. 10—Isaac Brokaw, of Piscataway, died Sunday evening after a lingering illness due to several strokes of paralysis. No arrangements for the funeral, as yet, except that the remains will be interred at Springfield. He leaves two sons, Edgar S., of Plainfield; John J., a farmer, living in Piscataway; Mrs. Lant, also of Piscataway, and one other daughter who has lived at home and cared for her father during his illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Manning Randolph spent yesterday with Mrs. A. Randolph, of Dunellen.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.

Scotch Plains, Jan. 10—The contest for the trumpet, offered by Hale, the wonder-worker, to the most popular fire company in town, ended last evening and was won by Bucket and Engine Company.

Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, meet and install officers for the ensuing year this evening. A delegation from Cranford Council is expected, and a general good time is promised.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Emery and daughter, of Bayonne, are the guests of Mr. Emery's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Emery.

Miss Emma Clark, assistant postmistress, has returned from a short visit with her sister in Hazlet, this State.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Schmidt have returned from a visit with relatives in Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Mooney have been entertaining friends from Brooklyn.

E. L. Hand spent yesterday in Elizabeth.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 10—The members of Bucket and Engine Company had a big time last evening. After they had elected their officers they proceeded to the dining parlors of Mr. Sheelan and partook of a bountiful supper. The officers elected were: Foreman, Charles E. Cox; first assistant foreman, F. P. Demming; second assistant foreman, E. C. Winters; president, Albert Wilcox; secretary, Chas. Clark; treasurer, C. F. W. Wittke; sergant-at-arms, David J. Burke.

The social event of the season in Westfield will come off February 10th, when the Social Club gives its annual masquerade ball. The ball was so largely attended last year that the guests could not all get into the large hall, and for that reason this year the members will be allowed only one

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion build up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Guaranteed.

Death of Mrs. James M. Billings.

Mrs. Julia H. wife of the late James M. Billings died suddenly of pneumonia Saturday evening, January 7th. Her funeral took place this morning at her late residence, 34 Gramercy Park, New York. Mrs. Billings was the mother of Mrs. Irving Howard Brown, of Central avenue, and was well-known and highly esteemed by many Plainfield friends.

George Mobus, of Washingtonville, is confined to his bed with inflammatory rheumatism.

The condition of Robert Radford, of West Front street, does not seem to be much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cook, of East Seventh street, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Edwin DeGraw, of Philadelphia.

Miss Bertha Swackhamer, of Whitehouse, is keeping house for Mr. and Mrs. George S. Duffore, of West Second street, who is visiting in Middle Valley, N. Y.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ELEPHANTS WITH MEMORIES.

One That Avenged an Injury and Another That Recognized a Benefactor.

Elephants have a way of remembering injuries and kindnesses which surprises men not accustomed to the beasts. E. L. Layard and his wife were in Ceylon, in the Ambigamoa district. They were journeying along gathering insects, shells and birds by easy stages when they came to the station of a road making party, which was in charge of Woodford Birch. Mrs. Layard was interested in elephants not having seen any close at hand, so Mr. Birch took her out to see a large fine female. Mrs. Layard petted the beast, gave it a bunch of plantains, which were eaten with a relish, and after making comments on the beast's gentleness returned to the bungalow. There Mr. Birch incidentally remarked that it was a violent beast, having killed two keepers during the past month. When Mr. Layard heard that he reproached Mr. Birch, while Mrs. Layard grew pale. Then Mr. Birch said:

"Do you think I would have allowed Mrs. Layard to go near her if there had been danger? That elephant is the quietest and best tempered beast in the stud. She was quite right to kill the keepers. They had robbed her of her food. I had observed that she was growing thin, and seeing only a little grain or feed in the box one day, I rated the keeper soundly in the presence of the beast. Next day he took her out to work. She went along quietly till she came to a flat rock. Then she wrapped her trunk about the mahout, put him against the rock, and with her forehead squeezed his life out. The next man she killed was for the same offence."

Dan Quinton and Mr. Layard were in Colombo when Quinton heard elephants trumpeting, and wanted to go and see them. One of the beasts was tied up with more chains than the others, and Quinton went toward this one, in spite of the warnings of the keepers that it was a particularly vicious beast. Quinton put his arm around the elephant's trunk and petted it, the elephant seeming most pleased. Quinton had recognized it as an elephant he had seen injured by a huge thorn, or jungle nail. The keeper in trying to pull the thorn out had broken it off. In a few days inflammation had set in. Quinton went to work with a knife and a pair of pincers, and the elephant, in spite of the pain, allowed the man to take the thorn out. He had recognized the beast by the scar, and the elephant remembered him after several years.

Just an Easy One.

"Let the children ask all the questions they want to," is the domestic motto of a gentleman connected with the Smithsonian Institution. In his case the rule is safer than it would be in most homes, for he is regarded by his acquaintances as a compendium of almost any branch of learning that happens to come under discussion. His boys, having his reputation as an endorsement of their natural confidence in his wisdom, regard him as infallible. Being youths of active intellect, they never allow him to run any risk of ennui. He had just put on his overcoat and had his hand on the door knob, when one of them hailed him:

"Father, will you please tell me something?"

"I haven't time now."

"I only want to ask one quetion."

"Can't you wait until tonight?"

"I might forget it."

"Try to remember it. It will be good mental discipline. Good-by."

"I wanted ever so much to know right away," he persisted.

"But——"

"It won't take you a minute."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes."

His father looked at his watch and said:

"Well, go ahead. What is your question?"

"Why, all I wanted to know is how they work miracles and make condensed milk."—Washington Star.

She Knew the General.

During the American Civil War, while in command of a division of Confederates, the late General Mahone was slightly wounded. An acquaintance about to visit Richmond was requested to call upon Mrs. Mahone, to relieve her anxiety by explaining the nature of her husband's injury. He found her in tears, having already received the news by telegraph. "Why, madam," he expostulated, "you ought not to give yourself so much concern. Your husband received only a flesh wound; no bones were injured." (General Mahone was very small and very lean.) "Ah, Colonel," she sobbed, "you—don't know the—General as well as I—I do, or you wouldn't tell me—me he could be—be wounded without striking a bone!"

Sleep Plenty and Live Long.

"The proper way to economize life," says Tesla, the electrician, "is to sleep every moment that it is not necessary or desirable that you should be awake."

"A man in his lifetime has just so many hours to be awake, and the fewer of these he uses up each day, the more days they will last—that is, the longer he will live.

"I believe that a man might live 150 years if he would sleep most of that time. That is why negroes often live to advanced old age, because they sleep so much. It is said that Gladstone sleeps seventeen hours every day; that is why his faculties are still unimpaired, in spite of his great age."

What is it we all frequently say we will do, and no one has ever yet done? —Stop a minute.

TURNED OVER BY A MACHINE.

A Contrivance Which Enables One to Pass the Nights in Comfort.

The San Francisco Examiner tells about a man who has invented an apparatus to turn him over in bed. The man is Walter Hyde. Mr. Hyde is quite old and is troubled with an incomplete circulation of the blood, causing sleeplessness. If he remains in one position long a mild form of paralysis follows and he cannot sleep at all. Mr. Hyde concluded that if he had some mechanical means to turn himself over hourly at night he could go to sleep and not be under the necessity of awakening.

Being somewhat of a mechanical turn of mind, Mr. Hyde concluded to experiment. The result of his tinkering and thinking is the mechanical contrivance which hourly turns him over without awakening him from his slumbers, and which he says works so charmingly that his paralysis with accompanying sleeplessness is a thing of the past. The frame on which the mattress rests hangs from the bedstead by means of pinions, one at the head and the other at the foot. The frame is kept in position by being secured at the sides to a clock-like apparatus with cogs and levers to tilt the mattress frame, the motion of the rocking being governed by the clock and spring apparatus. The tilting of the frame is so nicely graduated that the sleeper is unconscious of the change, but continues undisturbed in his night's sleep, as the mechanism attached to the frame automatically changes his position during the hour to the right or to the left side as the case may be.

MONEY IN APPLE CORES.

Used by Confectioners in the Manufacture of Jelly and Syrups.

A market for cores and skins of apples has been opened in South Water street, Chicago.

In the large hotels the apple cores accumulate in goodly quantity each day and the collection of a month would have a selling value of several dollars. In most of the restaurants and hotels this fruit refuse is thrown away with the garbage. If it were collected and desiccated it could be turned into delicious jelly and syrup. This is the use to which the apple cores and skins are put in Chicago and this is the reason there is a market for them. Confectioners purchase them occasionally in large quantities and pay as high as one cent a pound. The average price is about one-quarter cent a pound.

It matters not what kind of an apple core it is. Nor is it important whether the core has been cut with a silver knife or gnawed by the teeth—everything goes, for when these dried cores and skins are used to make jelly, syrup or gelatine they pass through a process of cleansing and filteration.—New York Journal.

Peculiar Peruvian Pottery.

A distinguishing feature of much of the Peruvian pottery is a long, slim neck, and nearly every vessel is ornamented with a figure of some sort, having holes to represent eyes and other openings. These afford a passage for the air forced out by the liquid when poured into the vessel. By an ingenious contrivance the air in escaping produces a sound similar to the cry of the creature represented. Thus a utensil decorated with two monkeys embracing each other, on having water poured into or from it, would give a sound like the screeching of those animals. One decorated with a bird would emit bird-like notes, while a mountain cat on one jar would mew, snakes coiled around another would hiss. One of the most curious of these figures was that of an aged woman. When the jar was in use her sobs became audible, and tears trickled down her cheeks. The manufacturers seem to have known all about atmospheric pressure.

Unexplainable Explanation.

A gentleman, talking with a young woman, admitted that he had failed to keep abreast of the scientific progress of the age.

"For instance," said he, "I don't understand how the incandescent light, now so extensively used, is procured."

"Oh, it is very simple," said the lady, with the air of one who knows it all. "You just turn a button over the lamp, and the lights appear at once."—Judge.

Rather Fastidious.

A French lady, learning the English language, had made very good progress, she thought, and one day accepted an invitation to dine with some English friends. As the dinner went on, she was offered a dish that was new to her. Not fancying its appearance, she declined it, saying:

"Thanks, no. I eat only acquaintances."

Highly Considerate.

"If it wasn't for me my class in school wouldn't have any standing at all," said Hubert.

"Nonsense!" said his aunt. "Your mother says you are the foot of it."

"I am," said Hubert. "How could it stand if it didn't have a foot?"—Harper's Round Table.

The Farmer's Correct Idea.

Tennyson used to tell a story of a farmer, who, after hearing a red-hot sermon of never-ending fire and brimstone, consoled his wife quite sincerely with the naive remark:

"Never mind, Sally; that must be wrong; no constitooshun could stand it."—Tid-Bits.

Of Ancient Origin.

The cultivation of the peach in China has been traced back to the tenth century before Christ.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Die Strafkammer verurtheilte drei internationale Glücksspieler, den Kaufmann Spitzki aus Regenwalde, den Büffetier Berger von Ragnit und den Kellner Löw von Arad wegen Falschspiels; der erstere erhielt ein Jahr, die beiden letzteren neun Monate Gefängniß. Sie hatten in Baden-Baden einem Hamburger Rentner während der Rennsaison circa 1500 Mark in „Meine-Deine" abgenommen.

Baden-Baden. Hier hat der Bijouterie-Fabrikant Schaeffler aus Pforzheim Selbstmord begangen.

Heidelberg. Das erste der Genesungsheime des Vereins „Genesungsfürsorge" ist nunmehr fertiggestellt und wird demnächst seiner Bestimmung übergeben werden. Es ist in Rohrbach errichtet worden und zwar aus einem ehemaligen Schlößchen, zu dem ein großer parkartiger Garten gehört.

Mannheim. Der Rechtskonsulent Friedrich Stumpf von Weinheim, der in den letzten Jahren Geldbeträge von zusammen 8460 Mark, die er für eine Reihe von Auftraggebern einkassirte, veruntreut hatte, wurde von der Strafkammer zu einer Gefängnißstrafe von einem Jahr acht Monaten verurtheilt.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Mülhausen. Hier wurde ein Schiffsknecht, der mit mehreren Leuten in einer Wirthschaft Streit bekommen hatte und nachher von diesen verfolgt wurde, in den Rhein-Rhone-Kanal geworfen. Er wurde am anderen Morgen todt aus dem Wasser gezogen. Anfangs glaubte man an einen Unfall, doch hat sich jetzt herausgestellt, daß Mord vorliegt. Vier verdächtige Personen sind bereits verhaftet.

Saarburg. Dieser Tage hat im Hofer Walde zwischen dem Artilleriehauptmann von der Planitz und dem Ulanen-Rittmeister Schede ein Zweikampf stattgefunden, in dem letzterer schwer verwundet wurde. Wie so häufig, ist auch in diesem Falle der gekränkte Gatte der Geschädigte und der Beleidiger ging mit heiler Haut aus dem Kampfe hervor.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Zwei kecke Touristen und eine 18jährige junge Frau von hier unternahmen am Weihnachtstage das in dieser Jahreszeit einigermaßen waghalsige Vergnügen einer Besteigung der Raxalpe. In der 1400 Meter hoch gelegenen Unterkunftshütte des Brachkogels angekommen, legte sich die junge Frau hin und genaß eines gesunden Knäbleins. Ihre Begleiter machten in der Mitte ein Feuer an und einer derselben eilte zu Thal, um einen Arzt und sonstiges Nothwendige zu holen.—Hier ist die Schriftstellerin Fräulein Auguste Pulvermacher, welche unter dem Pseudonym August Leo zu schreiben pflegte, im Alter von 63 Jahren gestorben. Sie war aus Lissa in der Provinz Posen gebürtig, von Beruf Lehrerin und Uebersetzerin.

Budapest. In einer Lehmgrube der Steinbrucher Dampfziegelfabrik stürzte eine Seitenwand ein und begrub fünf Arbeiter unter ihren Trümmern. Trotz der sofort eingeleiteten Rettungsaktion konnte jedoch keiner derselben gerettet werden.

Graz. Den Offizieren der hiesigen Garnison wurde verboten, der Aufführung von Felix Philippis Schauspiel „Das Erbe" beizuwohnen. Das Subjekt des Stückes lehnt sich bekanntlich an die Entlassung Bismarcks an.

Meran. Von den in Tirol und Vorarlberg gegenwärtig existirenden 78 Elektrizitätswerken ist das Meraner Unternehmen das großartigste, da es von allen 78 Werken, die insgesammt 9700 Pferdekräfte haben, allein 3000 Pferdekräfte aufweist und bis zu 6000 Pferdekräfte erhöht werden kann.

Przemysl. Der seiner Zeit in Jaroslau bei der Aufnahme von militärischen Plänen verhaftete Baron Alexander Murmann wurde nach geheimer Verhandlung wegen Spionage zu acht Monaten schweren Kerkers verurtheilt und trat die Strafe sofort an.

Salzburg. In den Staatsvoranschlag für 1899 wurden für das zweite Bahngeleise auf der Wiener Strecke Salzburg-Lambach 700,000 Gulden und für den Umbau des Salzburger Bahnhofes 500,000 Gulden eingestellt.

Schweiz.

Bern. Aus dem kürzlich erschienenen Jahresbericht des Schweizer Alpenklubs geht hervor, daß das Vermögen am Schluß des letzten Jahres 28,000 Francs betrug. Die Zahl der Klubhütten beläuft sich auf 49; in 42 Sektionen zählt der Alpenklub 5300 Mitglieder. Im nächsten Jahr soll eine Mitgliederliste erscheinen. Durch Vermittelung des Centralkomites waren im abgelaufenen Jahr 352 Führer versichert für ein Kapital von 1,115,000 Francs, was der Centralkasse eine Ausgabe von 5775 Francs verursachte.

Zürich. Nach dem Berichte des Züricher Verkehrsvereins, der in Zürich seine Generalversammlung hielt, ist der Fremdenverkehr Zürichs auch im Jahre 1898 wieder gestiegen, und zwar von 201,703 im Jahre 1897 auf 220,014 (in beiden Jahren vom Januar bis Oktober gerechnet).

Basel. In Basel wurde nach achttägiger Verhandlung der Prozeß gegen die Leiter der Unionbank zu Ende geführt. Der Angeklagte Wüst wurde zu drei Jahren Zuchthaus und der Angeklagte Wirz zu einem Jahre Zuchthaus verurtheilt. Gegen beide Angeklagte wurde auf zehnjährigen Verlust der aktiven bürgerlichen Rechte erkannt. Die Angeklagten Kopfmann und Wagner wurden freigesprochen.

Tessin. Ein Theil des steil aufstrebenden Rothstockes, an dessen Fuße das Dorf Airolo liegt, ist abgestürzt und hat ein Hotel und acht Wohnhäuser und 12 andere Gebäude in Airolo zerschmettert. Eine Anzahl von Personen sind durch die stürzenden Felstrümmer erschlagen worden. Die Trümmer der Gebäude, die größtentheils aus Holz gebaut waren, geriethen in Brand, wodurch die Schrecken der Katastrophe noch erhöht wurden. Der Schaden wird auf ungefähr 1,000,000 Francs ($200,000) geschätzt.

Wallis. Das Vorkommen von Lämmergeiern in den schweizerischen Alpen gehört zu den größten Seltenheiten. Letzter Tage nun hatte der Gemsjäger Stefan Bayard von Varen das Jagdglück, einen Lämmergeier in dem Augenblicke zu erlegen, als dieser auf den Hund des Jägers niederstoßen wollte.

Prove All Things.

This Old, Old Command is Easy to Fulfill in Plainfield.

To win a wager, an English Marquis stood on London Bridge and offered for an hour British sovereigns ($5) for five shillings ($1.25). He could not find a customer. There are several good reasons why the ordinary mortal could not be induced to buy, but no reason can be given why Plainfield people will not accept the following convincing proof about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this:

Mrs. I. L. Holmes of 442 W. 2nd St., says: "I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and derived more benefit from them than from anything else. Before I tried this remedy I was bothered almost constantly with a severe pain across the small of my back, so bad at times that I thought I must give up. If I sat down and got up or was lying down and attempted to rise quickly, or retained one position for any length of time, sharp, acute pain always followed. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such trouble and went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They helped me from the first and I improved right along under the treatment. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others who suffer from kidney complaint."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S.

DOROTHY.

BY JAMES WORKMAN.

The judge had dined, and was enjoying an after-dinner cigar before turning to a pile of papers that lay on the table at his elbow. Yet even as he watched the flickering fire and puffed dreamily at his cigar, luxuriating in a little relaxation after a hard day's work in a close and crowded court, his mind was busy formulating the scathing sentences in which he intended to sum up a case that had been tried that day. There could be no doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner, who had been accused of a most impudent fraud, and though it was a first offence, the judge intended to pass the severest sentence which the law allowed.

The judge was no believer in short sentences. He regarded leniency to a criminal as an offence against society—a direct encouragement to those who hesitated on the brink of vicious courses, and were only restrained by fear of punishment. The well-meaning people who got up petitions to mitigate the sentence upon a justly convicted thief or murderer were, in his eyes, guilty of a mawkish sentimentality. There was no trace of weakness or effeminancy in his own face, with its grizzled eyebrows, somewhat cold gray eyes, thin lips and massive chin. He was a just man, just to the splitting of a hair, austere and unemotional.

He had conducted the trial with the most scrupulous impartiality, but now that a verdict of guilty was a foregone conclusion, he determined to make an example of one who had so shamefully abused the confidence placed in him.

Stated briefly, the situation was as follows: The prisoner, Arthur Maxwell, was cashier to a firm of solicitors, Messrs. Lightbody and Dufton. The only surviving partner of the original firm, Mr. Lightbody, had recently died, leaving the business to his nephew, Thomas Faulkner. Faulkner accused Arthur Maxwell of having embezzled a sum of two hundred and fifty pounds. Maxwell admitted having taken the money, but positively asserted that it had been presented to him as a free gift by Mr. Lightbody. Unfortunately for the prisoner, the letter which he had stated had accompanied the check could not be produced, and Faulkner, supported by the evidence of several well-known experts, declared the signature on the check to be a forgery. When the check-book was examined the counterfoil was discovered to be a blank. The prisoner asserted that Mr. Lightbody himself had taken out a blank check and had filled it up and signed it at his private residence. He could, however, produce no proof of this assertion, and all the evidence available was opposed to his unsupported statement.

"Arthur Maxwell," soliloquized the judge, "you have been convicted on evidence that leaves no shadow of a doubt of your guilt of a crime which I must characterize as one of the basest—"

The clattering of voices in the hall brought the soliloquy to an abrupt conclusion. The judge required absolute silence and solitude when he was engaged in study, and the servants, who stood in considerable awe of him, were extremely careful to prevent the least disturbance taking place within earshot of his sanctum. He jerked the bell impatiently, intending to give a good wigging to those responsible for the disturbance. But the door was thrown open by his daughter Mabel, a pretty girl of twelve, who was evidently in a state of breathless excitement.

"O papa!" she exclaimed, "here's such a queer little object wants to see you. Please let her come in."

Before the judge could remonstrate, a little child, a rosy-faced girl of between five and six, in a red hood and cloak, hugging a black puppy under her arm and a brown paper parcel under the other, trotted briskly into the room. The judge rose to his feet with an expression which caused his daughter to vanish with remarkable celerity.

"What on earth are you doing here, child?" he asked irritably. "What can you possibly want with me?" She remained silent, staring at him with round, frightened eyes. "Come, come, can't you find your tongue, little girl?" he asked more gently. "What is it you want with me?"

"If you please," she said timidly, "I have brought you Tommy."

Tommy was clearly the fat puppy, for as she bent her face toward him he wagged his tail and promptly licked the end of her nose.

"I've broughted you other things as well," she said, opening the brown paper parcel and revealing a doll with a very beautiful complexion, large blue eyes and hair of the purest gold, a diminutive Noah's ark, a white pig, a woolly sheep, a case of crayons, a penholder, a broken-bladed knife, a small paint box, a picture book or two, and what bore some faint resemblance to a number of water-color sketches. She seemed particularly proud of the last-named.

"I painted them all by myself," she explained.

"Well," he said, "it is very kind of you to bring me all these pretty things, but why do you want to give them to me?"

"I—I don't want to give them to you," she faltered.

"Come," he said with a quiet laugh, "that's honest, at least. Well, why do you give them to me if you don't want to?"

"I'll give them to you, and Tommy, too," with a very wistful glance at the puppy, "if you'll promise not to send poor papa to prison."

A silence, such as precedes some awful convulsion of nature, pervaded the room for several seconds after this audacious proposal. Even Tommy, as though cowering before the outraged majesty of the law, buried his head between the judge's coat and vest and lay motionless except for a propitiatory wag of his tail.

"What is your name, child?" asked the judge.

"Dorothy Maxwell," faltered the little girl, timidly, awed by the sudden silence and the perhaps unconsciously stern expression upon his lordship's face.

"Dorothy Maxwell," said the judge, severely, as though the little figure before him were standing in the prisoner's dock awaiting sentence, "you have been convicted at the close of the nineteenth century of the almost unparalleled crime of attempting to corrupt one of her majesty's judges, to persuade him by means of bribery to defeat the ends of justice. I shall further enlarge upon the enormity of your crime. Have you anything to say why sentence should not be—no, no, don't cry. Poor little thing! I didn't mean to frighten you. I'm not the least bit angry with you—really and truly. Come and sit on my knee, and show me all those pretty things.

"This is very like condoning a criminal offence," thought the judge with a grim smile, as he wiped the tears from the child's face and tried to interest her in the contents of the brown paper parcel.

But the thoughts the tears aroused did not vanish with them. Arthur Maxwell was no longer a kind of impersonal representative of the criminal classes, to be dealt with as severely as the law allowed in the interest of society in general. He was the father of this soft, plump, rosy-cheeked, golden-haired little maid, who inevitably would have to share now or in the future her father's humiliation and disgrace.

At this moment the door opened, and his wife, a slender, graceful woman, considerably younger than himself, with a reined, delicate face, came quietly in.

"Ah," exclaimed the judge, with a sudden inspiration, "I believe you are at the bottom of all this, Agnes. What is this child doing here?"

"You are not vexed, Matthew?" she asked, half timidly.

"Hardly that," he answered slowly; "but what good can it do? It is impossible to explain the situation to this poor little mite. It was cruel to let her come on such an errand. How did she get here?"

"It was her own idea—entirely her own idea; but her mother brought her, and asked to see me. The poor woman was distracted, nearly frantic with grief and despair, and ready to clutch at any straw. She was so dreadfully miserable, poor thing, and I thought it was such a pretty idea, I—I couldn't refuse her, Matthew."

"But, my dear," expostulated the judge, "you must have known that it could do no good."

"I—I knew what the verdict would be," answered his wife. "I read a report of the trial in an evening paper. But, then, there was the sentence, you know—and—and I thought the poor child might soften you a little, Matthew."

The judge's hand strayed mechanically among the toys, and to interest the child he began to examine one of the most vivid of her pictorial efforts.

"You think I am very hard and unjust, Agnes?" he asked.

"No, no, no," she answered, hurriedly; "not unjust, never unjust. There is not a more impartial judge upon the bench—the world says it. But don't you think, dear, that justice without—without mercy is always a little hard? Don't be angry, Matthew. I never spoke to you like this before. I wouldn't now but for the poor woman in the next room and the innocent little thing at your knee."

The judge made no reply. He bent still more closely over the scarlet animal straying amid emerald fields, and burnt umber trees of a singularly original shape.

"That's a cow," said Dorothy, proudly. "Don't you see its horns?—and that's its tail—it isn't a tree. There's a cat on the other side. I can draw cats better than cows."

In her anxiety to exhibit her artistic abilities in their higher manifestations she took the paper out of his hands, and presented the opposite side. At first he glanced at it listlessly, and then his eyes suddenly flashed and he examined it with breathless interest.

"Well, I'm blessed!" he exclaimed, excitedly.

It was not a judicial utterance, but the circumstances were exceptional.

"Here's the very letter Maxwell declared he had received from Lightbody along with the cheque. His reference to it, as he couldn't produce it, did more harm than good; but I believe it's genuine, upon my word I do. Listen; it's dated from The Hollies, Lightbody's private address:—

"'My dear Maxwell:—I have just heard from the doctor that my time will be very short, and I am trying to arrange my affairs as quickly as possible. I have long recognized the unostentatious, but thorough and entirely satisfactory, manner in which you have discharged your duties, and as some little and perhaps too tardy recognition of your long and faithful services, and as a token of my personal esteem for you, I hope you will accept the enclosed two hundred and fifty pounds. With best wishes for your future, believe me, sincerely,

"THOMAS LIGHTBODY."

"What do you think of that? I'll send it round to Maxwell's solicitor at once."

"Oh, Matthew, then the poor fellow's innocent, after all?"

"It looks like it. If this letter is genuine, he certainly is. There, don't look miserable again. I'm sure it is. If it had been a forgery, you may be sure it would have been ready for production at a moment's notice. Where did you get this paper, little girl?"

Dorothy blushed guiltily and hung her head.

"I took it out of pa's desk. I—I wanted some paper to draw on, and I took it without asking. You won't tell him, will you? He'll be ever so cross."

"Well, we may perhaps have to let him know about it, my dear; but I don't think he'll be a bit cross. Now, this lady will take you to your mother, and you can tell her that papa won't go to prison, and that he'll be home to-morrow night."

He kissed her, and his wife held out her hand. But Dorothy lingered, with hanging head and twitching lips.

"May I—may I say good-by to Tommy, please?" she faltered.

"Tommy's going with you," said the judge, laughing kindly. "I wouldn't deprive you of Tommy's company for Tommy's weight in gold."

Dorothy eagerly pursued the fat puppy, captured him after an exciting chase, and took him in her arms. Then she walked towards the door, but the corner of her eye rested wistfully on the contents of the brown paper parcel. The judge hastily gathered the toys, rolled them up in the paper, and presented them to her. But Dorothy looked disappointed. The thought of giving them to purchase her father's pardon had been sweet as well as bitter. She was willing to compromise in order to escape the pang that the loss of Tommy and the doll and the paint-box and other priceless treasures would have inflicted, but she still wished—poor little epitome of our complex human nature—to taste the joy of heroic self-sacrifice. Besides, she was afraid that the judge might after all refuse to pardon her father if she took away all the gifts with which she had attempted to propitiate him.

She put the parcel on a chair and opened it out. Holding the wriggling puppy in her arms she gazed at her treasures, trying to make up her mind which would be sufficiently valuable in the judge's eyes to accomplish her purpose. Finally, she selected the sheep, and presented the luxuriantly woolly, almost exasperatingly meek-looking, animal to the judge.

"You may have that and the pretty picture for bein' kind to papa," she said, with the air of one who confers inestimable favors.

He was about to decline the honor, but, catching his wife's eye, he meekly accepted it, and Dorothy and the puppy and the brown paper parcel disappeared through the door.

"Well, well," said the judge, with a queer smile, as he placed the fluffy white sheep on the mantlepiece, "I never thought I should be guilty of accepting a bribe, but we never know what we may come to."

The next day Maxwell was acquitted and assured by the judge that he left the court without a stain upon his character. The following Christmas Dorothy received a brown paper parcel containing toys of the most wonderful description from an unknown friend; and it was asserted by his intimates that ever afterwards the judge's sentences seldom erred on the side of severity, and that he was disposed, whenever possible, to give a prisoner the benefit of the doubt.—The Strand Magazine.

Balloon Lifeboats.

The big ocean greyhounds will soon, it is thought, be equipped with lifeboats harnessed to balloons, so as to be practically unsinkable. Cylinders filled with compressed gas will be placed in compartments of the lifeboats, and from these the balloons, which will be harnessed with cords to a hollow mast connected with the cylinders, is inflated. The mast, which is iron tubing, is adjustable, and, when turned forward, the big balloon acts as a sail, oars proving quite unnecessary. The combination boat will doubtless prove of the greatest service in saving people far out at sea. In a recent test it was shown that, even with the boat filled with water to the gunwales, the lifting power of the balloon prevented the craft from either sinking or upsetting.

Result of His Call.

Sweet Girl (anxiously)—Did Fred—I mean Mr. Nicefellow—call to see you to-day, papa?

Papa—Yes, and to oblige him I consented. I suppose time hangs heavy on his hands.

Sweet Girl (mystified)—Why—why, what did he say?

Papa—He requested the pleasure of a series of games of chess with me. The first ones we will play this evening, and after that every third evening during the winter. I hope, my dear, you will keep out of the library as chess is a very absorbing occupation.—New York Weekly.

Papa's Opinion.

Tommy—What kind of a store is that one, papa, where they have three colored glass jars in the window?

Papa—That's an apothecary shop, Tommy.

Tommy—And that place next door to it that has three balls in front of it?

Papa (with a sigh)—Oh, that's a hypothecary shop, Tommy!—Judge.

A Soft Answer.

Mr. Fussy—I don't see why you wear those ridiculous big sleeves when you have nothing to fill them.

Mrs. Fussy—Do you fill your high hat?—Boston Traveler.

Not Easily Beaten.

"Sharp man, that!" "How?" "Widow sued him an' got judgment for one hundred dollars." "Yes?" "Married the widder, got a divorce for sixty dollars, an' had forty dollars left out of the one hundred dollars."

AS THE SUN WENT DOWN.

Two soldiers lay on the battlefield
At night when the sun went down.
One held a lock of thin gray hair
And one held a lock of brown.

One thought of his sweetheart back at home,
Happy and young and gay.
And one of his mother left alone,
Feeble and old and gray.

Each in the thought that a woman cared
Murmured a prayer to God.
Lifting his gaze to the blue above,
There on the battle sod.

Each in the joy of a woman's love
Smiled through the pain of death,
Murmured the sound of a woman's name,
Though with his parting breath.

Pale grew the dying lips of each,
Then, as the sun went down,
One kissed a lock of thin gray hair,
And one kissed a lock of brown.

THE MARCHIONESS.

It was in Normandy last year, during the shooting season. I had had a long morning's sport, and noon found me footsore and weary in the vicinity of an old mill, somewhere between Mortagne and Conde-sur-l'Huisne. It was a comfortable looking place and I determined to solicit the owner's hospitality.

The miller received me very courteously and I was soon stretching my legs under the table and partaking of the most exquisite dejeuner that was ever placed before a hungry sportsman. There were trout from the mill stream and partridges from the neighboring moor, cooked to a turn and accompanied by some really excellent wine, not the "petit viri" of Normandy, but good mellow Bordeaux. This somewhat surprised me, but when at dessert the miller invited me to visit his gallery of family portraits, I was perfectly bewildered.

"What," said I to myself, "a picture gallery in a mill!"

Of course I accepted his invitation, and found that the pictures really existed and were fine ones, too. There were a dozen of them, representing Louis XIV., courtiers and marquises, and marchionesses of the times of Louis XV and Louis XVI., the series being closed by a buxom-looking farmer's wife in a white sun-bonnet next to a delicious little marchioness.

Stopping before the two latter portraits the miller said:

"These are mother and daughter."

He appeared to be amused at my surprised expression, and continued:

"Yes, sir, this country woman is my mother, and that pretty little marchioness smiling there is my grandmother. It is a strange story. Everybody round about knows it, and I may as well tell it to you.

"As you have probably surmised from the age of these portraits the story is laid during the Terror. The father, mother and elder sister of you little marchioness were arrested, and soon afterward judged and executed. The little marchioness, my grandmother, sir, found safety only in flight. The poor orphan took refuge with one of the farmers in the family estate, whom she knew she could trust. This farmer was a young man—he was only about thirty years of age. He had known the little marchioness from her babyhood, and was devotedly attached to her. In fact, to be frank with you, sir, in his heart of hearts he loved her.

"He was greatly troubled by the perilous position in which her presence placed him, but he could not turn the poor child away to be massacred by the savage revolutionists. He hid her in the cellar and the mob vainly scoured the whole country in search of her. But a neighbor, a ferocious Jacobin, had marked the farmer's trouble, and suspecting the reason for it denounced him to the revolutionary committee.

"In a few minutes the house was surrounded by a horrible mob howling for the death of the hated aristocrat. They battered in the front door and poured into the place. Ah! sir, it was a terrible moment."

Here the miller paused and mopped his brow, while his eyes glistened with excitement.

"The first room was empty," he went on. "They smashed everything in it they could lay hands upon, and were about to break open the door of the next room when it suddenly opened and the marchioness stood before them, beside the farmer, who was half dead with anguish and terror.

"For an instant the mob stopped short. But it was only for an instant. Shrieks of 'Down with the aristocrat! Kill her! Away with her! Burn her! Tear her to pieces!' arose, and the blood-thirsty brutes were about to rush forward, when the little marchioness was suddenly struck by an inspiration. Ah! sir, it must have come from on high. She made signs to them that she wished to speak.

"'Citizens, she began.

"Unaccustomed to hearing such an appellation from the mouth of a dainty aristocrat, the mob stopped. She profited by the pause, and continued:

"'Citizens, what do you want with me? Why are you incensed against me? What have I done to you? I am one of you—I am your sister!'

"Murmurs of approval and of protest were heard, but in the main the mob appeared to be astonished and suspicious.

"'She's fooling us, the aristocrat,' shrieked a woman, who, with her dishevelled hair, flushed face and crooked fingers ready to claw the delicate girl's eyes out, looked like one of the Furies let loose.

"'No, no,' exclaimed the marchioness earnestly. 'I swear to you that I am no longer an aristocrat, but a woman of the people. In proof of it, here is my future husband,' and she pointed to the farmer, who, too overcome to utter a word, would have bent his knee before the brave young girl, but she prevented him.

"Her remarkable presence of mind was their salvation. The fact that she was willing to marry a simple citizen caused a complete revulsion of feeling, and the wretches who a moment before had been lusting for her blood, now applauded her.

"'We must be married under the Tree of Liberty,' she added, 'and, citizens, we invite you all to the wedding.'

"Another burst of applause followed this invitation. Friendly hands seized the little marchioness and the farmer, and they were straightway shouldered and carried in triumph to the Tree of Liberty, escorted by the cheering mob, waving their pikes and scythes.

"The marriage took place, and the crowd, joining hands, danced the Carmagnole frantically around the newly-made husband and wife, and the festivities with eating and drinking, were kept up till nightfall, when those of the revelers who were not too intoxicated escorted the couple back to the farm.

"As soon as they were alone the assumed familiarity of the farmer immediately vanished. Doffing his hat, he bent respectfully before the marchioness, and with tears of gratitude in his eyes, exclaimed:

"'Mademoiselle, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Your sacrifice was our salvation. I beg you to pardon the liberties the critical position in which we were placed compelled me to take. It is, of course, my duty to render you your liberty, and I do so.'

"'Sacrifice! Liberty!' said the marchioness, 'but I am free, and I have made no sacrifice. Don't you then understand that I love you?'

"And thus it was," concluded the miller, "that the little marchioness became a poor farmer's wife, and the grandmother of an honest Norman miller."

A BUNCHGRASS SHEPHERD DOG.

Left With 2,000 Sheep, He Had 6,000 When His Owner Got Back.

A bunchgrass shepherd dog of eastern Oregon is the hero of this tale. The name of the dog was Jim, and his owner was called Bob Thompson. This story dates back to 1878, when sheep were sheep and wool was wool; when a good sheep dog was worth more than a horse; when horses were horses and bicycles were not known.

Every sheep camp had its crack pack of dogs, and in Thompson's pack there were thirty. At the time of the Bannock uprising Thompson and his men were herding sheep ten miles from Pendleton. One morning a messenger rode up in hot haste, warning the shepherds to flee for their lives, as the Indians were on the warpath. The shepherds fled. Only the dogs and sheep were left. For the next few days the dogs came straggling into Pendleton one by one, and within a week they were all present or accounted for; all but Jim. At the end of a month the Indian uprising had been put down and Thompson went out to look for his sheep. He had left two thousand and he found six thousand, all quietly feeding together. As he rode near he saw, perched on a tall butte, a black object that turned out to be Jim, who gave his master a frantic welcome and then proudly started with him to inspect the band.

Single-handed, Jim had taken care of those sheep for thirty days, driving them to fresh pastures each day. Every stray band that he met he had chased into his drove, until he had become the king herder of the bunchgrass country. Hard work had agreed with him, and he was as fat as a possum in persimmon time. He was too smart to go hungry, and had picked out the fat of the flock whenever he wanted to make a meal. Jim is gone now, but his memory is respected by every wool puller in Umatilla county.—New York Sun.

Duped the Burglar.

By the dim light of the dark-lantern the burglar read the following inscription on a card tacked to the outside of the window he was about to pry up with a jimmy:

TO MIDNIGHT CALLERS:
Do Not Ruin the Fastenings of this Window
By Prying It Up.
The Rear Door of the House is Always Unlocked.

"The card is dusty and covered with cobwebs," he said to himself. "It has been there a long time, but I'll just go around and see if that door's still unlocked. If they'd rather have me go in that way I think I'll humor them."

Whereupon he stole softly around to the rear door, opened it, and a man in one of the sleeping-rooms upstairs, awakened by a burglar-alarm, came down and shot at him.

This incident shows, dear children, that it is possible to be too confiding. —Chicago Tribune.

PRESS CONTEST IS OPEN.

IT MEETS WITH ASTONISHING SUCCESS AT THIS EARLY STAGE.

Many Young People of the City Are Anxious to Obtain a Practical Business Education Free—Something of the Courses.

The Daily Press subscription contest progresses. Already the start made has equalled the most enthusiastic hopes of its starters. It was an experiment and the experiment has proved that there are a considerable number of young men and women in this city who are anxious to prepare themselves for life with a practical business education. But the contest is only just begun. There is plenty of opportunity for others to start and place themselves well in the front rank before the leaders attain any great majority. But don't forget to start at once. Every day counts in rolling up the number of subscriptions credited to each contestant.

In the first announcement of the contest, some of the readers of The Daily Press who thought of becoming contestants received the impression that the courses in the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography and Shorthand are limited in time. In each case the winner, or whoever receives the advantage of the victory, will receive a complete course and will receive a regular diploma on their proper completion of the entire course. In regard to the shorthand course at the Gregg School, it was announced that it was for three months. Prof. VanWert, the principal, explains that he can prepare his pupils in three months, where many other courses take eight and ten months. But he also guarantees the contestants that he will see that the winner of the course receives full and complete instruction in the subject if it takes a year in which to do it.

There are various systems of bookkeeping, many of which becoming impractical when applied to regular office work. Others are too complicated and cumbersome to be of any use. The Sadler system, as taught at the Plainfield Business College, is one of the best in the country. It is the culmination of years of work and experience by W. H. Sadler, whose business college at Baltimore, Md., is one of the greatest in the country. Prof. Phelps fully understands the principles of the system which he teaches and is well qualified to instruct any bright young Plainfielder and soon change he or she, as the case may be, into an expert bookkeeper and accountant. Already graduates of the school have been able through their merit alone, to obtain lucrative positions with prominent New York houses.

The many friends of Rev. Father Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, will be glad to learn that he has almost recovered from his serrious illness.

SPORTING.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Central Journal Bowling League.	Won.	Lost.	Highest Score.
Roselle	14	1	843
Park	11	7	852
Elizabeth	10	8	905
Westfield	7	8	888
Newark Bay C. C.	7	11	905
N. J. A. C.	5	13	944
Cranford Casino	3	9	811

Hibbard, of the Park Club team, is rolling a great game now. Both he and Captain Ball have the faculty of rolling a steady game that counts in the long run.

Roselle has such a lead in the Journal League that it is going to be very difficult for any of the other teams to catch her. Her only defeat this season was on her own alleys and by the Park Club at that.

In the contest for the greatest number of scores of 200 or over, now in progress at the Park Club, Clarence L. Murphy is in the lead for the month of January. He has, so far, rolled five games with scores of 200 or better.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The athletic contests for the indoor novice championship at the Y. M. C. A., will be continued Saturday evening, when two more events will be contested.

Next week will probably see the first of the roller polo matches at the Crescent Rink. B. A. Mumford is in charge of the business end of the team, while Thomas U. Smith will probably captain the Plainfield team. The game was played here two years ago and proved decidedly exciting. On that occasion the Plainfield A. A. defeated the Elizabeth A. C. by a large score. It will be practically the same players who will meet again on this occasion. The Plainfield boys are also arranging games with teams from the New York Athletic Club, the Montclair Athletic Club, the Orange Athletic Club and several other independent teams in this section.

trains. The trains were stopped at the scene of the wreck, as many injured people put aboard as were ready to be transferred, and carried to the station here. The ambulance was not sufficient to carry them all, so express wagons were called into service, and the wounded carefully laid out on clean straw. In this way many were transferred with as little discomfort as though they had ridden in the ambulance.

Several of the trains stopped at Plainfield avenue, near the old freight-house, and the wounded were taken to the hospital on stretchers across the fields. As the wounded were carried in some were unconscious, while others groaned loudly. They were first hurried into the operating room where their broken bones were set and their wounds bandaged. Then they were trundled into one of the wards and placed on cots.

Every one who witnessed the work done at the hospital by the physicians and nurses, was loud in his praise of their coolness and skill. The institution is poorly equipped to handle so many serious cases as this on short notice, yet after the physicians had arrived and the wards were prepared to receive the wounded, order was restored, and Roundsman Flynn and Officer Higgins put on duty at the door with orders to allow none but physicians, nurses and those connected with the hospital staff inside.

Many pathetic scenes were witnessed at the bed sides of the hurt and dying. Many families were separated on the train, the women and children being in the forward cars, while the men were in the rear, smoking.

By 4 o'clock the hospital began to be beseiged with anxious husbands and sons, who came to see their wives, mothers or sisters. In every case where the visitors were related to the ones they desired to see admittance was not denied, but Miss Moss drew the line sharply and allowed no one else inside.

One family consisting of mother, an aunt and two children called to see a dying husband and father. It was a sad scene, indeed, around that little cot, shut in with the white curtains, and even the physician, schooled to witness such sights, could not keep back a tear or two. Another party of four came to see their friends in the hospital. They were from Mt. Carmel, and had been travelling together in the first car, but at a point along the line these four had gone into the rear car and thus were saved.

The physicians who offered their services there were Drs. Long, Probasco, Ard, Carman, Buchanan, E. W. and B. Van D. Hedges, Jenkins, Tomlinson, Endicott, Murrry, Davis, Zeglio and others.

Mrs. J. A. Haynes, of North avenue, accompanied the physicians to the scene of the wreck on the drill engine, and armed with bandages and lint, did excellent work among the wounded. When she could do no more there she went to the hospital and assisted the nurses and doctors until the wounded had all been cared for.

Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, of Hope chapel, Harry Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and Oscar Rogers, president of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, were among the dying offering what consolation they could. Fathers Smyth and Westman, of St. Mary's church, were granting absolution to the Catholics there.

WHAT OPERATOR SAYS.

Telegrapher at South Plainfield Declares He Got No Orders to Hold Local.

Harry Butland, who is operator at the South Plainfield station of the Lehigh Valley, was seen by a Press reporter last night. He said: "I came on duty at 12 o'clock this noon and will work until 12 o'clock midnight. When I came on duty I looked over the train records for the morning, and found that the Bound Brook local was forty-six minutes late. It left South Plainfield at 12:36 o'clock noon. Myself and the leverman in the block tower, John Mohassey, obeyed every train order we received. We did not receive an order to hold the Bound Brook local. So far as we knew from orders from the train dispatcher the local had the right of way over the track. I received no orders in reference to the Hazelton express."

ARCANUMITES FARE WELL.

Local Lodge Prompt to Give All Aid Possible to Unfortunate Brothers.

Charles K. Stevens, of Perth Amboy, Regent of the Royal Arcanum at that place, telephoned this morning to D. W. Littell, of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, asking him to look after Engineer Edward Rick, who is a member of the Perth Amboy Council. Rick is the man that ran the local train and is now confined in Muhlenberg Hospital.

At the meeting of Plainfield Council last evening a resolution was adopted unanimously in which the members decided to look after all members of the Arcanum who are found to have been in the wreck.

NO INQUEST YET.

All But Three of the Dead Have so Far Been Identified.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Bound Brook, January 10.—Traffic on the Lehigh Valley railroad has been resumed once more after the fearful disaster of yesterday afternoon. The tracks were cleared late last night and repaired sufficiently to allow the resumption of traffic. This morning, steam wreckers are still at work, removing the debris of the locomotives and the telescoped car from the side of the tracks.

Superintendent W. O. Sprigg's private car was sent to Bound Brook last night, and a field telegraph office established there. The Superintendent and his assistants were up most of the night. This morning, the list of killed and injured was completed and Superintendent Spriggs gave a Press reporter the entire list.

The thirteen bodies brought to Bound Brook from the wreck were transferred from a Lehigh Valley passenger coach and the freighthouse to the morgue of DeMott & Edgerton during the evening. Coroner Henry Moke, of New Brunswick, arrived here during the evening and viewed the bodies.

Ten of the thirteen bodies were identified, all but one positively. The Coroner granted burial permits in these cases and the remains will be shipped in caskets to the places where they belong. The three unidentified, all women, will remain at the morgue until some clue is gained to their identity.

The formal inquest will then be held in Middlesex county, probably at Dunellen or New Market.

MARSHALL TIDD'S FIRST FIREARM.

Made of a Spike from the Boston and Lowell Railroad.

Marshall Tidd, the famous gun-builder of Woburn, Mass., made his first firearm out of a spike sixty-three years ago. When Marshall was ten years old his father died, and he was apprenticed to a shoemaker. On the day when the Boston and Lowell Railroad ran its first train through Woburn the boy was one of the spectators. He picked up a spike, and the idea occurred to him that it could be fashioned into a pistol barrel. A blacksmith cut off the ends of the spike, and Marshall then bored it on his brother's lathe. He found a piece of hoop iron, and fastening one end in a vice, made a spiral of the metal. When he got the shape that seemed best he made a tool to cut the inside of the barrel. This pistol barrel was mounted on a stock that extends the entire length of the barrel. The hammer is very old-fashioned in design, striking a percussion cap nipple. He sold the weapon to another boy for $3, and it was lost sight of for nearly a quarter of a century. One day a friend got track of it and presented it to the maker. It is still in working order.—New York Tribune.

Helen Gould's Hobby.

Miss Helen Gould is a collector of curios. Her hobby is to secure possession of any article which was used by her father in his youth. Whether she has one of the mousetraps which were the humble beginning of the great Gould fortune I have not heard, but at any rate she has recently become the owner of an old wheelbarrow which was used by Jay Gould nearly half a century ago, when he was making road measurements through the State, in order to draw maps therefrom. It isn't every millionairess, with a Countess for a sister, who would care to remember the poverty and humble industry of her immediate progenitor.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Emollient for Chapped Hands.

A home-made emollient for chapped hands is compounded from an ounce of white wax and an ounce of spermaceti. Cut into shreds and melt together in an earthenware jar; then add an ounce of camphorized oil, stir the ingredients until they are well mixed, place the jar in a basin of cold water, stir until the cream is cold, then pack in little jars for the dressing table. If this is rubbed on the hands and a pair of wash-leather gloves worn at night the relief will be prompt.

AFTERMATH OF WRECK.

A Tragic Story Of How An Eloping Couple From Mt. Carmel Met Their Death.

LATE DEVELOPMENTS ABOUT THE DISASTER.

MORE OF THE DEAD VICTIMS IDENTIFIED AND SENT TO THEIR LATE HOMES.

With the Exception of Engineer Rick and the Borreca Baby, the Injured Passengers at the Hospital Will Probably Recover—Great Excitement at Shamokin When Survivors Arrived Home—Express Had the Right of Way, It Is Said.

In the aftermath of the great disaster on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Greenbrook "tanks," Monday afternoon, there comes the story of a quiet little romance suddenly cut short by the awful catastrophy. The young man, known by the initials on his cuff-buttons, "J. J.," who died at the Muhlenberg Hospital early Tuesday, was yesterday identified as Jacob Joseph, Jr., of Mt. Carmel, Pa., who was on his way at the time of the accident to New York to be married to Miss May Schminskey, of Mt. Carmel. Late yesterday afternoon the body of the young woman at the Bound Brook morgue, whose head was crushed beyond recognition, was identified by the clothing as that of the soon-to-be bride.

Young Joseph and Miss Schminskey have kept company for two years. They were the children of reputable families in Mt. Carmel. The parents objected to the marriage, believing that the young people were too young for such a step as yet. The marriage laws in Pennsylvania are very strict, making it difficult for young people to marry without the consent of their parents. New Jersey offers the same objections. When the chance of a cheap excursion to New York came, the young people decided to take advantage of it and the more liberal laws of New York, incidentally seeing the great metropolis on their wedding tour.

So they bought tickets for the business men's excursion and took the third section of the Hazleton express with the other excursionists. They occupied a seat together forward in the first car of the train.

It is evident that she turned toward him when the crash came, for the head is turned toward one side and horribly crushed. The features are almost indistinguishable. She was killed instantly. She wore a grey plaid shirt, a red plaid waist and a black coat. She is said to have been quite pretty.

He was taken from the wreck unconscious. Most of the clothing was torn from the body. There was a deep wound right between his eyes and his nose was cut. He suffered from concussion of the brain. He had a smooth face and dark hair and was a handsome man. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he died at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

Yesterday morning his body, together with those of A. Allgier and H. E. Weikel, who also died at the hospital from injuries received at the wreck, were brought to A. M. Runyon's establishment.

Yesterday afternoon, a delegation of citizens from Mt. Carmel and Shamokin, Pa., came to Plainfield under the direction of H. S. Smith, of the Lehigh Valley detective force. They viewed the body of the young man which was promptly identified by B. F. Davis, a relative. The bodies were placed in caskets and shipped home from South Plainfield late yesterday afternoon.

Last night passed quietly at Muhlenberg Hospital. With so many patients to look after, however, Miss Moss and her corps of nurses are kept busy all the time. Edward W. Rick, of Bound Brook, the engineer of the Bound Brook local, is in a very critical condition. The ribs on his left side are broken, the jagged points of them having penetrated the lungs. His wife, who is only a mere girl, and two little babies are at his home on East street, Bound Brook. There is little change in the condition of little Henry John Borreca, and it is feared that he cannot recover.

The other patients at the hospital are all doing well and the physicians in charge are confident in the belief that they will all recover. Decided improvement is noted in the condition of many. William Cheshire, firemen in the engine of the Bound Brook local, is much better. His injuries are not as serious as was first believed.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

Engineer Pendergast Was Following Instructions When Collision Occurred.

There are countless rumors afloat regarding the cause of the Lehigh Valley railroad disaster. A story, that emanates from an apparently trustworthy authority, throws some light on the matter. It is alleged that when the third section of the Hazleton express reached Bound Brook and was switched to the west bound track to pass the freight wreck, a despatch was given to Engineer Pendergast, of the express, instructing him to take the west bound track from Bound Brook to New Market and proceed to the latter place at once. There is a switch at New Market where he might have returned to the east bound track again. He was, it is claimed, following out these directions when the collision came.

The message from the train despatcher at Easton, containing these alleged directions, is said to have been in Pendergast's pocket when the accident occurred. It is known that when Pendergast recovered consciousness at the Muhlenberg Hospital late Monday afternoon he particularly requested that the papers in his working blouse be carefully preserved for future reference. They were removed from the pocket and locked up in a safe place by the hospital authorities. The important message, which, if as stated will completely exonerate Pendergast, is alleged to be one of these papers.

If the facts concerning this message are correct, as they have every semblance of being, it throws the responsibility on the train despatcher, the operator at South Plainfield or the engineer of the Bound Brook local.

PREACHER'S STORY.

Rev. John Harris Goes Back to the Coal Regions on Sad Errand.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Shamokin, Pa., Jan. 10.—A special train brought home Rev. John Harris, of Mount Carmel, who was in the terrible wreck Monday on the railroad at Dunellen, N. J. He was sent by the Lehigh Valley officials to give information as to the killed and injured, many of whom were from this locality. Mr. Harris' clothes were stained with the blood of victims he had helped to take from the wreck. It was part of his work at the scene of disaster, to identify those carried out, and to fasten their names on slips of paper to their clothing.

An excited crowd fairly bore him from the train at Mount Carmel and went with him to his home. Then they packed in around him while he told the sad story.

"All the passengers killed were struck by flying seats, and their heads mostly suffered the fatal wounds, while the injured sustained broken legs and other fractures, and injuries from seats driven by the force of the engine. The last man caught in the wreckage was Attorney L. S. Walter, of Mt. Carmel. He was two seats ahead of myself and pinned down. While in that position he heroically directed the saving of others. When extricated Mr. Walter's left ankle was found to be broken and his right foot badly sprained.

"My escape was remarkable, the tank having stopped in its desolating track two seats in front of the one I occupied. The great shock threw one dead body against me and I was covered with blood."

CURIOSITY SAVED THEM.

New Market Man Sat in Rear Car so as to See the Freight Wreck.

William Coriell and Stanley Day, of New Market, were two passengers in the ill-fated local train in the wreck Monday. Both of them got off without serious injuries. They got on the local at New Market, and at first were going forward in the smoker, but thinking of the wreck that had occurred in the morning, they changed their minds and took seats in the rear car, with their backs to the engine. They sat near the door, so as to see what remained of the wreck when they came to it. When the shock came both men were thrown backwards with terrific force.

Coriell's legs, arms and back were strained and stiffened, and Day's arms and face were cut. Day wore a derby hat, which, when it was picked up, was found to be all smashed and cut. Day thinks that he owes his whole skull to that hat, for it took the force of the shock instead of his head. The shock threw both men back over three seats, and the force with which they came down, broke the iron arm of one of them.

One of the eye-witnesses of the accident on the Lehigh Valley Monday was John J. Killian, of Elizabethport, a section hand of Foreman Thorn's gang. He was working on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad. He related his experiences to a Press reporter yesterday afternoon. He says that when the engines were twenty yards apart the engineer of the westbound local jumped backward from his cab. Then the locomotives met, reared up into the air and fell over. Killian then hurried to the scene and assisted in the removal of the dead and dying from the wreck.

AT BOUND BROOK.

Grewsome Evidences of the Fatality Are Gradually Disappearing.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, January 11.—The grewsome evidences of the Lehigh Valley Railroad disaster are fast disappearing. Last night a special train on the Lehigh Valley road bore off ten of the bodies, enclosed in caskets, from the undertaking establishment of DeMott & Edgerton. They included the bodies of two of the women who were identified late in the afternoon.

A committee of citizens from Mt. Carmel identified the body of the young woman as Miss May Schminskey, who had eloped with Jacob Joseph, Jr., who they had previously identified in Plainfield.

Two young lads came here from Shamokin during the afternoon and identified the body of the elderly woman with the rings as Mrs. C. Parrish, of Shamokin, Pa., their mother.

It seems probable that there will be no coroner's inquest over the disaster. According to the laws of the State, it is not necessary to hold an inquest when the blame for the accident lies so manifestly with the railroad officials.

Coroner Moke has not yet received any instructions from County Physi-

JOINT INSTALLATION A GREAT OCCASION.

Veterans and Their Sons and Wives Meet Together.

TOOK PLACE IN G. A. R. HALL.

STATE OFFICIALS PERFORMED PART OF THE WORK.

A Large Number of Invited Guests Were Present to Witness the Exercises—After the Installations Music, Recitations and Speeches Were Enjoyed—Sons of Veterans Served Turkey Supper at Close.

The annual installation of the officers elect of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Women's Relief Corps and Sons of veterans, took place last evening in G. A. R. Hall on East Front street. In addition to the members of the several orders present there were a number of invited guests. The exercises were of a highly interesting nature throughout, and the installing officers performed their work with great credit to themselves.

The officers of Post No. 73 were the first to be installed. Senior-Vice Department Commander Gifford, of Newark, performed the work. The officers are as follows: Commander, Charles B. Stephens; senior-vice, Andrew Cox; junior-vice, W. W. Coriell; quartermaster, John R. Naylor; adjutant, N. O. Mague; surgeon, Dr. Berg; chaplain, J. A. Goodwin; officer of the day, I. L. McVoy; officer of the guard, Albert Perry; sergeant-major, H. C. Smith; quartermaster sergeon, J. H. VanHorn.

The installation of the Woman's Relief Corps officers came next, and this work was performed by Past Department President Mrs. Jennie D. Smith. The officers are as follows: President, Mrs. E. C. Morse; senior-vice, Mrs. Charles Westphal; junior-vice, Mrs. Samuel Terry; secretary, Mrs. W. C. Smith, Sr.; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Walker; chaplain, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; conductor, Mrs. Caspar Bolsterli; guard, Mrs. C. B. Stevens; assistant conductor, Mrs. W. R. Mattox; assistant guard, Mrs. Bogert.

The last officers to be installed were those of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans. The installing officer was Past Captain Willard V. Sutton, while Captain Raymond McVoy installed his appointed officers. The officers are as follows: Captain, Raymond McVoy; first lieutenant, Frank Clarkson; second lieutenant, E. P. T. Smith; quartermaster, H. C. McVoy; sergeant of the guard, Charles Graves; first sergeant, Willard V. Sutton; chaplain, Clarence Rittenhouse; corporal of the guard, Frank Perry; color guard, Clifford Compton; prin-

SERMON ON THE WRECK.

THE RAILROAD DISASTER SUGGESTS THOUGHTS OF CHRISTIANITY

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass Pointed Out the Unexpected Danger for Which all Should be Prepared—$30 Given to the Hospital.

The second one of the union services was held in the First Presbyterian church last night. Seven of the ministers connected with the churches were present, and almost all of them took some part in the service.

The meeting opened with a short service of song led by L. H. Biglow, Jr., Rev. Dr. Richards read the Scripture lesson and offered prayer, and then Rev. A. E. Main read the story about the good Samaritan before the offering was taken up. Rev. Mr. Main explained in a few words why it was that Muhlenberg Hospital deserved financial aid just at this time, and said that the offering taken would be sent to the hospital to reimburse them for the expenses they have been under, due to the wreck at West Dunellen.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass preached the sermon, in which he likened the attraction of a pebble to this earth of ours to the attraction between the Christian and his God.

In his discourse the speaker related an incident connected with a railroad journey he took over the Alleghany mountains some time ago, and how the engineer drove his train over the rocky road at what seemed to be reckless speed. The passengers grew frightened, until one of them, who seemed very much alarmed, asked the conductor who the engineer was. At the mention of the man's name she grew calm, for it seemed he was a neighbor of her's and was considered the best engineer on the road.

While Rev. Mr. Snodgrass related this little incident the church was as still as could be, and it was interesting to notice with what evident feeling the congregation listened to its recital. The memory of Monday's accident was so fresh in their minds.

After the sermon an after meeting for prayer was held to which many stayed. No union meeting will be held tonight as it is not the committee's intention to interfere at all with the regular Wednesday night prayer meetings, but tomorrow night they will be continued and Rev. Dr. Richards will preach.

The collection, when counted, amounted to $30. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell was appointed to count it and to carry it to the hospital today. Anyone desiring to add to the amount can do so through any of the pastors of the churches.

—At the meeting of the Exempt Fremen's Association to be held next Wednesday evening business concerning the new building in prospect will be considered.

DEVELOPMENT OF NATION

PROF. MACE MADE A GOOD PICTURE OF BY-GONE DAYS.

Rehearsed the Beginning of Organized National Existence, With Strong Word Portraits of Washington and Jefferson.

The history of the United States is a favorite subject with loyal Americans, and, at the close of a year when the country's history has been making so fast, is especially appropriate that the leaders in the Uniuersity Extension movement should arrange for a series of lectures on "The Development of the Nation." Such a series of lectures was begun last night, the lectures being given, as before, in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the lecturer being William H. Mace, Ph. D, professor of history and political science in Syracuse University.

Mr. Mace looked more like a business man than like the typical student. He was an easy and business-like speaker, however, and made the picture of by-gone days very real to his audience. In beginning his lecture he spoke of the great importance of the study of history, and begged all the University Extension students to make the lecture course of as much benefit as possible to themselves by careful reading on the subject, and by the writing of papers on the topics given in the appendix to the lecture syllabus.

This first lecture told of the beginnings of organized national existence. At the close of the Revolution there was no national organization. There were indefinite national boundaries, the population was small and scattered, the people were largely farmers, there were no ocean steamers, no railways, stages were the most rapid means of transportation, and the knowledge of science possessed by the most learned men was less than that now possessed by those who live furtherest from the centres of culture.

All these matters were briefly dwelt upon by Mr. Mace, who then turned to the political situation. Strong portraits of the two great actors in the post-revolutionary drama, Washington and Jefferson, were drawn. The first election was described, with its childlike stratagems for obtaining the desired result. Washington's policy, the chief events of his administration, the anti-Federal party, the election of Jefferson, and the surprising policy adopted by him, formed the larger part of the lecture. Mr. Mace's treatment of the "critical period" of American history showed him to be thoroughly conversant with the subject, and a clear and logical thinker along historical lines.

ADMIRAL DEWEY PENS A LETTER TO SI DRAKE

THE MAYOR USES THE HERO'S NAME.

The Lincoln Man Gets a Nice Epistle From the Admiral Stationed at Manila.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, January 11.—Silas D. Drake Mayor of Lincoln, wrote Admiral Dewey, at Manila, last October, that he had appropriated the latter's name to represent the "D" in his cognomen, as the middle letter had been given him a child and he never knew what name it represented. This morning Mayor Drake received the following autograph letter from Admiral Dewey:

U. S. Flagship, Manila, P. I.
November 27th, 1898.

Mr. Silas Dewey Drake:

Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your letter of October 2nd, stating that you had used my name to fill out the "D" in your name. It gives me great pleasure to assure you of my appreciation of the compliment. As a coincidence it might interest you to know that I had a cousin, now dead, by the name of Silas Dewey Flagg. With kind regards,

Yours very truly,
George Dewey.

UNION COUNTY WELL TREATED AT TRENTON.

Her Assemblymen Placed on Important Committees.

LEGISLATURE CONVENED.

SENATOR REED WAS DULY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

Oath of Office Administered—Officers Elected and Committees Appointed—George W. Cooper, of Somerville, Made Bill Clerk of the Senate—The Share of the Union County Men—Reed's Speech.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, Jan. 11.—Trenton has once more become the centre of interest in State affairs. Yesterday saw the opening of the winter sessions of both branches of the New Jersey Legislature. They were convened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the customary organization formed, as related in yesterday's Daily Press, while the usual convening ceremonies occupied the balance of the afternoon.

After the Assemblymen and newly-elected Senators had taken the oath of office, the list of officers agreed upon at the Republican caucus were elected. First, of course, was the election of David O. Watkins, of Gloucester, to the Speakership of the House, after which he called Assemblyman Squier, of Elizabeth, to the chair and retired to the executive chamber, leaving the Union county man in charge. Among the other officers was William Kline, of Plainfield, who was made a doorkeeper.

In the appointment of Assembly committees Union has been well remembered. The chairmanships of two important committees and one of lesser importance have been distributed in that delegation, together with the three chairmanships in the Assembly joint committees.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield, promises to be a prominent figure in the Assembly this winter. He has been appointed chairman of the committee on banks and insurance, chairman of the joint committee on the Industrial School for Girls, and a member of the committees on riparian rights and on towns and townships.

Assemblyman George W. Squire, of Elizabeth, will be chairman of the committee on corporations, a member of the committee on engrossed bills and revision of laws, and a member of the joint committees on State prisons and treasurer's accounts.

As the share of Assemblyman Robert Houston, there is the chairmanship of the committee on stationary, chairmanship on the joint committee on federal relations, and membership in the committee on education and on labors and industries.

Somerset country, having a new representative who is not well acquainted with the workings of the House, did not receive anything startling in the committee appointments, although well treated. Assemblyman John Cooper, of Warrenville, was a member of the committees on claims and revolutionary pensions, militia, and unfinished business, and chairman of the joint committee on sinking fund. Under the present state of affairs in the country, the membership on the committee on militia is by far the most important and is quite an honor for the new Somerset man.

In the Senate the taking of the oath, the election of officers, the appointment of committees and the address by President Charles A Reed, of North Plainfield, occupied the afternoon.

Senator W. M. Johnson, of Bergen, nominated Senator Reed for President of the Senate, and he was elected by a party vote.

In the election of the officers, Geo. W. Cooper, of Somerville, was made bill clerk with a salary of $500. Mr. Cooper has been prominent in Somerset county affairs as a supporter of Senator Reed against Chancery Clerk L. A. Thompson, and was Reed's candidate for the nomination for surrogate against N. B. Spencer.

Although a new member of the State Senate, Senator John Cross, of Elizabeth, the Union county representative, was well remembered in the arrangement of committees. He was made chairman of the committee on Boroughs and Townships, a member of the Senate committees on Revision of Laws and Elections, and a member of the joint committees on Passed Bills and on the Reform School for Boys.

On being elected to office, President of the Senate Reed made a short speech in which he thanked the Senate for the honor conferred upon him. He made the suggestion to the com-

A BUSINESS EDUCATION
THE DAILY PRESS PROVIDES IT.
SPARE MOMENTS MADE TO COUNT.

THE DAILY PRESS has perfected arrangements with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, of Plainfield, whereby complete scholarships in each institution have been placed at its disposal These scholarships will be awarded to the persons securing the highest number of new subscribers to The Daily Press within the time prescribed and under the rules printed below. The scholarship in the Plainfield Business College will go to the person securing the highest number of subscribers, and the scholarship in the Gregg School of Stenography to the one securing the second highest number of new subscribers.

A consolation prize of a handsome-bound International Webster Dictionary, with complete reference index, will be given to the third highest standing contestant.

Read the following rules carefully, and then jump in and try to win:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with.

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

MONEY OUT OF MISFORTUNE.

A Disabled Steamer Is a Great Prize to the Wreckers.

Owing to the high salvage money obtained by rendering assistance to a disabled ship at sea, many steamers and sailing vessels carry on an irregular sort of wrecking business by being always on the alert for stranded ships. A tramp steamer that could bring a great transatlantic liner into port in a disabled condition would realize more money than its owner would make in a trip across the sea with a full cargo. As an illustration of what salvage money is paid for towing steamers into port, mention can be made of a few conspicuous cases. In 1882 the City of Richmond was towed into Halifax harbor and cost her owners $35,000 in salvage money. In the same winter the City of Boston broke her shaft at sea, and her owners were compelled to pay a bill for towing and other aid of $46,500. When the Atlantic liner Paris broke down off the Irish coast in 1890, she was towed into port at an expense of $30,000.

So rich are these prizes that the coast wrecking companies frequently send powerful tugs to sea just after a storm in search of disabled vessels. If a steamer is several days overdue, the tug may go hundreds of miles off the coast, and in this sense the companies extend their labors into new fields practicing wrecking on the high seas.

When the fast Atlantic liner, New York, made her first voyage from the port of New York, she ran aground off Sandy Hook, and the owners had to pay nearly $100,000 to float her again. One of the Red D line steamers stuck on the Brigantine shoals off New Jersey in 1889, and the wrecking company that pulled her off received $40,000 for their services. The more recent work of floating the American line steamer St. Paul from the sand off Long Branch recalls the difficulty of hauling one of the great transatlantic liners off a sandbar or mudflat. Both the Chapman and Merritt Wrecking companies combined to float her, and the salvage money, amounting to about $100,000, was divided between them.—George C. Walsh in Cassier's Magazine.

Posters and Handbills Not Modern.

It is probably the general impression that posters and handbills are modern inventions, but it has just been discovered that the ancient Romans practiced this method of advertising. In digging at Herculaneum there was brought to light a pillar covered with bills, one on top of another. The paste used to stick them was made of gum arabic. The bills, when separated and examined, were found to be programmes and announcements of public meetings, and even election proclamations.—New York Tribune.

FOR LAVISH PENSIONS

Senator Mason Talks Against Acquiring Colonies.

REFERS TO OUR STRUGGLES

A Bill Which proposes to Make the Pension Laws Still More Liberal and which Breaks Down Many of the Safeguards Now Existing. A Kansas Representative the Author.

Washington, Jan. 11.--Now that Congress has begun to throw down the bars, the pension system is one which will probably be given a large share of the benefit. A sign of the times may be found in a bill introduced by Representative Broderick, Republican of Kansas, a legislator who has done some very good work in his day, but who feels evidently that he must yield something to the pressure from his district or elsewhere for greater latitude in pension matters. This bill provides, among other things:

1. That all pension laws shall be construed liberally in the interest of the claimant, who shall not be required to furnish proof excluding all reasonable doubt, but merely to establish his claim by fair preponderance of proof.

2. That all pensions reduced or discontinued since the beginning of 1893--a date obvibusly chosen for the purpose of wiping out Commissioner Lochren's record--shall be reconsidered and readjudicated upon application, and if restored shall begin again from the date of the reduction or discontinuance.

3. That all investigations into the merits of pensions previously allowed shall be conducted in open session, and at the county seat of the county in which the person affected resides.

4. That the oaths of persons who served as non-commissioned officers or privates shall weigh as much as those of commissioned officers.

5. That marriage may be prima facie proved by satisfactory evidence that the parties habitually recognised each other as husband and wife, and were so recognized by their neighbors, and lived together as such up to the death of either of them or of the enlistment of the man, and that the children born of such a union shall be for pension purposes deemed legitimate.

7. That if a claim for a pension under the dependent act is rejected on the ground of no pensionable degree of disability, the applicant may have an order for examination before another board of surgeons without filing a new or supplemental declaration, but merely on the sworn statement of a reputable physician that a pensionable degree of disability does exist, and that, if a second examination results favorably, the pension shall begin from the date of filing the rejected application, or from the date subsequent to such filing at which the disability is proved to have begun.

8. That a widow whose net income does not amount to three hundred dollars a year shall be considered as "without other means of support than her daily labor" for the purposes of the dependent pension act.

Senator Mason Against Expansion.

Washington, Jan. 11.--The fight against the peace treaty was resumed in the Senate yesterday. Senator Mason made a characteristic speech favoring his amendment to the treaty, declarin gthat the United States shall not govern the Philippine islands without the consent of the inhabitants.

"It is easy to drift with the tide," began Mr. Mason. "But it is not always safe. It is pleasant to remain in the harbor when the storm is on, but sometimes the storm within the inner conscience is more dangerpus to peace of mind than the storm without the harbor is to human life.

"'I agree that you can,' as Lincoln said, 'in the long run trust the people.'

"I am willing to trust the people and I want the people to hear both sides of the case before the verdict is rendered.

"Distinguished editors and statesmen say the Republican party favors governing certain nations without the consent of its people. Who dares speak in advance for the party that speaks only in its conventions?

"I may appear to speak one word for the Philippines, but two for my own people when I lead for the broad manhood of the man who wrote: 'All just owers of government are derived from the consent of the governed.' We ought to begin to learn the inexorable law of compensation.

"You cannot govern the Philippines without taking them. You have not yet their consent and the proposition of taxation without representation is made again. Look out for tea parties. Those little semi-social functions are likely to break out even there, for 'Hail Columbia' and 'Yankee Doodle' have been heard in the archipelago.

"No matter how easy be the yoke of a foreign power--no matter how lightly it sits upon the shoulders, if it is not imposed by the voice of his own nation and of his own country, he will not, he cannot and he means not to be happy under its burden.

William A. Russell Dead.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 11.--William A. Russell died at his home in this city at the age of sixty-eight, from an attack of apoplexy.

He was a member of the well known Russell family of this state and had been very prominent in New England enterprises ,especially in the manufacture of paper.

He was a Republican member of the Forty-sixth Congress from the Seventh Massachusetts district, and served in the state legislature.

He had for years been a director of the Fitchburg Railroad.

The Nicaragua Canal Bill.

Washington, Jan. 11.--The House committee on interstate and foreign commerce failed to agree upon the basis of a Nicaragua canal bill and voted down two propositions, one for a special meeting yesterday afternoon and one for a special meeting to-day. The whole question now goes over until the regular meeting on Friday next.

SHARKEY WHIPS M'COY.

Brute Strength Triumphs Over Science in the Prize Ring.

New York, Jan. 11.--At the Lenox Athletic Club last night, before a howling mob that completely filled the arena, Sharkey, the sailor, knocked out Kid McCoy.

An old, old timer, who had gone through the talk of a thousand fistic festivals, said it was numerous degrees colder than Corbett's backers were at Carson City in the March when Sullivan's conqueror passed the heavyweight championship up to Fitzsimmons.

First Round--They advance to the center and shake hands. McCoy circled around Sharkey, led left for the body and put the right under the chin. They clinched and broke clean. McCoy kept his feet going and got the right to Sharkey's face. A vicious left swing by Sharkey was cleverly ducked. The Kid put the left to Tom's ribs and put a hot right hander to the face. Sharkey tried a right swing without avail. Both were smiling as the round closed.

Second Round--McCoy immediately put his feet to work and got his left to the face in easy fashion, but without strength. Sharkey forced the Kid to the ropes and then tried to rough him to the ground, but without harm. Sharkey tried with the left for a swing to the head, but McCoy side stepped and then jabbed left to the wind. Another tremendous swing by Sharkey's left was finely ducked and then the Kid put the left into Sharkey's neck. There was evidence of attempted roughing on the part of the ex-sailor as the round closed.

Third Round--The Kid opened the round with a solid left on the eye. Sharkey tried swings and uppercuts without reaching the spot intended and the Kid kept his feet going and got into close quarters, where he worked on the stomach. Sharkey missed a left swing, and the Kid got his left to the chest with good effect. Sharkey got in a left swing lightly under the chin. McCoy knocked Sharkey down twice and kept up the same furious gait when the mariner came to his feet, having him thoroughly at sea when time was called at the end of the round.

Fourth Round--A feint with the right on McCoy's part was mimicked ludicrously by the sailor. The Kid landed left and right on the nose. Sharkey clinched. Sharkey missed left hook and the Kid lost no time in returning with a straight left.

Fifth Round--Sharkey started to rough it, missed with both hands, and when the Kid ducked, the sailor dove into the ropes. The Kid landed the left full on the neck. Again he put it home fair and blocked the sailor's right counter. The crowd hissed as Sharkey continued to rough matters.

Sixth Round--The Kid began with putting the left to Sharkey's forehead. Sharkey rushed and got home a blow with the right under the Kid's heart, but without doing apparent harm. The round ended with Sharkey blowing like a whale and the Kid as composed as at the start.

Seventh Round--The Kid again jabbed the left to the eye. McCoy uppercut Sharkey.

Eighth Round--Sharkey ran into a left lead. When McCoy stood Sharkey off the sailor addressed the crowd with "He's fired." Sharkey sent in two low blows, taking the Kid cleanly below the belt. The Kid fell in a heap, but got up and continued with speed. Sharkey again began to rough and landed left and right to the head.

Ninth Round--Sharkey landed two lefts on the ear in quick succession. Sharkey fouled repeatedly.

Tenth and last Round--Sharkey came up still on the aggressivse. McCoy led to the face, and Sharkey, with one hand free, uppercut him. The referee did not notice the blowy. McCoy backed away and then jumped in with a vicious left on Sharkey's bad eye, the right one. Sharkey bored McCoy going away, but before he could get out of distance Sharkey flashed a left hook to the jaw. The Kid went down against the ropes on the east side of the ring. Before he had staggered to his feet he was counted out, but Sharkey did not know this, and rushing in before the referee could stop him, again felled his man. Then the referee sent Sharkey to his corner, and McCoy, who was groggy, slowly rose and staggered to his corner, soundly and decisively beaten. Time of round, one minute and thirteen seconds.

In this case Martha Place was convicted of having smothered her stepdaughter, Ida Place, on February 7 last in Brooklyn.

WRECKED BY A PILOT'S LEG.

How the Mysterious Loss of a Steam Propeller Was Solved.

"We are never amazed when vessels go aground and are wrecked on Lake Erie during the gales that are common on that treacherous water, for we expect such things then," said a lake skipper, but when one is grounded on a clear day and wrecked, on a course as clear as the day, and in the hands of a pilot that knows the ground like a book, we naturally wonder a little and want to know the whys and wherefores. Such was the case of the propellor Susan E. Peck, that went aground near Bar point and was lost with a $20,000 cargo.

"The captain of the Susan E. had sailed successfully hundreds of times between Point Pelee and Bar point, and in all kinds of weather, and this time he had a wheelman who was known from one end of the lake to the other as one of the most expert navigators in the lake business. He had been lying up a long time for the very good reason that owing to an accident to one of his legs that leg had to be amputated to save his life. The lost member was replaced by an artificial leg and then the pilot was ready to take his post at the wheel again. His first service after his misfortune was this trip of the Susan E. Peck, and he ran her aground.

"The puzzle to everybody was how it was possible for the propellor, handled by a man of such skill and experience, on a straight course only forty miles long, and with every sailing condition favorable, to leave her course. The pilot was the most puzzled and astounded person of all. He soon got another vessel, and this one he ran in such an erratic manner but fortunately with no disastrous result that he was compelled to give her up and his usefulness as a pilot was gone. He and others went to investigating to see if they could discover what was wrong with his seamanship. After a while they discovered what seemed to be the trouble. In the pilot's artificial leg a great deal of steel had been used in the joints and other places. Sitting close to the binnacle, as he did while steering, this steel deranged the compass so that it drew the wheelman way off his reckoning and led to the wrong piloting that had wrecked the Susan E. Peck and endangered the other vessel that the wheelman navigated subsequently. This was what they argued, and to demonstrate the correctness of the theory the pilot took charge of a vessel without wearing his false leg. Everything worked to a charm. The mystery of the Susan E. Peck was solved, and the pilot restored to his old place in the confidence of Lake Erie skippers and vessel owners."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Trees in New Zealand.

The kauri is the monarch of the New Zealand forest, an indigenous pine, growing to enormous height, frequently eighty feet, before it sends out a bough, while its average diameter is from eight to nine feet. It is said to be 800 years in reaching maturity. There is no underbrush in a kauri forest, the prince of trees permitting no rival within its domain. The totara is another species of pine, which, however, has none of the characteristics of the coniferne of other countries, either in habit or appearance. The most singular of all is the rata, a peculiar tree with somewhat the nature of a parasite. If it springs up near a rimu pine it winds about it like a huge vine, its tightening coils gradually crushing the life out of the unfortunate pine. When it reaches the top it sends out branches and stands a hollow shell, its coil knit closely together by a dense network of fibres, which appear in the last stage of its growth. It has a like affinity for its own species, and a second rata springing up beside one of earlier growth will absorb and destroy it as it destroys the rimu. If, however, neither rimu or rata is within reach it grows up a respectable and well behaved tree, attaining a height of from forty to sixty feet, and is used for masts in ship building.—Chautauquan.

How Insects Hide.

How many have ever noticed the skilful way in which many insects disguise themselves when in danger from some large animal or bird? Probably you have all observed that the caterpillar "plays dead" when he is disturbed and that many insects choose for their homes some tree or shrub whose bark or foliage match themselves in color.

There is a certain variety of moth, quite common around elms, which fixes its wings so that they closely resemble spots or lichens on the bark of the tree and can only be detected by the trained eye. Another moth, whose principal colors are pink and yellow, arranges itself on the bottom of a primrose, so as to wholly escape notice. In the East Indian Islands there is a spider which reposes on the upper side of a large leaf in such a shape that it perfectly resembles decayed matter.

A hunter in tropical regions tells of seeing a cricket pursued around the trunk of a tree by a lizard. Suddenly the insect settled itself in a small depression in the bark, spread out its wings slightly and attened itself so that the lizard actually crawled over it and went away without ever knowing what had become of it.

Hen That Kills Rats.

A gentleman of Wilmington, Del., has a Plymouth Rock hen which catches rats. The hen waits at a rat hole in a stable and pounces upon an animal as it appears, usually seizing him by the leg. It then shakes him vigorously and picks out its eyes.

Traveling salesmen must take their meals whenever and wherever they can get them. They bolt their food one minute and hustle to catch a train the next. Hasty meals and continual jolting in railroad trains bring on indigestion and dyspepsia. A druggist at Bridgeport, Conn., says he has long had quite a trade for Ripans Tabules among traveling men and it is becoming a practice with them to carry a supply in the grip. One of these men takes two a day and declares they have helped him a good deal. After an evening session with jack pots, tobacco and whiskey, nothing clears the head in the morning so early or so thoroughly as a Ripans Tabule taken just before going to bed, no matter how late the retiring hour may happen to be.

A new style package containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

PRESIDENT SLOAN RETIRES.

The Oldest Railroad President Goes Out of Active Service.

New York, Jan. 11.--Sam Sloan, the head of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road, to-day retires from active service, resigning with his position the honor of being the oldest active railroad president in the United States. The road of which he has been president was practically established by him. He is eighty-one years old.

Samuel Sloan's career is a fair example of what a young man of high purposes, strict integrity and brains may accomplish in this glorious country of ours without any assistance other than that of his own talents and energy.

Here is a sentiment written a few days ago by Mr. Sloan in response to a request for advice:

"A young man should be diligent and give his closest attention to his business, whatever it may be. He should watch what goes on about him and drink in all the information that will tend to advance him. In all situations and all circumstances he must be scrupulously honest--never leave the straight path. Cheerfulness diligence and honesty should be his guiding lights, and unless something very adverse occurs, success will be his reward."

NEW YORK'S POISON MYSTERY.

District Attorney Says He is Unable to Make an Arrest.

New York, Jan. 11.--It was definitely stated by District Attorney Gardiner yesterday that no arrest will be made in the Adams poisoning case on the strength of the evidence collected up to date by Captain McCluskey and his men.

This he qualified somewhat when asked what would happen if the suspect in the case should attempt to leave the jurisdiction of the state. He is fully conversant with all that the detective investigation has elicited, for it was all laid before him yesterday afternoon at police headquarters by Chief Devery and Captain McCluskey, with the object of determining whether the case were ripe enough for an arrest.

Although he gave it as his firm belief that the police case is incomplete, he expressed the fullest confidence in the police detectives, in a statement which he made to-day to representatives of the press.

"I will not authorize the arrest of any man on such a terrrible charge of murder unless I believe that I can convict him." Thus he stated his position.

"Do you think from what you now know that the same person sent the poison to Barnet and to Cornish?" he was asked.

"That is my opinion," he answered.

"Has any attempt been made to have the suspect identified as the purchaser of the wig and beard in Newark?" "Is Mr. Molineux the suspect?" and "Would the detective department permit the suspect to leave the jurisdiction of the state?" were the only questions asked him which he refused to answer.

He said that it would be manifestly unfair to reply to those, but he did say that any attempt on the part of the suspect to defeat the ends of justice by flight, would cause prompt action on the part of the police.

He invited the reporters and the public to aid in the detective work. This was the invitation:

"If any of you newspaper men or if any one brings to me such evidence as will convince a reasonable man of the guilt of any person in this case, I will go at once and swear out a warrant and the arrest will be made as quickly as the accused person can be reached by the officers."

One of the reporters present asked him if any such informant would have to be publicly known in the case and was answered in the negative.

Colonel Gardiner declared it was all rubbish to say that political influence hindered the arrest.

Russell Sage Wins.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 11.--The court of appeals has reversed the judgment of forty-three thousand dollars secured by William R. Laidlaw, Jr., against Russell Sage and ordered a new trial to be held.

Laidlaw was in Sage's office at the time an attempt was made on Sage's life by Norcross, and secured the judgment on the ground that Mr. Sage used him as a shield against the effects of the explosive.

President to Go to Cincinnati.

Chicago, Jan. 11.--Chicago members of the National Association of Manufacturers have received news that President McKinley will visit the annual convention of that body in Cincinnati on January 24, 25 and 26, and will deliver an address on "American Trade."

It is expected that much of the discourse will be immediately pertinent to territorial expansion and its important influence on commerce.

Sagasta Says No Crisis.

Madrid, Jan. 11.--Premier Sagasta had an hour's audience with the queen regent yesterday and afterward announced that there was no cabinet crisis and that he would not submit a vote of confidence and that he believed the present ministry would present itself to parliament.

LIFE MASKS.

Worse Than Having a Tooth Pulled--As Bad as Having a Picture Taken.

A mask from life is taken almost precisely the same way as after death, save that much greater care has to be used, as the subject's life hangs on a very thin thread, or, to be more precise, two small quills. It requires a great deal of nerve and patience to undergo, the sensation being most disagreeable. When a mask from life is about to be secured, the subject reclines on a long table, and towels are placed around his neck and forehead to prevent the plaster from going where not intended. The face is slightly greased, but not enough to fill the pores of the skin. Care has to be especially taken with the eye lashes, as otherwise, in the subsequent operations, these are likely to be pulled off, which would not be exactly pleasant. A small quill is now inserted in either nostril to allow the subject to breathe, and cotton wool is then lightly pressed around the base to keep the liquid plaster from intruding. A pair of scissors is always kept handy, so as to be able to cut off the top of the quills, should by any chance the plaster splash up and cover them.

All being ready, a few cheering words are spoken to the unhappy victim, and the plaster is mixed. This is carefully poured or sprinkled over the features. The plaster, through being mixed with warm water, quickly hardens, and in the course of about five minutes the mold is strong enough to be taken off. It has to be carefully done, as the subject is generally eager to get a mouthful of fresh air again. A slight tap with the hand is given to the two side pieces, which relieves the joints made by the thread. The top or central piece is then lifted up and pulled slightly downward, so as to withdraw the quills from the nose, as they come out with the mould. The sides are then taken off. Probably some of the hair may hold the mold but with a little coaxing, or by the insertion of the scissors, it can soon be removed. Care must be used to get the ears, but without breaking either the subject or the mold. The ears are taken only on the front sides, cotton wool being placed at the back to prevent the plaster going around. When removed, the three pieces are put together and plaster placed on the exterior to hold and strengthen them.—Exchange.

The Railway Business in China.

There have of course been many ludicrous as well as dangerous incidents on the North China line. When it was first opened Chinese would come to the booking office and try to bargain for tickets. When told the fare they would offer half, and gradually raise their bid, much disgusted that they should not, in a business spirit, be met half way.

One day a country gentleman, on his first ride in a train, seeing his house midway between two stations flying past, deliberately opened the door and stepped out into space. At the pace the train was going a European would certainly have been killed, but the supple celestial after a prolonged period of somersaults was seen to pick himself and bundle up, dust his clothes and set off home across the fields—much pleased with his short cut and the convenience of the "fire wheel carriage."

An unfortunate railway coolie, equally ignorant of the laws of mechanics, did not get off so well. Seeing two trucks coming at a snail's pace down a siding he placed his foot on the rail to stop them. To his astonishment, it was cut off, and he learned, like Stevenson's cow, that momentum is made up of mass as well as velocity.—London News.

Do You Put "In Haste" on Letters?

"I'll tell you a little fable," said the postal clerk. "Once there was a woman who wrote a letter to her dressmaker, who was then staying in a suburban town, asking her to call some time next week, and she put 'in haste' on the envelope, as women do, thinking she'd make Uncle Sam hitch up his breeches and get an additional move on him. The collecting carrier accidentally noticed 'in haste' on the envelope, so he carefully placed it in the bottom of his bag, where it slipped into a hole in the lining and stayed there three days. When the clerk at the postoffice saw it he laughed painfully and elbowed the letter off his desk, so that it fell into a basket and remained there three days. The postmaster of the suburban town smiled mornfully when he saw it, and then accidentally put it into the box of a farmer who drove to town for his mail once every three days. And when the dressmaker got the letter it was the week after next. Yes, it would surprise you to know how many women put 'in haste' on their letters, with the idea that Uncle Sam then hitches up his breeches and gets a move on him."—Philadelphia Record.

Salaries of Presidents.

Very few persons would suspect how small the salaries of presidents of republics are, when the enormous sums crowned heads receive are taken into consideration.

The foreigner often thinks the $50,000 of the President of the United States is merely a joke, and that he receives ten times as much in reality, but the same foreigner may not know that the French President, in a country where the wealthiest monarchs once reigned, receives only $120,000 a year.

The President of the little Andorra Republic contents himself with a salary of $15 a year, and the President of the Swiss Republic must be satisfied with $3,000.—New York Herald.

SANITATION OF HAVANA.

Col. Waring's Plans to be Carried Out as Fast as Means Will Allow.

Washington, Jan. 11.--The secretary of war evidently intends to carry out Colonel Waring's plan for the sanitation of Havana as fast as the means at his disposal will allow.

It is understood that some of the work is already laid out on Colonel Waring's lines, and more will be taken in hand as the money for it accumulates.

It is considered in the administration circle that the wisest course with regard to everything Cuban will be to make the island pay for its own work. This will obviate the necessity of calling upon Congress for any assistance in a financial way and the use of the collected taxes to make permanent improvements will enable the United States to turn over the island to its future governors in a first rate condition.

The president has power under his general authority as commander-in-chief of our military forces to do what he pleases with the various islands now under our military control, and the only hand Congress will have in the matter, so far as can now be foreseen, will be the receipt of occasional reports of progress in the form of executive messages.

Colonel Waring's estimate of the improvements needed in Havana sets the cost at about ten million dollars. The customs receipts of the island of Cuba for a period of twelve years under Spanish rule, and including some years of insurgent warfare, thinly disguised official peculation, and other discouraging conditions, averaged nearly thirteen million dollars a year.

The receipts at Havana alone made up nearly nine millions of this total. The best qualified experts who have looked into the subject lately agree in predicting that with the present provisional tariff and an honest administration of the customs, the receipts from imposts will come very near to doubling those under Spanish rule. In that case, although Havana would receive only her pro rata share of the money collected, there would be enough of that to carry out the Waring programme with a neat surplus to devote to other purposes.

It is said to be the president's desire to give such an exhibition of the possibilities of wholesome administration in Cuba as will set the pace for the Cuban administration, if it ever comes; on the theory that, having once tasted the fruits of good government, the Cubans will not allow their own administration to fall very far short of the standard set up by the United States government while in possession of the island.

DREYFUS CASE AGAIN.

Dreyfus's Reply Read to the Cabinet. Chamber of Deputies Meets.

Paris, Jan. 11.--The resignation of M. Quesnay de Beaurepaire as president of the civil section of the court of cassation has revived interest in the Dreyfus case, which had calmed down during the last few days to the fever point.

The anti-Dreyfusites are doing everything possible to discredit the court of cassation, as it is generally accepted in the best informed circles that the court is preparing to render judgment in favor of Dreyfus.

The minister of justice, M. Lebret, announced that M. Maseau, the first president of the court of cassation, will preside over the criminal section of the court of cassation instead of M. Loew, when the Dreyfus inquiry is terminated and the court meets to make a decision.

This step has been taken in consequence of the virulent attacks on M. Loew, based on the fact that he is a Jew.

The minister also read the telegraphic deposition from Dreyfus, in which he not only declared that he had never confessed that he was guilty to Captain Lebrun-Renault who had charge of the prisoner at the time of his condemnation and degradation, but insisted that he had always protested his innocence and had intimated, after his degradation on the parade ground of the military school at Paris, his intention to declare publicly that his innocence would be recognized in two or three years.

Porter Says Cubans Are Capable.

New York, Jan. 11.--Robert P. Porter, who has just returned from Cuba, whither he was sent as special commissioner by President McKinley, spoke at Cooper Union under the auspices of the People's Institute on "Practical Problems that Confront us in Cuba."

Mr. Porter stated that he had been ordered by the president to consider only the good of all the people of Cuba in making his report, and not to be influenced by either Spanish or Cuban nationality.

He was to remember that Cuba was not a possession, but a trust. The tariff regulations recommended by him went into effect on January 2. This tariff was only twenty-five per cent. of the one charged by the Spaniards, but he thought it would prove ample, as "honest men and not thieves would collect and administer the revenues."

Mr. Porter said that the political future of Cuba was a difficult problem to dispose of. The intelligent Cubans favored annexation, but he was firmly convinced that the Cubans could govern themselves, and would make application for admission to the Union as a state.

Smallpox in Quebec.

Montreal, Jan. 11.--Smallpox has again made its appearance in the province of Quebec, this time in Soulanges county, there being five cases in one family two miles from Coteau du Lac, and one at Coteau Landing.

Every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the dreaded disease.

Game Warden Tooker Guilty.

Paterson, Jan. 11.--James L. Tooker, formerly deputy game warden and a resident of Pequa Amboy, who was on trial on a charge of murdering Secundo Canovo on October 15 last, was found guilty of manslaughter.

The verdict was a surprise, as the testimony led to the belief that the prisoner would be acquitted.

Nervous Dyspepsia
To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.
MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full-sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well known religious worker and writer of St. Louis.

Public Secretary for the St. Louis School Patrons' Association, and the District Conference of Stewards of the M. E. Church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 1 9 eod 9

XMAS HAS GONE.
Maybe some of your teeth have, too. It don't cost anything to find out all about them. Poor economy to buy dyspepsia medicine and go with poor or no teeth. The longer you neglect them the more trouble they'll cause you when they begin. The pain of having them put right is all a delusion. Free consultation invited.

Curb the Trusts.

There is unquestionably a popular feeling in New Jersey against the State being made a legal asylum for all the great combinations of capital and enterprise in the country, but some regard the plague of trusts that have taken up their legal abode in New Jersey as mitigated to a great extent by the big incorporations fees which the organizers pay into the State treasury. This sentiment is not shared with the people in general, however, as has been evidenced within the last year in the great outcry against the State being made a refuge for capitalists to hie themselves to for the purpose of escaping onerous and almost prohibitive laws that other commonwealths have enacted to control and curb the disposition to put the regulation of price of certain commodities into the hands of the wealthy few.

New Jersey's leniency with trusts has brought deserved odium upon the State, but the trend of affairs now is for the commonwealth to redeem its fair name by enacting such legislation as will result in a general cleaning out of these grasping, unfair monopolies dignified by various high-sounding titles. To that end it is expected that among the first bills to be introduced into the Legislature, which formally convened yesterday, will be one to put a stop to the wholesale formation of trusts under the State laws.

Under the proposed law every trust is declared unlawful, against public policy and void. For the enforcement of the law it is provided that quo warranto proceedings may be taken. Any foreign corporation violating the law is to be denied the privilege of doing business in the State. Such violation is declared a conspiracy against trade, and any person who shall as principal, manager, director, agent, or servant, or in any other capacity, knowingly carry out any of the purposes of such trusts or furnish any information to assist in carrying out any such purposes shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $5,000, or be imprisoned for not less than six months nor more than one year, or be punished by both fine and imprisonment.

The character of the trust may be established by proof of its general reputation.

In addition, any person who shall be injured either in business or property by any violation of this act, shall be entitled to sue and secure double the amount of the damages sustained and the costs of the litigation.

Senator Reed's Apt Word.

Senator Reed entered upon his duties as presiding officer of the State Senate by delivering an address that was typical of the man. The Senator did not indulge in airy persiflage, but was brief and to the point. His remarks were of a common-sense nature, aiming briefly to outline his ideas of what the Senate should accomplish at this session.

Of course, there was a touch of humor in his talk, for it would not be the Honorable Charles unless he made at least one laugh. The reference to Hobson was woven into his remarks so happily and adroitly that had he passed it over without a reference to the latter-day hero of the same name we should have considered the Tall Sycamore as slightly frustrated by his new honors.

But the cleverness of his words were there in the same old way, and the Senator's friends at home can depend upon it that he will leave the President's chair at the end of the session with the reputation of having made an admirable record.

With the exception of Senator Stokes, all of the able men of the Legislature are lawyers. On the Republican side they are Senators Johnson, of Bergen; Pitney, Cross and Reed, and on the Democratic side, Messrs. McDermott, Martin and Van Cleef. In the House the Republican lawyers are Speaker Watkins, Mr. Jones, of Essex; Messrs. Bell and Wakelee, of Bergen; Mr. Wood, of Mercer, and Messrs. McKee and Lewis, of Passaic. With the exception of Mr. Blackwell, of Hunterdon, all the Democratic lawyers are from Hudson. They are Messrs. Abbett, Benny, Marks, Murphy, Marnell and Walscheid.

The State Board of Taxation made an important decision yesterday in reference to the right of a municipality to grant exemption of taxes to a company who have been induced to locate its factory in such a place by terms of which the tax exemption was part. The case was brought up on appeal from an assessment levied by the assessor of Hightstown against the Hightstown Electric Light and Power Company. The Board of Taxation declares that no town has the right to grant any such exemption as claimed by the electric light company, even if it is backed up by an ordinance of the local officials, as it is in this case under review.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Somerset county, one of the smallest in the State, and mainly agricultural in its industries, will have had in nine years two Presidents of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Assembly for two terms. The wealthy and populous county of Essex has not had the presiding officer of the Senate since 1887, nor the Speaker of the House since 1883.—Newark News.

President Reed of the Senate is six feet tall. His campaign for the Presidency lasted six weeks. He was at sixes and-sevens with ex-Senator Thompson throughout the contest, and spent six days in Trenton with Senator Francis a fixing his fences. He had six Senators with him after the first six days, and in the six h week he corralled the seventh. He will receive $666 for his official service for the State.—New York Press.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Fully 50 per cent of the employees of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company will be obliged to buy new movements for their watches, as the result of an order which has just gone into effect. Heretofore an employe's watch that varied less than thirty seconds in a week was passed by the inspector. Now the time pieces must contain seventeen jewels and be adjusted to three positions. The new movements cost from $17 upward.

W. B. Bennett, foreman of Warren Engine Company, saw the fire yesterday noon and ran to the neighboring box to send in an alarm. Then he found that he had lost his keys. Yesterday afternoon he picked up The Daily Press and found a bunch of keys advertised. He came to The Daily Press office and found that they were his property. He was preparing to advertise for them in The Press when he discovered the ad. It's the old story. The cent-a-word column of The Press again finds the owner of lost property.

UNCLE SAM'S FORCES AT HAVANA.

To be ready in case of trouble at the formal surrender of Havana, on January 1, Uncle Sam anchored in the harbor the four ships of his navy shown in the illustration. In addition, several thousands of American troops were quartered in the city and its suburbs. Major General Brooke personally directed the ceremonies of the day, assisted by Major General Fitzhugh Lee, governor of Havana province, and Brigadier General Ludlow, governor of the city of Havana.

GOV. WATKIN'S MESSAGE.

State's Financial Condition Reviewed by the Acting Chief Executive.

Trenton, Jan. 11.--Acting Governor Watkins sent his message to the legislature yesterday. It is confined to a review of the work of the departments for the year, and recommendations for legislation are left to Governor-elect Voorhees, who is to be inaugurated one week from yesterday. Governor Watkins says that his brief occupation of the executive office and the fact that he is a member of the legislature makes this course advisable.

The financial statement shows total receipts of $2,354,622.05, and the total disbursements of $2,298,443.49, which, with a balance in the bank on November 1, 1897, of $945,345.89, leaves a balance October 31, 1898, of $1,001,524.45. Commenting on this showing, the governor says:

"The state fund shows receipts over disbursements during the year amounting to $56,178.56, an increase in receipts of $55,844.17, and a decrease in disbursements of $14,617.48, as compared with the preceding year. During the year just closed the receipts from the tax for state uses on railroad corporations were reduced by payments to the various districts of the state, amounting to $199,132.61, under an act passed at the last session of the legislature.

"Payments were made during the year classed as 'extraordinary expenses' amounting to $191,170.34. Notwithstanding these unusual expenditures, the year closed with a cash balance on hand of $1,001,524.45, the largest at the close of any year in the financial history of the state.

"The war debt has been reduced by the payment of two hundred thousand dollars, and the principal sum of th's debt will be further reduced by the payment of one hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars, due January 1, 1899, leaving the last installment of the war debt, seventy-one thousand dollars, which falls due on January 1, 1902."

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 11.—Rev. A. L. Wilson, of the Methodist church, Bound Brook, will make a missionary address at the Methodist Sunday-school Sunday February 5th.

The Washington Avenue Card Club met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. W. E. Terry for the first time in several weeks. Euchre was played, after which refreshments and dancing begun. The evening was pleasantly spent, and the party did not break up until 2 o'clock. The first prizes were won by Miss Janie Churchill and Robert Carpenter; the second prizes by Miss Jessie Haynes and Robert Giddis. Miss Haynes will entertain the club next time.

One of the residents who lives near the sewer beds informs a Press reporter that since the last thaw the sewer beds have been full to the brim, and have overflowed and run into the road. It is said in the borough that the beds cannot accommodate the surplus, and that since the snow began to melt the beds have not been able to hold all the sewage.

The fifty-horse-power boiler for Gray & Harrison's crusher has arrived, and was placed yesterday on a side track near Gray's coal office. It will be moved as soon as possible to its destination in the mountains.

Rev. A. I. Martine is spending several days at Manhasset, L. I., where they are going to dedicate a new church, at which he will officiate.

Jesse Dalrymple has returned from a visit with his daughter, Mrs. Sprowl, of Jersey City, and is now with his daughter, Mrs. A. N. Randolph.

Miss Minnie Van Middleworth has gone to Jersey City to visit with friends and relatives for several weeks.

The missionary circle of the Presbyterian church will hold a meeting tomorrow evening.

Evangelestic services were held last night in the Methodist church by Rev. E. S. Jamison.

Miss Martha Wellman, of Port Jefferson, spent yesterday visiting friends in the borough.

Henry Garretson's family, who are ill with diphtheria, are doing nicely.

Mrs. A. N. Randolph spent yesterday in New York.

Miss Winnie South is visiting relatives in Brooklyn.

Arthur Van Nest is visiting his aunt in Belmar.

Mrs. Edward S. Jamison is ill at her home.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, January 11.—The annual meeting of the Baptist church was held Monday night. This was a parish meeting, and three trustees were elected as follows: William F. Randolph, L. D. Walker and S. R. Dayton. The treasurer's report was a gratifying one, as he was able to report that all the church debt had been paid off since the last meeting a year ago.

The funeral of Isaac Brokaw was held this morning at 10 o'clock from the house. Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, to which the deceased belonged, officiated. Interment was in the family plot at Springfield.

Miss Matilda Warren is visiting in Flemington.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, January 11.—Ex-Sheriff Kyte is detained at his home suffering with the grip.

Fanwood Council, R. A., held an interesting meeting in their rooms last evening. Deputy Pfeiffer, of Bayonne, installed the newly elected officers and a visit was enjoyed by a delegation from Cranford Council. Under good of the order, cigars were passed and the time was given up to speechmaking and a good social time was enjoyed by all.

Real estate owners along the proposed trolley route are wearing a broad smile as the report is going around town that work will soon be started upon the proposed extension.

Mr. Goodborough, who has been visiting his brother, George Goodborough, has returned to his home in New York.

Borough Common Council meet in the Borough rooms this evening.

—An "experience social" is being arranged for some evening in February by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. The members will then tell their experiences in earning a dollar each.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion build up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Guaranteed.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, January 11—Frederick E. Bruton died at his late residence on Summit avenue Monday evening after an illness of a week with pneumonia. Mr. Bruton was connected with the Murray Transportation Company at their New York office. He is survived by a widow and one infant son. He was 47 years of age. The funeral services will be held from his late residence tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock and will be conducted by Rev. George A. Francis, pastor of the Baptist church. The interment will take place at Plainfield.

E. J. Whitehead has offered a prize to the lady of the Social Club who rolls the highest score during the coming season. The slate alleys of the Social Club are given over to the ladies Thursday evenings, which is ladies' night.

W. H. Chamberlain has placed an electrical clock in the fire headquarters which sets the alarm off each morning and night at 6 o'clock.

PEOPLE COME AND GO.

PERSONAL MENTION OF INTEREST TO PRESS READERS.

Some Come to Enjoy Pleasures of Plainfield, Others Journey to Either Mountain or Shore for Recreation.

Miss Emma Marlow, of East Fourth street, is ill with the grip.

Miss Pearson, of Vine street, has completely recovered from an attack of typhoid fever.

Charles Vail and family, of South Plainfield, have about recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Grace Rowland, of East Second street, has returned from a visit with friends in Hunterdon county.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxson Dunham, of Dunellen, has been spending a short time with Plainfield relatives.

Frank Putnam, of Elm place, was out to business for the first time in two weeks, having had the grip.

Miss Mary Vaneps, of East Front street, who has been visiting out of town friends, has returned home.

Bradley Smalley, of Netherwood, has almost recovered from an attack of typhoid fever, and he is now considered out of danger.

Martin Lawrence Doyle, of Richmond street, has returned to his studies at Seton Hall College after spending his Christmas vacation at home.

Gilbert Lovell, son of Leander N. Lovell, of Crescent avenue, and his friend, Mr. Whittlesey, who has been spending several days with him, have both returned to their studies at Yale University.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

HOW TO SKATE FAST.

INSTRUCTION BY THE JUNIOR CHAMPION OF AMERICA.

He Shows the Advantage of the Long, Straight Stroke—Once in Motion, Assume a Slightly Stooping Position—Ankle Straps Are Not Favored.

Skating bids fair to regain its old-time popularity, the only drawback to the sport being weather uncertainties. With this in view, the following remarks by Le Roy See, champion juvenile skater of America, will be read with interest. The methods of acquiring speed in ice skating, he says, differ somewhat according to the individual. There are several styles of fast skating, and each has its advocate among the fastest men on ice. I won fifteen scratch races, five interscholastic championships and am now the undefeated junior skating champion of America. This record is surely sufficient to show that my methods of skating are not entirely wrong.

Boys who fancy the exhilaration of ice skating may profit by my instruction. Perhaps they may discover that they possess speed qualifications that have been hitherto unthought of. In the first place, let me impress on boys the importance of general development. Gymnastic work is of great assistance. If indulged in during the Fall by the time Winter and ice arrive there will be less difficulty in getting into good skating shape.

Before going at any speed I always do several weeks' work at a moderate pace. I skate two or three miles daily, gliding along with as little effort as possible. Gradually my wind begins to improve, and before I know it I am able to move faster without losing my breath for an instant. Every day I increase my speed, until I attain racing form. But little practice suffices, as most of my skating is from that time done in actual competition.

In a race other conditions being equal, it is the stroke that counts. There are almost as many strokes as skaters, but my favorite is the long, straight sweep, so gracefully used by John Donoghue. This is a directly forward stroke, with the weight of the body on the entire foot. It leaves almost a straight line behind and saves the distance lost by the side angular stroke. In starting off, do not swing the forward leg. Just shove straight ahead, pressing to the side with the opposite foot. As the skate shoots forward, the other skate is gradually raised from the ice, the front point being the last to leave. On the start the stroke of necessity must be short. But, once momentum has been acquired, the length of the stroke should be increased. This is best done by thrusting the foot ahead powerfully and pressing with the ball of the other foot against the ice.

A mistake made by many is to start the stroke with a jerky hip motion. This must be avoided. It is not graceful, nor does it permit one to glide ahead as swiftly. Once in motion, bend forward from the hips at about the same angle as a racing cyclist assumes. Join the hands behind the back and keep the eyes straight in front. This is the position introduced in this country by Alex. Paulsen, the old-time Swedish skater. It reduces the wind resistance, and is far less exhausting than the more common position with swinging arms.

The body must be kept as rigid as possible. Every time one swings the body muscular exertion is used up which could have been better applied if concentrated in the leg muscles. While moving along raise the idle leg just high enough to clear and always have it poised for the next stroke in case an unseen obstacle should hinder the progress of the former stride. Keep in mind always to have the pressure of the foot even when the stroke is at full speed. Then, as it dies out, you will naturally lift the heel first, and as you plunge ahead for the next sweep the toe is assisting you in getting into full motion.

In rinks where there is only a short stretch, you cannot adhere to these instructions very closely. The constantly circling motion forces you to keep arms stretched out to preserve balance. And, besides, the frequent turns limit the extent of your straight, long sweeps. It is on the turns that outdoor skaters lose ground in the rink races. Not being accustomed to them, they cannot get around rapidly. The way I make the turns is to use a short, choppy stride, known to skaters as "grinding." I skate almost entirely on the inner edge of my right skate and the outer edge of my left skate. My body is inclined inward, and I give my skate but little forward motion, relying on a side pressure. One foot crosses the other every yard or so. This is a knack which requires practice. The legs must be swung one in front of the other in quick succession. All the while you must be moving ahead and at the same time swinging around the sharp turns at good speed. A skater having mastered these details is quite apt to perceive a gain in his speed on the ice.

Before closing I wish to say two things. One is that a skater should not make the mistake of getting accustomed to ankle straps or supports. Training will strengthen the ankles, and if good-fitting shoes are worn they will never give way. A skater using straps stops the circulation of the blood and frequently is not up to his standard for this reason.

The other injunction is the necessity of taking precautions from catching cold or growing stiff after a race. Always have a good warm robe handy and never dress without a rub-down and massage to keep the muscles supple.

Although some skaters wear racing skates with blades as long as twenty-four inches, I do not favor runners over sixteen inches in length outdoors and for indoor work fourteen inches is long enough.

THE STRONG HAND.

How Actor Pompadour Jim Was Beat at His Own Game.

"I was playing at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, a few summers ago, and we got up a ball game, en costume, between the men of 'the Sinbad' company, which was playing at the Chicago Opera House. We wore the rigs or understudies of them, that we used in our performances, and the proceeds of the gate went to Chicago charity. Jim Corbett struck Chicago while the arrangements were progressing, and he was asked to pitch for the opposing nine. Louis Houseman the Chicago prize-fight promoter, introduced Corbett to all of us the day before the game. I noticed all of the fellows wincing when Corbett shook hands with them, and I saw that he was giving them the hard, chesty hand-squeeze, in order that they'd know that he was really strong, you know. Now, I had the trick—it's only a knack—of stalling off the hard hand-squeezer and of giving him a dose of his own medicine, and when it came my turn to have my hand mashed into a pulp I gave it to the Pompadour. I suppose he was actually about forty times as strong as I was or am, but any baby, if it knows the trick, can give the hugest kind of a strong man that pained feeling in a hand shake. Corbett looked at me in surprise, and in a bit of a heat, at that. But he couldn't say anything, inasmuch as he had been cracking the bones of all the rest of the fellows with his 'Ain't-I-a-strong-thing' handshake. Corbett got back at me in the progress of the game when I was at the bat. He took deliberate aim—I am positive he took deliberate aim—and soaked me on the left ear with a ball that made me see all kinds of meteoric showers for a week. That's the reason I am as happy as a man in a hasheesh dream when I hear that Corbett's conceit gets a solar plexus blow."

WILL SWIM THE HELLESPONT.

McNally Will Out-Do All the World's Historic Swimmers.

Peter S. McNally, the noted Boston swimmer and life saver, is to make another European trip next summer, with the idea of covering the Old World swimming courses made famous by Leander, Byron and others. He will go first to Rome, where he will give the modern Romans an exhibition of Horatius at the Bridge, but instead of landing on the opposite bank as the old-time hero did, McNally will swim on down the Tiber to the Mediterranean, sixteen miles away. He will then go overland to the ancient Hellespont, the Dardanelles, and will not only emulate Leander and Byron, but will go them one better by swimming the Straits in their widest part. He will next visit the Bosporus and the Suez Canal, and then he has planned a fifty-mile trip down the Rhine, from Frankfort to Cologne. Returning to America McNally proposes to swim from Newport, R. I., to Block Island, twenty-five miles, and later, from the Battery New York, to Coney Island.

Some of McNally's long swims in the past are as follows: Down the Kennebec River in July, 1884, twenty miles, in 6 hours and 51 minutes; from Charlestown to Brookline and return in July, 1886, sixten miles, in 6 hours and 57 minutes; from Newport to Narragansett Pier, August, 1896, rounding Brenton Reef lightship, sixteen miles, 4 hours and 57 minutes. In July, 1897, McNally set out to swim the English Channel from Dover to Calais. He covered twenty-five miles in 15 hours and ten minutes, getting within three miles of Cape Grisnez on the coast of France.

It is as a life saver, perhaps, that McNally is best known, having a record of 100 persons rescued. He has medals from Congress and from the Massachusetts Humane Society.

A National Cycle Show.

The only cycle show of National importance to be held in the near future will be the exhibition beginning January 21 and running for one week, at Madison Square Garden, New York. The principal manufacturers of wheels, as well as the makers of accessories and parts, have secured space. During the week several important conventions will be held in the concert hall. The League of American Wheelmen will hold a two days' session, and Gen. Roy Stone has been invited to take charge of the meeting to start a movement for the betterment of highways.

GOAT HUNTING IN ALASKA.

A Novel Method of Getting Them in Range to Shoot At.

"They have a queer way of hunting mountain goats up in the mountains back of Skaguay," said D. J. McKinney, the "Mayor of Skaguay." "The boys at one of my camps told me one day that they had seen some goats up in the hills and they asked me if I wanted to go along to hunt them. Of course I did, and we were soon climbing high up on the mountains, away above the altitude that I thought any living creature would live. Still up and up we went. The boys were trying to get above a place where they had seen the goats a few days before. When they had located the proper point they selected a huge bowlder and got me to help them tip it over. It took the combined strength of three of us to get the rock started. When it did get to going the havoc it caused on its way down to the valley was something fearful. Then the boys told me to get ready for a surprise. We all got our rifles ready and waited. It was only a short time until we saw emerging from the scrubby growth below us three fine goats. They came toward us, bounding from crag to crag, and apparently heedless of the danger they were running into. They came to within sixty yards of us and we brought down all three.

"I learned then that the goat always tries to get above rolling rocks, and that it is a favorite way of hunting them."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

HE HAS A SERVICEABLE HIP.

Swindler Dislocates It at Will and Railroads Pay Him Damages.

Some time ago a man fell on the platform of a train about five miles out of Indianapolis. His heel caught in a crack and his hip was dislocated by the fall. Three surgeons examined him, including the company's surgeon, and all declared that the man would be a cripple for life. The man was paid $2,200 and his lawyer's fees. In addition to this he was furnished with a baggage car and transportation for his lawyer and a nurse to go with him to Chicago. The railroad officials felt they had made a cheap settlement. The other day a man fell on a platform of the Norfolk and Western in Virginia and worked the same old story of the dislocated hip. But he had been seen on the previous day hunting for a place to catch his heel. A traveling man was present and recognized him as the man who had been paid by the Indianapolis road. An investigation revealed that the man was a professional contortionist and could dislocate any part of his body without pain. He has swindled several roads.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Remarkable Cane.

President Soden of the Boston Baseball Club received a cane recently that was made by a convict of the Anamora Prison, Iowa.

The cane is a curiosity. It is made of maple wood, and on it are carved the likenesses and names of thirteen members of the champion baseball team of 1897, in the highest style of workmanship. The top of the cane is of agate, and inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Above the likenesses appear the words, "Pennant Winners of 1897," and following are two bats crossed and a fac-simile of a League ball and a catcher's mitt.

Although the workman had to do his carving on a curved surface, he succeeded admirably in reproducing the lineaments of his subjects, each face being carved into the wood. It would be an easy matter to recognize most of the players.—Boston Herald.

Maine's Fresh Pork Club.

To be in the swim in certain parts of Maine, it is necessary to be a member of what are called fresh pork clubs. These clubs, it appears, are co-operative organizations for killing hogs and keeping the members supplied with fresh pork for the season. The social and sanitary advantages of membership in a fresh-pork club are many. As is well known to all Americans who have lived in the country, pig-killing time begins in September and continues at intervals until the holidays. By joining a club a family can prolong the fresh-pork season for months, as the pork of each slaughterer is divided among the members. But this is not the only advantage of membership. A local paper says that fresh-pork clubs have become so important in many communities that weddings and social entertainments are arranged so that "they may come off in pig-killing time."

The "S" Altered It.

In the gardens of a well-known nobleman's country seat in the south of Ireland, one of the show places of the country, painted boards were set up in different parts of the pleasure grounds, with this request:

"Please do not pull any flowers without leave."

Recently the district practical joker passed by that way, and, observing the notices, procured a paint brush, and unobserved, at daybreak, added an "s" to the last word on all the painted boards, which had the effect of making things pleasant until the cause was discovered for tourists and strange visitors who cherished a latent passion for floral gems.

Two newsboys in the gallery witness a performance of "Hamlet." In the last scenes, after Hamlet has killed Laertes and the king and the queen have died of poison and Hamlet of a poisoned wound, one of the newsboys exclaims: "Jim, what a time that must have been for extra specials!"—Tit-Bits.

ENDED IN SMOKE.

The police bureau at Paris had an extremely hard nut to crack. Setting out immediately for London was one of the most astute of Russian political suspects. This man was so keen scented that whenever he or his belongings had been overhauled by the police at St. Petersburg the officials had always been met by a bland but cynical smile, and had found nothing. But in spite of his mild protest, the polite shrug of his shoulders and slight lifting of his eyebrows, there was behind his exterior a master mind that directed the organization of the whole revolutionary movement of modern Russia.

This man to-night was leaving Paris for London, and was known to be bearing on his person the key to a most complicated cipher to be used by secret societies corresponding between London and St. Petersburg. Once in England, thanks to perfidious Albion, the harborer of all criminals and political refugees, no hand could touch him without a long and fumbling legal process not at all in accord with the plans of the Russian police, who wanted surer and swifter measures adopted.

Just after the Franco-Russian entente the Paris police bureau was the more anxious to cover itself with glory in the eyes of the Russian secret department. It was to be a fight for life. The man had taken all the precautions in his power, and the police had to make their plans accordingly.

The little journey of the man on this one night had the honor of having a special map of the route drawn by the police officials. But dotted in red on the familiar route from Paris to Calais were certain marks which meant a great deal to the police who read them. The end of all this was to discover where the man who was traveling had hidden his secret document and to filch it from him.

At the Gare du Nord a police officer, attired as a railway porter, in assisting the traveller with his portmanteau, substituted another similar in appearance. A second spy, at a given signal, was to snatch from him his gold-headed cane. Perhaps he carried the cipher sewn in the lining of his hat: the police must see to it. A party of card sharpers were to travel with him as far as Rouen, and during a preconcerted struggle his hat was to be knocked out of the window. From Rouen to Calais two more police spies, male and female, were to travel with him.

There was as much attention paid to this one man travelling between Paris and Calais as if he had been the czar of Russia travelling incognito in France. And the man knew it. But, brave man though he was, he saw that the French authorities meant to stop at nothing to gain their ends. He carried his life in his hands. Surely they would not rob him of that. A dead man can tell no tales, and he laughed to think how securely his secret was hidden.

The cipher that was worth half a million roubles to the Russian government was written with invisible ink, and was contained on a piece of tissue paper some four inches by two inches square. Fifty times during the journey had the police spies, but they knew it not, set eyes on the document.

Hardly had he alighted at Calais when a laborer carrying a plank of timber, narrowly missed by a few inches striking it against his head. He grew white as he thought of things he knew of the methods of the French police. But he set his teeth, and if there was one man in Europe who could carry his mission through it was this man.

A blind man coming along the street, led by a boy, suddenly struck him a blow between the eyes. The assault was so sudden that for a moment he was stunned. On recovering a crowd had quickly gathered. The blind man was bleeding from the mouth, and a dozen witnesses cried aloud that he had tried to strike down the wretched beggar. The beggar himself cried out most loudly of all. A couple of gendarmes marched him off with the beggar, the cloud of witnesses following in their train.

In the police office he regained his composure. He smiled when the officer in charge read over to him the accusation of the beggar. To do this officer justice he treated the accused with marked respect. They met on common ground. It was a duel of accomplished fencers.

"A chapter of accidents, M. le Directeur," laughed the prisoner.

"A busy life, monsieur, has its dangers," returned the other.

The messenger's passport was in order. He submitted himself to be searched, nay, he desired it. He calmly looked on while the officers sought what they wanted, and he offered a cigarette to his interrogater, who sat in silence while the blue smoke from the cigarette embraced him as a wreath from behind which peered two keenly bright eyes. Of course they found nothing and were met by the same cynical smile.

But the cipher never reached London that journey. It had been consumed by the police agent at Calais. How amusing it must have been to have seen the blue smoke that was feeding on the cipher, which the paper around the cigarette had written upon it, issuing forth from the mouth of a police official.

"And you may guess," said the secret messenger, in telling the story afterwards, "how glad I was to see the whole efforts of the French police end in smoke."—Golden Penny.

AN AMERICAN ASPIRANT

CHAPTER I.

Few of the muffled up, mummylike passengers reclining uneasily in their deck chairs converted by the warring elements into dangerously perverse commodities could have imagined—had a nauseated consciousness permitted them to turn their patient eyes aside from the monotonous horizon of stormy sky and heaving sea—that the bright figure in the doorway of the ladies' saloon exemplified a reckless would be gambler in nineteenth century methods.

The figure was supple, girlish and dashing. It was, too, essentially ladylike. Like a scarlet breasted robin perched on a twig, it stood swinging itself lightly on two tiny feet. Its chin was thrown up. Its two large bright eyes mastered amusedly the pathetic avowal of the wind swept deck, with its row of unlucky passengers. Obviously their reasoning was struggling against the saddening conviction of the poverty of science in general where seasickness was the cause in particular. The superb sweep of wind swept ocean wildly tossed higher and higher as the elements roared responsively to the kiss of the oncoming storm, picturesquely emphasizing the maxim that what was poison to the seasick was meat to that bright onlooker.

With a glad little sigh of joy the girl stepped over the threshold of the saloon and stood lightly out on deck. With an irrepressible laugh of mischievous satisfaction two fur gloved hands were lifted to settle more firmly a golf cap on a neatly coifed head. Then the hands were plunged deeply into the pockets of a Bedfern ulster. Priscilla set forth, head bent forward, shoulders thrown forward, limbs sternly self controlled, for a battle with the wind. The solitary figure paced the deck for some moments unmolested and undisturbed. The seasick passengers turned uneasily, shifted fretfully, groaned unmistakably, and finally one by one crept, a shivering, weather beaten pack of cowards, below.

Priscilla was left alone. The little figure paced to and fro. A vivid color had sprung into the pale cheeks. The brown clear eyes were alight. The storm hissed and roared. The sea gulls screamed. The screw, like a giant heart beat, thudded out its dutiful, monotonous throb.

"I beg your pardon. How stupid of me! I beg your pardon."

"It's nothing," said Priscilla mendaciously. Her hat was awry; her hands had been swiftly pulled from their pockets to ward off an unexpected force which had descended upon her like an avalanche. She was swaying, laughing and blushing, protesting, but impotent, in the arms of a complete stranger—a man with a strong, kind, beardless face and a pair of honestly repentant eyes.

"I did not see you," explained Priscilla. "My head was down."

"So was mine. I beg your pardon."

The stranger lifted his cap. His hair was crisp, curly and cut very short. He was well set up. He had a pair of magnificent broad shoulders. Altogether he looked a desirable acquaintance.

Priscilla sighed. Only the night before, in the sitting room of an imposing New York mansion in Fifty-fifth street, she had been holding forth, to a ring of breathlessly admiring brothers and sisters, on her pet hobby.

"If I had the world to make over," she said—like most youthful and aspiring maidens, Priscilla was guilty of badly proportioned ambitions—"if I had the world to make over, I should banish introductions."

"Because?" Tom had questioned. Tom was the red haired one. His family had denominated him the "interrogation point."

"Because," Priscilla had answered, in her fresh, unstudied voice, "because I consider, since we are all of us God's creatures, introductions are bad form, ferociously bad form." Priscilla was wont to be a trifle exaggerated. "But then what is the use of adverbs if not to employ them?" she retorted, airly, when reprimanded, to which original query no member of her adoring family had as yet discovered an adequate response.

"Why 'bad form?'" asked Harry.

"It's on the face of it," cried Priscilla. "Democracy is our portion. Why assume an aristocracy of manners when we are a free country and are supposed to ignore caste and to refute defunct issues?"

"Why, indeed?" chimed in Harry. He hadn't the slightest idea what Priscilla was "driving at," but then she was a "dear," and for some time he had advised his parents to let her "have her head," so he repeated noncommittally, "Why, indeed?"

Today Priscilla remembered the little conversation. Last night already seemed a long way off. She hugged the flattering unction to her soul at this highly opportune moment that her family had agreed with her in her broad views.

Her conscience therefore was perfectly free from a shadow of guile as she looked up innocently in her companion's face and questioned with a natural curiosity born of the moment's loneliness and the rich promise of a future in unknown lands, "Going abroad?"

"Obviously," answered the man, laughing. His eyes twinkled irrepressibly.

"So am I," retorted Priscilla delightedly. "Isn't it lovely?"

Her companion looked a trifle dubious. Then with a perceptible effort not to dampen her ardor he answered: "It depends upon what part of 'abroad' one is going to somewhat, doesn't it? Where are you going?"

"To Paris," returned Priscilla almost before he had got the words out of his mouth.

Her companion made a round hole of his lips and raised his eyebrows quizzically. Then he asked nonchalantly, "Alone?"

"Oh, no!" returned Priscilla immediately, with perhaps unconsciously regretful emphasis on the "no." "Oh, no; there are Aunt Mildred and Mary—my little sister, you know," explanatorily.

There was a pause. The two commenced to pace to and fro rapidly.

"Paris, to me," began Priscilla, "is what America was—to Dickens."

"H'm!" replied her companion in a muffled voice. "Why not Columbus?"

"I prefer Dickens," protested Priscilla obstinately.

"Dickens never discovered us," returned her companion perversely. "Far from it. Columbus discovered us."

"Well, as you please," acquiesced Priscilla, unwilling longer to prolong the ecstasy of the great moment which was to come. "Now, why do you suppose I am going to Paris? What do you imagine I am going to discover?"

"Can't imagine," answered her companion. His gray eyes caught her dancing ones for a moment, and he wondered unjustly why those well groomed girls with the little feet and the long lashed eyes didn't live in Chicago as much as in New York.

"I am going to Paris," announced Priscilla in what in a man would have been denominated stentorian tones, but in Priscilla were only shrill and rich with cheerful possibilities—"I am going to Paris to sing in grand opera."

"Oh!" said her companion shortly. Then he added flippantly, in a tone charged with mirth: "The lack of novelty contained in the contemplated situation may be the reason why it strikes me as a very old joke. Otherwise I might believe you were laughing at me." The tone was deeply ironical.

"Laughing at you!" Priscilla shouted. The wind was blowing very hard, and she was obliged to approach her companion closely to make herself heard. "Laughing at you! It's you who are laughing at me. Why?" The slender figure was drawn up very straight. The man began to remember that, after all, girls' eyes in Chicago, and even in Philadelphia, were softer than these magnificent orbs which were blazing at him so defiantly.

He looked down at her sharply. Then he drew a long breath. "You don't mean to say you are in earnest?" he asked.

"Yes," said Priscilla.

"You are going to sing in grand opera. You? In grand opera?"

"Yes," said Priscilla.

"Easiest thing in the world, isn't it?" remarked her companion sarcastically. "Just walk in and say to the manager, 'Here I am, old boy—voice, beauty, family, fascination—drawing card.' The manager is only too glad of such an opportunity. That's your idea, isn't it?"

Priscilla's cheeks were bright carmine.

"Of course," she began lamely, "I know I will be obliged to work very hard. But my voice is a natural voice, a perfectly natural voice. It requires very little tuition. My teacher in New York told me so. Besides, it has an individual timbre—quality, you know." As her companion remained solidly unimpressed she stopped.

They had begun walking to and fro again.

"I wonder," began the man, a little gruffly, "if you will be very angry with me if I ask you a question, if you will think me impertinent?"

"No," returned Priscilla earnestly. "No, indeed. I think, I know already, that you and I will be very good friends, because, you see, we have both begun by speaking the exact truth to one another. I hate lies," she added irrelevantly.

Her companion did not appear to have heard her.

"What is the question you wish to ask me?" demanded Priscilla curiously.

"Let's go and lean over the railing there for a moment," said the man.

When they were comfortably ensconced, with a wall of coiled rope behind them, the green billows ahead, her companion spoke.

"Are you poor?" he asked gently.

"Oh, no," said Priscilla.

"Then why in the name of everything beautiful do you wish to sing in grand opera?"

"Well," said Priscilla comfortably, "I'll tell you why. You see, my friends think it's such a pity a voice like mine should be lost. It's so sweet. You've no idea how very sweet it is. I love to listen to it myself. You shall hear it some day." She made this promise so naively that her companion contemplated her for one moment directly and then as directly desisted.

"Women," said he, a trifle awkwardly—he disliked sickly sentimentality—"women have been known to sing to their babies very successfully, so sweetly as to put them to sleep."

"Yes," answered Priscilla simply. "But, you see, I have no babies."

There was a pause.

"But the poor girls!" her companion began. "How about all the poor girls who are endeavoring to obtain a hearing? Don't you think it is rather selfish of you to seek to crowd them out?"

Priscilla's rosy chin was lifted very high indeed. "Ungenerous," she cried superbly. "Way, poor or rich, should a voice be denied its opportunity to be heard?"

"That is not original," he remarked rather daringly. "It's too stilted from you. Your friends have said that to you, and you repeat it."

"Perhaps," admitted Priscilla.

"I am going to tell you a story," the other began.

"Oh, do, please," begged Priscilla.

"But before I begin I must tell you my name." He drew from his coat pocket a neat Russia leather case surmounted by a modest monogram in silver letters, replaced the case, buttoned his ulster, and lifting his cap handed Priscilla his card.

"Mr. John Stornmouth," it read, "Union club."

"I am a lawyer," asserted Stornmouth.

"Thank you," said Priscilla indifferently. "Now the story, please. Oh, perhaps you would like to know my name. It is Priscilla Delno. My father is Judge Delno of the supreme court. My mother was born and brought up in Newburg."

"Nice place, Newburg," suggested Stornmouth.

"I think it's a perfect hole," announced Priscilla conclusively.

Stornmouth's eyes twinkled. "I met your father once," he remarked. "If you write to him, remember me to him. He won a suit for me in regard to my father's estate. It made a vast difference to me. I have every reason to remember your father."

"Dad's a brick," remarked Priscilla unexpectedly. "He understands me perfectly."

"I should think most 'bricks' would understand you," returned Stornmouth.

"Why?" asked Priscilla wickedly.

"To continue," said Stornmouth, "with my story. It is about a girl who five years ago, like you, started out to sing in grand opera. She was the sweetest little thing, with the bluest eyes and the happiest rosy face! She was poor, though, so she was desirous of singing for a living. Poor child!" He checked himself abruptly and clinched the hand which was tucked in between the buttons of his ulster. He scowled.

"Don't look so ugly!" cried Priscilla, who was watching him narrowly, her radiant speaking face alert with the interest the subject held for her. "What became of her?"

"She's dead," muttered Stornmouth.

"Dead!" she asked in a shocked voice.

"Heartbroken."

"But why?"

"Why?" echoed Stornmouth. "I'll tell you why. She thought, like you, that all she had to do was to sing; that all she had to struggle against she could win through prayer and pluck; that life was a fair fight, the battle fought with open doors, the result a just reward for merit. She found, child"—Priscilla's countenance had paled visibly; one little hand had grasped the railing; he continued less violently—"that she must crush out every natural desire, every evidence of spontaneity, every thought of hope, for the first was misunderstood, and the second was dubbed heart, not art. She would have been more than human to believe she could succeed in spite of facts which were exemplified in the broken, ruined lives of her friends, who were spent upon as dire a rack as saints were wrenched upon in the inquisition."

"Was anything the matter with her voice?" asked Priscilla.

Stornmouth laughed bitterly. "No. It was as rich as the voice of a thrush and as full of promise when she began. When she finished, it was heart broken, strident. It had been torn in two by the conflicting elements of misery and revolt."

They had begun walking to and fro again.

"I don't understand," began Priscilla faintly.

Stornmouth turned and confronted her sternly. "Listen," he urged. "Don't try to understand. Don't try. There is no slaughter of the innocents known today so inhuman, so utterly worthy of a counter woman's movement, emancipated or otherwise, as that slaughter of American song birds abroad who think—God help them!—that the world is not full enough of birds without them."

"I would like to try," said Priscilla firmly.

Stornmouth eyed her narrowly.

"Try what?" he demanded.

"Try to sing."

"If you sing," he said, "you will forget to laugh. Why not do both and remain at home?"

Priscilla's eyes filled with tears.

"They would all be so disappointed," she murmured, "all my friends."

Stornmouth laid a firm hand upon her wrist. "You are thinking," he urged, "that others have succeeded. You are thinking that courage is your portion; that immortality is your birthright; that a broader field stretches before you on the boards than off them. Remember what I tell you ten years from now, when your illusions have vanished. Vanity lies at the root of your desire. You will lose woman's best opportunity, wifehood and motherhood, chasing a chimera. You will give your bloom for disappointment, your freshness for unattained opportunity, your youth for mediocre notoriety. Count on your fingers today the American girls who have succeeded on the stage of the Grand Opera. Ask them if their life is not a Calvary." He stopped, breathing heavily.

"The girl you speak of," Priscilla questioned gently, her eyes still moist and her lips quite ashen—"who was she?"

"She was my sister," said Stornmouth.

"Did she sing at the Grand Opera?"

"No," answered Stornmouth, "a thousand times no. She spent money, strength, time, youth and patience waiting. Then she came home, crept like a tired bird to my heart, and—you know the rest." His voice was husky. He drew one strong hand across his eyes.

"Thank you," said Priscilla very softly.

"Shall we walk a little more?" she suggested after a few moments' stroll up and down the deck. "It is nearly luncheon time. I am cold."

"Not a word of this to any one," said Stornmouth. Then, "You will not renounce your plan?"

Priscilla shook her head. "I mean to succeed," said she.

Stornmouth held out his hand. It was large and firm and warm. It had a grip like iron. "Promise," he said, "that if what I say proves true you will recede before it is too late; you will choose obscurity instead of unworthy notoriety."

"I will promise," answered Priscilla, with a light little pressure of her hand, which, instantly withdrawn, reminded Stornmouth in an odd fashion of a bird which fluttered to its nest only to fly away again, "that if to sing means I must renounce one iota of my high ideals I will go home. There is no power on earth should induce a woman to accomplish anything whatsoever except in so doing she can cling to her best womanhood." The young face was very pure and beautiful. The girlish eyes were clear and true.

"You are made of good stuff," remarked Stornmouth skeptically, "but only time will tell."

"You mean"—

"Nothing. If you were my daughter, you should have remained at home."

Priscilla laughed a little girlish ripple of intense amusement. "Dad believes in me," said she.

"Pshaw!" cried Stornmouth. "Who ever heard of a father understanding his daughter? It takes a mere man to understand a girl."

"But dad's a 'mere man.'"

"No, he isn't," asserted Stornmouth dryly. "He's judge of the supreme court."

IVORY SOAP PASTE.

In fifteen minutes, with only a cake of Ivory Soap and water, you can make a better cleansing paste than you can buy.

Ivory Soap Paste will take spots from clothing; and will clean carpets, rugs, kid gloves, slippers, patent, enamel, russet leather and canvas shoes, leather belts, painted wood-work and furniture. The special value of Ivory Soap in this form arises from the fact that it can be used with a damp sponge or cloth to cleanse many articles that cannot be washed because they will not stand the free application of water.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces (one-quarter of the small size cake) of Ivory Soap cut into shavings, boil five minutes after the soap is thoroughly dissolved. Remove from the fire and cool in convenient dishes (not tin). It will keep well in an air-tight glass jar. COPYRIGHT 1898 BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO. CINCINNATI cipal musician, F. A. Sutton; inside sentinel, Edward Day; outside sentinel, Cornelius Perrine.

Commander Stephens, of the Post, took charge of a programme of music, recitation and speeches. Beside him on the programme were Captain McVoy and President Mrs. Morse. The programme consisted of soprano solos by Miss Jomini, accompanied on the piano by Clifford Braider; piano solos by Miss Jennie Smith; vocal solos by W. C. Smith, Jr., and Mr. Cutting. A most excellent recitation was given by Miss Florence Dodge, who appeared in the attire of an old woman. There was also a vocal solo by Joseph Moon, accompanied by W. C Smith, Jr., on the piano. Remarks were made by Installing Officer Gifford, Department Commander W. C. Smith and President Mrs. Morse. After the rendition of this programme all adjourned to the room below, where the Sons of Veterans provided a turkey supper complete for everyone. Much credit is given to E. P. T. Smith, F. A. Sutton and W. V. Sutton, the committee who arranged the supper. The committee was assisted by several young lady friends of the Sons.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Friday night the famous Scotch comedian, Frame, and company of dancers, vocalists, pipers and specialists, appear in a programme which will undoubtedly afford much pleasure. Mr. Frame has the reputation of being one of the foremost humorists of England and Scotland. The press teems with greatest praise of his work, and at Chickering Hall, New York, last week, he drew crowded houses, fully sustaining the opinions expressed of the excellence of his performances. His supporting company are artists who also rank high in their respective lines, and a first-class show, to suit all classes of theatre-goers, may be anticipated. Reserved seat tickets are now on sale at the box office.

PROTEST OF PROPERTY-OWNERS.

Hearing of the Objections to the Union County Boulevard Scheme Postponed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Jan. 11—The property-owners who object to the award of the commissioners in the matter of the Westfield avenue boulevard were on hand in force in the Union County Court yesterday morning, when the matter came up before Justice VanSyckel for a hearing. The objectors were also well represented by legal talent, and it was evident that they were prepared to put up a formidable fight against the proposed taking of their lands for the new boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield. The objectors who appeared yesterday were from Union township alone.

Justice VanSyckel said that on account of having to attend to important matters in Trenton, the hearing of the objectors would be postponed until Monday, January 23d, when the Court would be prepared to listen to all objections in the matter.

Not Exact Truth.

To The Editor of The Daily Press:—With your permission, and thanking you for the space allowed me, I desire to correct the misapprehension which will be conveyed to the general public by the inspired article which I quote below:

In consideration of want of appreciation and support from the Christians of Plainfield, the Branch of the Christian and Missionary Alliance organized a few years ago, for the purpose of supporting a missionary in Palestine, has discontinued its meetings.

There has been no reason why the Christian church members of Plainfield should support the missionaries of the Christian Alliance, of New York. But the Christians of Plainfield have not been derelict in duty. They have been supporting missionaries. They have been supporting royally the missionaries sent abroad by the various mission boards connected with the churches of which they are members. Few cities in the country contribute as much to missions as do the Christian church members of Plainfield. Truth.

mittees that it would be well to report bills referred to them as soon as possible and not wait until the last days of the Legislature when improper bills might be rushed through for lack of proper deliberation and discussion. He also pointed out in conclusion that while the Senators were not all of the same political opinions, that all had the welfare of the State at heart.

A joint caucus of the Republican Senators and Assemblymen was held and ex-Congressman John Kean, of Elizabeth, was chosen for United States Senator by acclamation. The caucus was very tame. Senator Johnson, of Bergen, presided, and although Assemblyman Sturr, of Passaic, formally presented the name of Congressman Stewart, he withdrew it again before a vote was taken and Mr. Kean got every vote. The election of United States Senator occurs on Tuesday, January 24th.

FINE BUSINESS OFFICES.

Prudential's Business Expands so as to Require More Room.

J. Elston Woodland, superintendent Plainfield branch of the Prudential Insurance Company, has added to the beauty and usefulness of his offices over the City National Bank, by the addition of new office furniture and partitions, in polished oak. A portion of the large unused hallway in the building has also been thrown into the offices which gives more much needed room for his force of employees. Mr. Woodland justly feels proud of the fact that a grand banquet will be served in Plainfield to him and his staff by the officers of the company, at some place yet to be announced on Tuesday evening, January 31st, in recognition of the increased business that has come to the company the past year under the management of Mr. Woodland and his assistants.

HE TARRIED TOO LONG.

Netherwood Man Delivered His Cord-wood and Then Imbibed Freely.

Fred Burlsteder, aged fifty years, a resident of Netherwood, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon and delivered a load of wood to a man on Second street. The purchaser of the wood not being home he was unable to receive his money. Burlsteder drove across the brook with his team and began to visit saloons. About 1:30 o'clock this morning Marshal Winn found a team of horses with a wagon wandering about the borough. The owner, who was Burlsteder, was trying to get into the wagon, but his condition was such he could not. The officer arrested him and placed the rig in the stable at Dreyer's Hotel on Somerset street. This morning the prisoner was arraigned and fined $10, which was paid by his brother-in-law.

STILL ALARM OF FIRE.

A Defective Flue in Rev. Mr. Yerkes House Caused Fire to Woodwork.

A defective flue in the chimney at Rev. Dr. Yerkers' house on West Seventh street caused a fire to break out in the woodwork under the main stairway in the hall on the first floor this noon. The doctor tried to put out the blaze with water, but it got in back of the wainscoating in the kitchen and was getting the better of him, so he sent a telephone message to fire department headquarters.

Five or six extinguishers were used before the blaze was put out. The trimmer beam was burned through and the woodwork was damaged. Altogether the damage will amount to $75.

Westfield Friends Surprised Her.

A party of twenty-five young people from Westfield gathered at the home of Miss Mabelle Smith, of South avenue, last evening and tendered her a surprise in a most pleasing manner. Miss Smith had not the slightest idea of the fact and was taken wholly unaware. The party was arranged by the Misses Bryce, of Westfield, who suspected it to be her birthday, but were just one month too early. Games and dancing were the features of the evening.

Another Still Alarm.

A still alarm was turned in at fire headquarters yesterday afternoon. The fire proved to be in the chimney at Mrs. Ferdinand Brown's house, 121 Webster place. The fire was high up on a level with the attic floor and a hold had to be cut through the chimney and three extinguishers used in putting it out. The damage is trifling.

A Dancing Class.

A dancing class has been formed under the direction of Miss Sadie Blimm, Miss Lou Croeson, Miss Etta Yaeger, Frank Blatz, H. C. Yaeger and Ralph Tolles, and commencing with last evening the class will meet every Tuesday evening in Stillman Building. During the winter the class will hold several cotillions.

Fingers Crushed.

E. K. Allen, Jr., of the borough, who is employed at the Pond Tool Works, had two fingers on his right hand crushed yesterday while at work and was obliged to give up work. Dr. Zeglio is treating the injured members and before long the young man will have the use of his hand.

An Article By Mrs. Bulkley.

In The Forum for January there appears a strong article on "Social Ethics in the Schoolroom," written by Miss Julia E. Bulkley, formerly principal of the Plainfield High school, now assistant professor of pedagogy in the University of Chicago.

A Chimney Fire.

A small chimney fire at William Galloway's house in the borough this morning caused an alarm to be sent in from Box 134 corner of Westervelt and Mountain avenues. The fire was so slight that it was put out with an extinguisher.

ANOTHER LEHIGH FATALITY.

Train Carrying People to Identify Victims of Wreck Kills a Carpenter.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Jan. 11.—A special train yesterday brought a delegation from the mining regions in Pennsylvania to Bound Brook, with the object of trying to definitely identify the unrecognized victims of Monday's wreck near West Dunellen.

While the train was passing over the bridge near Bound Brook it ran over and killed James Bona, who was employed by the Lehigh Valley as a carpenter.

MAKING JAPANESE MATCHES.

Many Children Under Ten Years Work Twelve Hours a Day.

The competition of Japanese matches is already severely felt in European markets. After supplying the home market the Japanese send 2,000,000,000 boxes to the rest of the world, mostly, however, to Asia. This has destroyed the European match trade in India, China and Hong Kong, but so far it has not affected the trade in America to any extent.

One of the largest factories employs 2,500 hands. The sticks are cut by machinery. They are sifted into little wooden boxes by women, and collected and put in frames by tiny waifs of children, some of whom do not look to be over three or four years old, and the majority of whom are under 10.

The sulphur and paraffin are put on by hand presses and then dried by the sun. The boxes are made and the labels are put on by little girls, whose fingers are so nimble that the human eye is incapable of following their movements as the purple and yellow boxes drop, more than one a second, into the huge baskets at their sides. Over twelve hours a day these little creatures labor for wages which range from 1 cent to 5 cents of our money. Here the wonderfully cheerful temperament of the Japanese is seen to perfection. They sing, and chatter and laugh and eat their tiffin, consisting of rice and fish, from tiny boxes with chopsticks, which they handle with as much dexterity as they do the matches. Here they sit twelve long hours on the floor, in small pens about four feet square, marked off by bamboo poles, and no expression of discontent is ever seen. There are no factory laws, and no regulations as to the age at which children should begin work, and no limitations of hours of labor in Japan. For the moment there is a scramble to utilize every pair of bright eyes and dexterous hands, regardless of future consequences, but the government and the sanitary authorities have taken the matter up, and in a few years, in all likelihood, a more humane system will be evolved.—Washington Star.

INJURED ONES ON WAY TO RECOVERY.

All the Patients Show Improvement Today.

ENGINEER RICK MAY LIVE.

MARTIN KEENAN'S CHILDREN VISIT HIM AT THE HOSPITAL.

Latest Developments in the Great Railroad Disaster—More of the Dead Ones Identified at Bound Brook Last Night—What Middlesex County Officials Are Doing—Dr. Zeglio Saved Baby's Life.

The injured survivors of the Lehigh Valley disaster at West Dunellen last Monday afternoon, who are at the Muhlenberg Hospital, are improving in almost every instance. Yesterday it was not expected that Edward Rick, of Bound Brook, the engineer of the Bound Brook local, would live the night through. This morning he showed signs of being better and hopes are now entertained that he will recover, though his condition is still critical. He still remains unconscious most of the time. The four-months-old child of Nicholas Borreca, whose skull is crushed, also shows signs of improvement, but is not yet out of danger.

The two children of Martin Keenan, of Locurt Gap, Pa., who had both legs broken, visited the hospital this morning. They saw their father's name among the list of injured, but were not positive it was him till they visited the hospital. The meeting between the father and the children was pathetic, but as the children could do nothing for their father they left the hospital after a short visit.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

Dr. Zeglio Found the Borreca Baby Lying Unnoticed in Telescoped Car.

In connection with the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck at Dunellen, a touching incident is related which shows the feelings of sympathy that can be aroused. While the injured and dying were scattered about the debris, Dr. Zeglio, of Somerset street, was one of the many good Samaritans that was busily engaged in alleviating the sufferings of the victims.

While working about the wreck he happened to go through a car and there he found lying on a seat Henry John Borreco, the four-months-old child that is now critically ill at the hospital. The doctor's tender sympathies were at once touched. No one appeared who knew the little fellow and the doctor made an examination. He found the skull indented and the child in an unconscious condition. There was also blood issuing from the mouth. The examination proved that the blood came from a wound in the gums. The boy's hands and feet were cold, and he removed his overcoat and wrapped it about the child. He watched him tenderly and finally brought him to the hospital, where he did all he possibly could to place him on the road to recovery. An eye-witness to the affair states that Dr. Zeglio's sympathies were so touched with the child's sufferings that tears filled his eyes. The doctor is hoping that his little patient may yet recover.

ALL BODIES IDENTIFIED.

Touching Scenes at the Bound Brook Morgue Yesterday Afternoon and Evening.

Bound Brook, Jan. 12.—The sad work of identifying the victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad disaster was continued yesterday afternoon. The Lehigh Valley Railroad brought a number from Mt. Carmel, Shamokin and Shenandoah, who had had relatives or friends on the fated train and had not heard from them. They visited the morgue where Coroner Moke was in charge. The body of a young man, of about thirty years, was partially decomposed. The coat contained letters addressed to Theodore Stickler and to Theodore Kohan, both of Mt. Carmel. There was no other clue to the identity of the man. Some of the visitors from that section stated that it was Theodore Stickler, from Mt. Carmel, Pa.

A young man from Shenandoah, Pa., viewed the remains of the young woman still remaining. He declared it to be his sister, Miss Pareski Ditski. She had, he said, been employed until recently in New York as a house servant. She had been visiting at her old home in Shenandoah, Pa., and was just returning to New York to resume work when she met her death. He was greatly affected by the sight of her body and wept as he told the MYSTERIOUS PATIENT POSITIVELY KNOWN NOW.

HE WAS JOHN FLYNN, OF NEWARK.

John Fleet, His Brother-in-law, of Newark, Visited the Morgue Last Night.

The body of the man struck by a train in VanDeveer's cut near Raritan, and who died at the Muhlenberg Hospital last week, was identified yesterday evening as a man from Newark. The name found on his clothing, John Flynn, proved to be his name. He resided at 18 Cabinet street, Newark.

Sergeant Kiely telephoned to Chief Hopper, of Newark, regarding the facts and Chief Hopper advertised in the papers there for information. As a result, John Fleet, a brother-in-law of the dead man, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon and positively identified him as the missing John Flynn of Newark.

He would not give any instructions regarding the body but went back, stating that he would have to consult Miss Julia Flynn, of Orange, a sister of the dead man, before he could decide what was to be done with the body. He promised to return today.

TAKE ACCOUNT OF YOURSELF.

That is What Rev. Mr. Pogson Urged His Hearers to Do.

Rev. Dr. M. H. Pogson, who is holding evangelistic services at the Park Avenue Baptist church, was listened to by a good-sized congregation last night. He preached a sermon from the Old Testament, using God's words to Elijah, the prophet, when he was fleeing from the wrath of Ahat and had hidden in a cave, "What doest thou here, Elijah?"

Dr. Pogson drew several lessons from the character and personal qualities of the prophet. He urged his hearers to ask themselves where they were, and what they were placed here on this earth for, and, he said, if they could not answer the questions satisfactorily to themselves to take warning and repent.

At the close of the meeting the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, asked all those who were willing to do what they could for the success of the meetings during the next few days to rise, and almost everyone present stood up. Dr. Pogson will preach again tonight and tomorrow night, and expects a decided interest to be taken in the meetings.

DON'T SPARE THE HIGH ONES.

Mr. Martine Intimates That Lehigh Officials May be to Blame.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Almost every newspaper announces that the officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad are making diligent investigation among their employees with a view of fixing the blame for the late disaster. I wonder if it will occur to them to look into the general management of that road for a cause. Officials in high place and boards of directors are oft times the guilty ones.

Through a process of grinding parsimony they reduce wages to the starvation point and demand such long hours that poor humanity gives out under the strain. It is currently stated that that road is run by non-union men, because they can be had at a cheaper rate. If this be true the investigators may find it quite easy to to fix the blame.

In this day of great syndicates and corporations everything and everybody is held in obeyance to the one great end—dividends and salaries for the officers. The history of one is the history of all. J. E. Martine.

PYTHIANS INSTALLED.

Deputy Grand Chancellor Performed the Work in Unity Lodge.

Last evening at the meeting of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, Deputy Grand Chancellor Samuel Robinson and staff installed the officers-elect of the lodge. The work was performed in a highly creditable manner. The officers are as follows: G. C., Edgar Chappell; V. C., James Stanifield; prelate, Isaac N. Wyckoff; M. at W., Frank Rathbone; M. of F., F. J. VanWinkle; M. at A., Wm. Johnson; I. G., George Radford; O. G., Robert Loughlin. Several officers yet to be installed were prevented from attending the meeting last evening on account of illness. They will be installed at the next meeting.

Deputy Grand Chancellor Samuel Robinson and staff, of the Knights of Pythias, will go to Scotch Plains this evening and install the officers-elect of Goodwill Lodge, K. of P., of that place.

Presiding Elder to Preach.

At the evangelistic service in Grace M. E. church tonight, Rev. Dr. Smith, Presiding Elder, will preach. Tomorrow evening, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will preach. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

DEATH OF JOHN K. DALLY

GRIP AND OLD AGE TOO MUCH FOR HIS SEVENTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Formerly a Prosperous Farmer of Somerset County, but Has Resided in North Plainfield for the Past Two Years.

Last evening occurred the death of John K. Dally, aged seventy-seven years. Death was due to an attack of grip and old age. Mr. Dally had been living for two years past with his daughter, Mrs. Levi Kline, of Somerset street, and he died at her home. During the latter days of his illness, which cover a period of about two weeks, Dr. Buchanan was in attendance and he did all that was possible to restore health.

Mr. Dally was born at Readington, Somerset county, and for years followed the occupation of farmer and was very successful. Two years ago he retired from the farm owing to his advanced years, and, as stated, came to North Plainfield to live with his daughter.

Mr. Dally was a faithful Christian and a member of the Reformed church at Readington, where he attended regularly. When he came to Plainfield he worshipped at Trinity Reformed church and as long as he was able was a faithful attendant upon divine worship.

Mr. Dally's wife died about two years ago. Five children survive him. They are Mrs. Levi Kline, of the borough; Mrs. Levi Cole, of Stanton; William V. Dally, of Raritan; Cornelius Dally, of Whitehouse; Henry S. Dally, of Pleasant Run, Hunterdon county.

Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

DID HE HAVE PERMISSION?

Jury Couldn't Decide the Question After Being Out Five Hours.

In Justice Austin's court at Washingtonville Tuesday, William Hartfelder, of this city, was tried on a charge of trespassing on the grounds of Sydney B. Corby, who manages the poultry farm there. Murphy & Blatz represented the defendant, and called for a jury.

Hartfelder and two other young men are said by Corby to have hunted in the woods on his place without his permission, and therefore swore out the complaint against them. The defendant admitted trespassing on the grounds, but claims that he had Corby's permission.

A great deal of time was consumed in getting together a jury, and the trial was not begun until 5 o'clock. The case was given to the jury at 6:15 o'clock, and they stayed out until 11 o'clock, when it became evident that they could'nt agree, so the justice discharged them. They stood 9 to 3 for the defense. The case will be tried again.

GIRLS PLAY BASKET BALL

INTER-CLASS MATCH BETWEEN THE HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES.

First of a Series of Games for a Silken Banner Between Three Teams From the Fourth Class Yesterday.

After a half year of practice in quiet, the girls of the Fourth class at the Plainfield High School have begun an active season in basket ball. With so much talent in the class, all anxious for a chance to play, three teams were organized in the class and an inter-class contest arranged. Yesterday afternoon, the first of the matches in the interclass contest was played in the gymnasium at the Whittier building and Team A was victorious over Team B by a score of 24 to 18. A handsome silken banner is the prize to the victorious team in contest.

There has been very few basket ball games among the High School girls to which the public have been admitted this season. These matches, however, will be played every Wednesday afternoon and friends will be allowed to witness them.

All three of the fourth class teams have been coached by Walter L. Long, captain of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team, who has rapidly instilled the principles of the game into the minds of his apt pupils. While it was their first appeseance in public, the girls played a very good game and did some brilliant work.

The game was quite exciting, the score at the close of the first half being 14 to 10 in favor of Team B Their opponents braced up in the next half and won out. Miss Krom did the goal throwing for the victorious team.

The teams lined up as follows:

TEAM A.		TEAM B.
Daisy Brouard	f.	Edna Moore
Gussie Long	f.	Velma Oakley, capt
Cora Harris	c.	Violet Van Winkle
Lulu Harris	r. c.	Jean Dunham
Stephanie Krom capt.	l. c.	May Mulford

Score—Team A. 24; Team B. 18. Goals from the field—s. Krom (12), Moore (6), V. VanWinkle (3). Foals—None. Referee—Walter L. Long. Scorer—Miss Clara Long. Timer—Frank Burr.

A SOCIETY LUNCHEON.

Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers Gave a Very Elaborate Affair Yesterday.

A very elaborate luncheon was given by Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, of East Seventh street, yesterday, in honor of her guests, the Misses Myers, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. There were forty guests present. The luncheon was served on little tables scattered through the parlors. The house decorations were entirely spring flowers, imported from the south, and were very elaborate. The affair was one of the events of the social season and was attended by the elite of Plainfield society.

Mrs. Reed Gets the Flowers.

The very handsome floral display presented to President Charles A. Reed, of the New Jersey Senate, have been brought back to Plainfield by W. Wilder Rowley and presented to Mrs. Reed, the wife of the Senator.

BUSY HARVESTING ICE.

COLD SNAP MAKES GREAT WORK FOR THE ICE DEALERS.

1,300 Tons Harvested at Washingtonville Yesterday—Large Force of Men at Work—Activity on Tier's Pond, Too.

The present cold snap is a great thing for the ice dealers, and at Washingtonville there is a lively scene. The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company is working under full swing and it looks like old times. Harvesting began yesterday when 1,300 tons of congealed water was taken in and placed in the ice houses. The ice is of the finest quality and is from 9 to 12 inches thick. Today it is expected that 1,600 tons will be harvested. A very large force of men is employed and everything is being rushed with all possible haste. A number of teams are in use and every man employed is doing his utmost. If the cold weather continues the chances are that the ice houses will be filled within a very short time.

At Tier's pond the same activity can be witnessed. All day yesterday ice about ten inches thick was harvested and run in the houses. This ice is of a fine quality and is exceptionally clear. The force of men has been enlarged and today it is expected that a much larger quantity of ice will be harvested.

At New Market ice is being harvested rapidly by Mr. Wilson, and his ice houses are being filled rapidly. This ice is about ten inches thick and of good quality.

At other nearby places the work of harvesting is proceeding under favorable conditions, and thus the lot of the ice dealers is made a very happy one.

Books for Reference.

Owing to the full list of books on American history published in the syllabus of the University Extension Course, the library will make no special list. Of the 64 titles of books on this list the public library owns 45, nearly all of which are in the circulating department. Beside those mentioned in the syllabus the library has a large collection on American history and biography, and readers who find the books listed "out" will if possible be supplied with other works on the same subject.

Pendergast's Family Here.

Mrs. Pendergast, wife of Engineer Pendergast of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, together with her family, are for the present stopping at McVey's Hotel. Mr. Pendergast is still confined to the hospital and there are strong chances of his recovery.

—Eugene Laine, formerly of this city, but now keeper of a hotel at South Plainfield, did his share last Monday evening in feeding twenty-two passengers who were on the Hazelton express train that was wrecked.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION
THE DAILY PRESS PROVIDES IT.
SPARE MOMENTS MADE TO COUNT.

THE DAILY PRESS has perfected arrangements with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, of Plainfield, whereby complete scholarships in each institution have been placed at its disposal These scholarships will be awarded to the persons securing the highest number of new subscribers to The Daily Press within the time prescribed and under the rules printed below. The scholarship in the Plainfield Business College will go to the person securing the highest number of subscribers, and the scholarship in the Gregg School of Stenography to the one securing the second highest number of new subscribers.

A consolation prize of a handsome-bound International Webster Dictionary, with complete reference index, will be given to the third highest standing contestant.

Read the following rules carefully and then jump in and try to win:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with.

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

THREE COAL THIEVES ARE ROUNDED UP.

THE YOUTH OF ONE SAVES HIM.

The Others Were Fined For Pushing Coal Off Moving Coal Cars Near Eight Row.

Saturday, Detective Dougherty, of the Jersey Central Railroad force, saw a man and two boys on top of a slowly moving coal train beyond Clinton avenue, near the Eight Row. They were pushing the coal off with their feet. Already several bushels had been removed in that way. The detective recognized the offenders and swore out warrants for their arrest.

Owing to the excitement of the great railroad disaster, the police did not serve them until yesterday. Today, the three were arraigned before City Judge Runyon. They admitted their guilt. Judge Runyon suspended sentence on Winfield Chase on account of his youth. John Richards and Clarence Wheeler, all of Eight Row, were fined $3 each. The fines were paid. Richards is a blacksmith. Wheeler is a lad of sixteen or seventeen.

They were all warned that any future offense of a similiar nature would be severely dealt with. Doughterty's raid was the result of a decision to break up coal stealing in the vicinity of Eight Row. It is said that the cars are often visited and robbed of their contents in a wholesale manner.

JURY FAVORED RAILROAD.

Elizabeth Man Wanted Damages for Alleged Injuries He Received.

"I am a working man."

"You mean you work a saloon, don't you?"

"That's none of your business."

"What is your business?"

"What's that to you."

(The Court) "Answer the question."

(Witness) "I keep a saloon and a boarding house."

"Your wife runs a boarding house and you work the saloon; is that right?"

"Well, yes."

This colloquy between plaintiff's principal witness and C. A. Marsh the defendant's lawyer caused irrepressible laughter in the Union Circuit Court yesterday. The case was an action for damages brought by Mr. Moenke, a machinist, against the Consolidated Traction Company for $5,000 damages for injuries which he claimed to have received on boarding an electric car in front of the Court House at Elizabeth. Hon. T. M. Kelly represented the plaintiff and Frank Bergen and Craig A. Marsh represented the defendant.

The case was full of incident, but turned out to be a pure question of fact for the jury. Drs. Stearn and Donovan for the plaintiff, differed from Drs. Green and Mraviag for the defendant, and the other witnesses on the two sides were equally unable to agree about the facts. The case was submitted to the jury, which body after deliberating a little over an hour, rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant that there was no cause for action.

It rarely happens that if the plaintiff in a suit against the railroad company once gets his case to the jury, the verdict is in favor of the company. In this case the plaintiff exhibited the injured limb, and the jury were satisfied that he was suffering seriously, but apparently they were equally well satisfied that the injuries from which he was suffering did not arise from the alleged accident.

YOUNG ARTIST WITH TALENT.

Two Judges, Working Independent of Each Other, Awarded Him the Prize.

Ross W. Wier & Co., proprietors of Red Ribbon Coffee, recently gave a demonstration of the merits of their coffee at the grocery store of J. Fred MacDonald and offered a prize of a $25 gramophone to boys or girls under sixteen years of age for the best composition of Red Ribbon Coffee or the best drawing in imitation of the label on their packages. Mr. MacDonald received about twenty-five compositions and drawings from young people. He chose Editors Runyon and Force to select the best one and award the prize. Rather strange to relate both Mr. Runyon and Mr. Force selected the same drawing, that of Philip V. VanArsdale, fourteen years of age, son of P. VanArsdale, of East Front street, and the young man will be presented with the gramaphone by Messrs. Wier & Co.

To Install Officers

Tomorrow evening Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, will install the officers-elect for the ensuing term. There will be a number of visiting brethren present, and after the installation, which will be done by the High Court officers, an adjournment will be made to McVey's Hotel, where a collation will be served.

FOR A BRILLIANT INAUGURATION DAY.

Arrangements Completed for Ceremony Next Tuesday.

WOMEN IN RECEIVING PARTY

THE EVENING RECEPTION WILL BE HELD IN STATE HOUSE.

There Will be More Social Interest Than is Usually Shown—Mrs. Charles Reed One of the Receiving Party—Ceremonies to be Held in Opera House—Officers to Escort Gov.-elect Voorhees.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Jan. 12—The joint committees of the Legislature to which has been assigned the arrangements for the inauguration of Foster M. Voorhees as Governor, next Tuesday, yesterday afternoon completed all its plans. The committee consists of Senators Hutchinson, of Mercer; Francis, of Monmouth, and Braun, of Passaic, and Assemblymen Squire, of Union; Guenther, of Essex; Wood, of Mercer; Bradley, of Camden, and Murphy, of Hudson. The committee will issue invitations especially designed for the occasion to the prominent officials of New Jersey.

There will be more social interest taken in the inauguration of Mr. Voorhees than in that of any of his predecessors, and the indications are that the evening reception will be a very brilliant affair. The officers of the National Guard and Naval Reserve are requested to appear in full dress uniform.

The receiving party will consist of the Misses Voorhees, sisters of the Governor; Mrs. Stryker, Mrs. Donnelly, Mrs. Alexander C. Oliphant, Mrs. Reed, wife of the President of the Senate, and Mrs. Swain, wife of Geo. B. Swain, State treasurer.

Invitations to the State dinner, which will take place immediately after the inauguration ceremonies, will be limited to the Governor, State officers, the presiding officers of the Legislature, members of Congress, distinguished guests from other States, the joint committee, and such guests as will be designated by the Governor. There will be about fifty covers laid on this occasion.

The inaugural ceremonies will take place at noon in Taylor Opera House in the presence of the Legislature, the judiciary and State officers. The two Houses will meet in their respective chambers at the usual hour and adjourn to meet upon the stage of the opera house at 11:30 They will organize upon the stage. The joint committee, with the State officers, will escort Acting-Governor Watkins and Governor-elect Voorhees to the opera house. Gen. Bird W. Spencer will be in charge of the opera house during the ceremonies.

The following order of exercises will be observed:

Prayer by Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton; administration of the oath of office by Chief Justice Magie; firing of salute of seventeen guns by the gun detachment of the Seventh regiment at the State House grounds; delivery of the great seal of the State by David O. Watkins, Speaker of the Assembly, Acting Governor, and acceptance of the great seal by Governor Voorhees.

Then will follow the introduction of Governor Voorhees to President Reed of the Senate by David O. Watkins, Speaker of the House of Assembly; introduction of the Governor to the Senate and General Assembly by the President of the Senate; inaugural address; benediction by Rev. Dr. J. Richard Boyle.

The Governor will hold a reception to the public in the Executive Chamber from half-past three to five o'clock, and an evening reception will be held in the Executive Chamber from half-past seven to nine o'clock.

A Box From the Klondyke.

R. F. Hazard, of East Sixth street, has received a box from Dawson City in the Klondyke region which was sent to him by his friend, G. R. Musgrave, formerly of this city. The box contains specimens of ore and many curios from the gold region. Mr. Musgrave's wife is with him. He writes that they are well, have a nice home there and are quite comfortable.

City Budget Soon to be Madeup.

The City Council will hold an adjourned meeting next Monday evening. At the meeting of the Council in February appropriations for the year will probably be made.

Bank Officers.

The directors of the City National Bank organized yesterday by electing Charles Hyde, president; J. F. Hubbard, vice-president and William P. Arnold, cashier.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

SUGAR TRUST TO FIGHT

Millions to be Used to Crush Its Competitors in Trade.

ITS METHODS ARE SECRET.

$25,000,000 Is Set Aside as Working Capital. Will be Used to Drive to the Wall the Arbuckles, Doscher and Other Opposing Refiners.—No Disclosures Made At the Annual Meeting.

New York, Jan. 12.--It was decided by the stockholders of the sugar trust at the annual meeting to set aside "as working capital" the entire surplus of the company.

Secretary Searles, who has been a regular attendant for so many years, was absent, and Frederick Heicke of Jersey City was elected Secretary for the time being.

President H. O. Havemeyer said changes in the condition of the business had made necessary a change in the policy of the company.

No figures were given, but it is estimated that the sum equals about $25,000,000.

This action is construed in Wall street as meaning that this amount is placed at the disposal of the officers of the trust for use in a bitter trade fight against the independent refiners of sugar.

The war between the trust and the Arbuckles and Claus Doscher and other independent refiners has been in progress for several months, but it has not been bitter, as was predicted.

JOHN E. SEARLES.

It is now explained that the trust was handicapped, in that the directors were obliged to account to stockholders for all unusual expenditures. Then, too, there was the chance of an injunction by any stsockholder restraining the company from carrying out its plans.

This resolution of the stockholders gives the officers full swing to spend millions as they wish, and none can invoke the aid of a court to get an accounting.

The scheme is novel in corporation management and it caused much discussion in Wall street.

But the sugar trust managers did other unusual things at the stockholders' annual meeting, which was held in Jersey City. Business was done quickly. No opportunity was given to discuss the company's affairs, nor was any report of the year's business made.

The administration of those now in authority was indorsed unequivocally, and an executive committee, with extraordinary powers, was appointed.

With the election of new sugar trust officers, the voluntary retirement of the man who, with the Havemeyers, built up the tremendous business, is assured.

He is John E. Searles, already nearly seventy years old and ailing. Mr. Searles was a rich man even before he married the widow of Hopkins, the alifornia multi-millionaire. It was this wealth, however, which enabled him to invest in sugar trust certificates, and soon brought him into close relations with the Havemeyers.

Mr. Searles has many other financial interests, the direction of all of which owing to ill health, he will probably relinquish into other hands.

Hawley Returns to U. S. Senate.

Hartford, Jan. 12.--General Joseph R. Hawley was yesterday afternoon nominated by the Republican caucus of the Connecticut General Assembly as a candidate to succeed himself as the junior United States senator from Connecticut.

The victory which came to the distinguished soldier and statesman furnished the climax to one of the most bitterly waged political contests ever fought in the Nutmeg state.

The final battle took place yesterday afternoon, when the Republicans of the House of Representatives and the state Senate met in a joint caucus in the Representative hall. The victory for General Hawley was not obtained until three full hours had been consumed and nearly all of that time was occupied in balloting.

Technically, or officially, there were seven ballots, but practically nine ballots were taken. Senator Hawley was at all times in the lead, but until the final ballot was cast and counted his margin was too narrow to permit of great confidence.

The first ballot resulted: Hawley 98, Fessenden 62, Bulkley 37, Russell 1. The last ballot, which decided the contest, was: Hawley 117, Fessenden 69, Bulkley 8, Russell 4.

German Hostility at Manila.

San Francisco, Jan. 12.--According to letters received here from Hong Kong by several prominent Germans, Germany is intriguing actively against this country by backing Aguinaldo and his followers in the Philippine islands.

The German consul in Hong Kong has held secret conferences with insurgent representatives, and there seems no doubt that Aguinaldo's recent attitude is due to German support.

According to these letters, the person who is credited with devising plots against the American government is Prince Henry of Prussia, when he was in Hong Kong with his squadron.

NORTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON.

A Coming Cruise in the West Indies—No Demonstration at Havana.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--Secretary Long looked astonished when informed of the reports published in some of the morning newspapers that a conference was held Tuesday between himself, Captain Crowninshield and Rear Admiral Sampson.

Rear Admiral Sampson had called on him, he said, and he had told him that as soon as the conditions were favorable he had better get the North Atlantic squadron out for a cruise to keep the ships and men in practice. The admiral answered that he thought the present as good a time as any and that, if he took the squadron into West Indian waters the weather would be pleasant enough. So he was told to go on and get ready.

As to making a demonstration before Havana, that had not been thought of. We have a warship in the harbor of Havana now, and we shall keep one there right along. This is not for demonstrative purposes in the ordinary sense, or because the situation at Havana is regarded as especially menacing, but because the conditions in Cuba are such that Havana may be considered a possible danger point, and it is a customary precaution to keep a warship at such points for co-operation with the land authorities should additional force chance to be necessary.

NEW YORK CHAIRMEN.

Legislature Organized According to Republican Schedule.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 12.--The legislature assembled last night at half past eight o'clock, and in each branch there was the announcement of the appointment of committees and officers. The principal committeec will have chairmanships as follows:

Senate--Judiciary, Edgar T. Brackett of Saratoga; finance, Frank W. Higgins of Cattaraugus; taxation, Hobart Krum of Schoharie; insurance, C. R. Parsons of Monroe; banks, L. H. Humphrey of Wyoming; prisons, B. M. Wilcox of Cayuga; railroads, John Raines of Ontario; cities, N. T. Stranahan of Oswego; canals, G. H. Davis of Erie; codes, George R. Malby of St. Lawrence; commerce and navigation H. J. Coggeshall of Oneida; public health, W. E. Johnson of Tioga; forest, fish and game, George Chahoon of Essex; public education, John Ford of New York.

Assembly--Ways and means, Jotham P. Allds of Chenango; railroads, Louis Bedell of Orange; judiciary, Otto Kelsey of Livingston; cities, Robert Mazet of New York; commerce and navigation, R. H. Post of Suffolk; internal affairs, D. P. Witter of Tioga; banks, M. E. Lewis of Monroe; taxation, E. C. Brennan of Kings; excise, M. I. Greenwood of Wayne; gas and electricity, C. S. Adler of New York; insurance, Thomas A. Sears of Franklin; general laws, H. W. Hill of Erie; public institutions, T. M. Costello of Oswego; agriculture, A. W. Litchard of Allegany.

It is understood that the rules committee will consist of the speaker, Mr Allds, Mr. Kelsey, Mr. McEwen, Mr. Palmer and Mr. Kelly.

Col. Partridge to be Named?

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 12.--A significant fact in connection with the appointment of a superintendent of public works, which it is thought Governor Roosevelt will announce to-day, is the arrival of Colonel Partridge of Brooklyn to confer with the governor.

This is taken here as an indication that Governor Roosevelt is to appoint a Brooklyn candidate.

A telegram from Buffalo has been received by Governor Roosevelt to the effect that the Republican organization of Erie county has united on Assistant District Attorney Thomas Penney as its candidate for the district attorneyship of Erie county.

Tooker Gets Eight Years.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 12.--James L. Tooker, who was found guilty of manslaughter for shooting Secundo Canova, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Dixon to eight years in the state prison.

Tooker was a game warden, and going through the Haledon mountains on October 15 last, he met Canova and a companion with robins in their possession.

Canova refused to surrender his gun and in the tussle which followed Tooker pulled his revolver and fired, killing Canova instantly.

Milburn Declines Too.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 12.--John G. Milburn of Buffalo, who was selected as the governor's special counsel for the prosecution of the canal frauds, after Franklin D. Locke had declined, also sent his resignation to Governor Roosevelt yesterday.

John Proctor Clarke of New York has been mentioned by prominent Republicans as likely to be named for that work now, but as the governor has been trying to secure some man not identified with him in politics, others think that some other New York lawyer may be selected.

FORAKER ON THE ISSUE

Addrssses the Senate Upon the Vest Resolutions.

KNOWS NO LIMITATIONS.

The Ohio Senator Declares the United States Government Has the Right Under the Constitution to Acquire and Govern New Territory — To Do Otherwise Would Show Our Inferiority Among Nations.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--Mr. Foraker addressed the Senate yesterday on the general question of the power to extend our territory. He based his remarks principally upon the Vest resolution, incidentally giving attention to Mr. Mason's measure.

The two resolutions, he said, were different propositions. The Ves metasure raised the question of power, the Mason resolution that of policy. We had been told by Mr. Hoar that the question of power was the most important ever raised in the history of the government.

Mr. Foraker did not agree with this dictum. On the contrary, it had no importance whatever as a question of practicable consideration. It was a moot question and nothing more. The resolution expressed the extreme view held by any one, and an analysis of it was sufficient to demonstrate the progress that had been made since the acquisition of Louisiana. There was no precedent when Louisiana was taken, and naturally there were many differences of opinion on the various points involved. Mr. Jefferson himself was not positive as to his attitude on some points at issue. Now it is conceded by the very terms of the Vest resolution that the government has the power not only to acquire territory but that we map also acquire territory to hold it, though temporarily. This was a great step in advance since the days of Jefferson.

On the other hand the Vest resolution involved a theoretical question of vast importance. To adopt the resolution was to declare that our fathers had brought forth a nation that was inferior to all other nations regardless of the generally accepted theory that one nation was equal to another and an equally unrestricted.

Among the powers of nationality are the powers to make war and to make treaties. This is an inherent right of nationality, and the government of the United States has the same power that all other governments have. Our Prerogative is as great as that of Great Britain.

It being true that we have the power to make war and to enter into treaty agreements, we logically have the power to acquire territory by conquest or otherwise, and to inherit all the consequences that may accrue through war. The senator quoted Chief Justice Marshall to sustain his position, contending that the chief justice had said the United States had not only the right to acquire but also the right to govern territory so acquired.

Mr. Foraker also quoted Justice Bradley in a Utah case, involving the question of polygamy, in which the justice said.

"It would be absurd to say that a nation haspower to acquire territory and not the power to govern it."

This was a late decision on the same lines as that of Chief Justice Marshall in the early days of the republic. Such being the authorities, what grounds, he asked, have the supporters of the resolution to stand upon.

Mr. Vest had contended in his speech that history was against the assumption of power by this country to establish colonial governments, and that the character of our war for independence demonstrated that the men of that day would not have countenanced such a proceeding.

On the contrary, Mr. Foraker held that there was no complaint in revolutionary times of a colonial policy. There were many complaints on other scores, but none on this, so it must be assumed that they had no such objection.

In reply to a question by Mr. Allen of Nebraska, Mr. Foraker declared that in every instance where the United States acquired territory, the constitution of the United States was extended over it, and that all legislation provided by Congress for such acquired territory must be and always is strictly in accordance with the constitution.

Mr. Tillman inquired whether any of the states could discriminate against a territory on account of the color or previous condition of its inhabitants.

"That question is not before us now," replied Mr. Foraker. "When it arises, we shall meet it. I wish some of the states that do discsriminate were outside and we had a trial of the question now." (Great laughter.)

Mr. Foraker then took up that part of the argument of Mr. Vest in support of the resolution in which he based his statements upon the Dred Scott decision.

The Ohio senator analyzed the decision, showing that a majority of the court did not support the position with reference to the acquisition and government of territory that Mr. Vest had said it did, and that really only one of the associate justices stood squarely with Chief Justice Taney in support of the full force of the decision.

Peace Instruction a Secret.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--The president has decided it to be incompatible with the public interest to comply with the request contained in the Hoar resolution to supply the Senate with the instructions given to the American peace commissioners.

New Jersey Agriculture.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 12.--About one hundred delegates and members were present at the opening of the annual session of the State Board of Agriculture.

Secretary Franklin Dye, in his report, discussed farming from a farmer's standpoint. He thought that New Jersey farmers could profitably turn their attention to the raising of sheep and to a greater production of wheat. He said that the price of cows had increased, but that there had been no corresponding increase in the price of milk.

As a nerve tonic Ripans Tabules have no equal. They invigorate the mind and strengthen the nerves, and more, they keep the stomach in good condition. A student of the University of Pennsylvania recently said: "Just prior to the closing examinations I was compelled to work exceedingly hard, as the course is an exceptional one. I was up until two and three o'clock in the morning studying. This was something I was not used to, and as a result my system was upset. It became exceedingly difficult for me to concentrate my mind upon the work, and as for remembering, why, my head at times seemed a vacuum. I consulted a physician, but his prescription failed to bring relief. Then I was advised to try Ripans Tabules and did so, and to my great delight was benefited immediately. After only a second dose I was restored to my wonted condition of good health and vigor of mind, and passed my examinations successfully. I even graduated with honors. I gladly add my testimonial to that of thousands of others who assert that for strengthening the nerves and toning the system Ripans Tabules HAVE NO PEER."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—THE FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (72 tablets) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (THE TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

CHOATE FOR AMBASSADOR.

President Names the Well-known Lawyer to Represent the Government.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--The president has sent to the Senate the nomination of Joseph H. Choate of New York to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States to Great Britain.

Senator Platt of New York and Representative Quigg were at the White House yesterday morning with reference to the appointment of Mr. Choate.

Joseph H. Choate is one of the most prominent lawyers in the United States. He comes of a notable family, one distinguished for speakers and men of erudition.

The Choate family settled in Massachusetts in 1667. Joseph H. Choate was born in Salem, Mass., on January 24, 1832, and was graduated from Harvard in 1852, after which he attended lectures in the Dane Law School. Mr. Choate was the most brilliant student in Harvard during his stay there, and he was graduated at the head of his class. He was admitted to the bar in Massachusetts in 1855. Mr. Choate practiced law in Boston for one year. Then he came to New York.

JOSEPH H. CHOATE.

Soon after going to New York he engaged in a partnership with William M. Evarts. The celebrated cases in which Mr. Choate has at times engaged are numbered by the hundred and embrace law in all its forms. He is famous as a trial lawyer and no less famous as an office worker.

Mr. Choate is probably at his best before a jury. He has a manner all his own, and in examining witnesses he usually meets with great success. Witnesses who do not wish to give answers he handles carefully and without show of force or bluster but it is not often that he fails to get a direct answer when he desires one.

Friends of Mr. Choate say that had he desired it he could long ago have had high public offices as he had friends in both parties. Mr. Choate is known widely as a speaker.

From 1873 to 1877 he was president of the Union League. His name is on the rolls of the following clubs: Union League, University, Century, Racquet, Grolier, Harvard, Alpha Delta Phi, Down Town and Riding.

Fitz-Sharkey Fight Now Seems Likely.

New York, Jan. 12.--From Cleveland comes word that Bob Fitzsimmons, the heavyweight champion, will fight Sharkey.

Fitzsimmons' dispatch is as follows:

Now is Sharkey's opportunity to cover that $2,500 I have posted in New York if he really wants to become champion. Let him cover the money and I will make a side bet of as great a sum as he wants to post. I want to fight the sailor in order to get square for that disreputable affair in San Francisco, when I was deliberately robbed of twenty thousand dollars. In the second round of that fight I had Sharkey out. No attention was paid by the referee, and the same thing took place in the eighth round. After a few moments' waiting for a decision, the referee informed me that I lost on a foul.

It is my ambition to stand before Sharkey in the ring once more, and before another day has passed I want to have the articles for a match signed. When we fight again rest assured it will not be a fiasco, but a hard and honest fight.

Fatal Exposure to the Cold.

Matteawan, N. Y., Jan. 12.-- Matthew Herbert, a well known grocer of Fishkill Landing, was found at an early hour yesterday morning lying on Union street, this town, dying from the effects of exposure to the cold weather.

Medical aid was summoned and the unfortunate man was taken to the Fishkill General Hospital, where every effort was made to save his life. He died shortly afterward.

The dead man was about fifty years old and had lived at Fishkill Landing for many years.

FAVORS RATIFICATION

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations Approve Treaty.

ORDERED TO BE REPORTED.

The President's Policy is Believed to be the Same Towards the Filipinos as Toward the Cubans—They Will Have to Consent to U. S. Military Government Before Any Other Form Will be Considered.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--The Senate committee on foreign relations have authorized Senator Davis to report the peace treaty favorably without amendment.

The committee was in session only an hour and a greater part of this time was consumed in waiting for a quorum, the senators meantime discussing informally the treaty's provisions.

Senators Cullom and Clark, who were among the absentees, sent their proxies.

Senators Morgan and Gray were the only Democrats in attendance, but the other Democratic members, Senators Daniel, Mills and Turpie, had full notice of the purpose of the meeting, and they indicated no opposition to immediate action.

There was no suggestion of any amendment. Senator Davis was instructed to press the treaty to as early action as possible.

The committee also authorized Senator Davis to report favorably upon the proposition to remove the injunction of secrecy.

The President's Policy.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--It appears that the anti-expansionists are overreaching themselves in their eagerness to fix the policy of the government with respect to the disposition of the islands wrested from Spain.

They have lost sight of the fact that the president has not committed himself on the subject of the Philippines.

The assumption that ratification is to be followed by the military subjugation of the Philippines and the disregard of the wishes of the natives, is not warranted by any declaration in behalf of the administration, and there is reason to believe that the president is prepared to give such assurances to the responsible Filipinos as will relieve their suspicions and put an end to their demonstrations of hostility.

It is believed that the president contemplates treating the natives of the Philippines about as the Cubans are being treated.

Gen. Wood in Washington.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--Major General Leonard Wood, the military commandant of Santiago, is in Washington. He breakfasted with Secretary Alger and then repaired to the White House for a consultation with the president respecting internal conditions in Cuba.

The war department has been delaying final action upon the various financial problems connected with the customs service at Santiago and at other Cuban ports until the arrival of Gen. Woods.

General Woods expects to leave here on his return to Cuba next Monday. The situation in Santiago, he said, was thoroughly satisfactory and no trouble was to be apprehended there in the near future.

He took occasion to declare very earnestly that the stories of friction between himself and Major General Brooke, the military commandant of the island, were absolutely without foundation, adding that their relations were of the most pleasant character and as far as he knew there had been no differences between them.

Yale to Stick to New London.

New Haven, Jan. 12.--Yale graduates all over the country have sent so many protests against the transfer of the annual boat race from New London that the Yale Alumni Weekly yesterday stated flatly that New London was the only place where the race should be rowed.

The Yale crew managers prefer New London, but had announced that they would not insist on it arbitrarily.

Because of the stand by the college paper, Yale's attitude will probably be shifted and a demand made on Harvard and Cornell that New London be selected definitely for the race.

Building and Loan Interests.

New Haven, Jan. 12.--The report of the Connecticut commissioner of building and loan associations shows an increase of assets of Connecticut associations of $383,828 as compared with last year, liabilities increasing $339,-231.

The report says that the building and loan business, legitimately conducted, has long since passed beyond the stage of experiment and is a blessing to any community.

The commissioner recommends legislation against treating delinquent interest and premium as an earning, and also legislation punishing by heavy penalties misrepresentations by officers and agents of any building and loan company.

Fifield Has Declined.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 12.--B. F. Fifield of Montpelier has notified Governor Smith that on account of family reasons he was compelled to decline the appointment as United States senator to succeed the late Senator Morrill.

The appointment was at once offered to Jonathan Ross of St. Johnsbury, chief justice of the supreme court of Vermont.

Dingley's Lungs Clearing

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.--Greater encouragement for the recovery of Representative Dingley is felt by his physicians this morning than for some days. This is based on the wonderful manner in which he has kept up and the remarkable vitality shown.

Save for new complications, which are not looked for, the family feels hopeful that the worst is past. His physician says the second lung has begun to clear and his general condition is good.

WE FINANCE EUROPE.

Remarkable Admission of Our Power Made by High Authority.

London, Jan. 12.--At the semi-annual meeting of the Union Bank of London Mr. Schuester, the governor, during the course of his report said the United States had become a most important factor which must not be overlooked in forecasting the future.

He said that the remarkable activity of trade in the United States after a successful war and prospective new markets, together with abundant harvests, had created an unprecedented trade balance in favor of that country, which had already made itself felt on this side, and for the first time, he believed, it might be said that it was not Europe which had financed the United States, but New York which had financed Europe.

During the last few months the United States had lent a considerable amount of cash, and its discounts in London and Berlin and its power to obtain gold hence for very large amounts whenever it chose must not be lost sight of.

Failure of the Star Hosiery Mills.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Jan. 12.--Mrs. Henry Haskell Pawling, who since the death of her husband, nearly four years ago, has conducted the Star Hosiery Mills at Hagaman, has filed a petition in bankruptcy.

Her assets are given at about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and the liabilities at about one hundred and forty thousand dollars, of which eighty-nine thousand dollars is secured by mortgages. The mills have been idle for some time.

The failure was hastened by the illness of Mrs. Pawling, and the recovery of a judgment and the pending action of another amount which would have gone to judgment in a few days.

William E. Ewert & Co. of New York, commission merchants, are among the heaviest creditors, to the amount of forty-eight thousand dollars, which is secured by a mortgage.

The Amsterdam banks have claims to the amount of over forty-one- thousand dollars, which are also secured by mortgages.

Suit Between Deaf Mutes.

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 12.--Both defendant and complainant in a breach of promise suit which came up in court here are deaf mutes. The complainant was Miss Annie B. C. Adams of Metuchen, and the defendant S. Harry Riggs of Burlington.

Miss Adams says that when she asked Riggs to fulfill his promise to marry her, he repudiated it. Then she made a complaint against him and told her story to the Middlesex county grand jury through an interpreter.

The grand jury found an indictment against Riggs and Tuesday he was brought here to plead. Riggs was accompanied by his lawyer, Ernest Watts of Burlington.

Public Prosecutor Voorhees consented to permit Mr. Watts to plead for his client. A plea of not guilty was entered and the trial was set down for January 18. The young man's mother became his security.

Four Persons Killed on Pennsylvania.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 12.--Four persons were run down and instantly killed by express train No. 13 near Larimer station, on the Pennsylvania railroad, twenty-five miles east of this city yesterday.

The dead are Mary Miller, Thomas Millerr, Albert Wilson and Walter Brown.

The train was running at full speed and the bodies were terribly mangled. After being gathered up, the remains were taken in charge by friends.

On account of a freight wreck near Larimer it was necessary to switch the west bound passenger trains to the east bound track. The engineer blew the whistle, but the alarm was unheard, as the victims evidently thought that the train would run on the west bound track as usual. They were all residents of Larimer.

Fatal Accidents on the Erie.

Jersey City, Jan. 12.--A man and young woman, nineteen years old, were instantly killed at about twenty minutes past ten o'clock yesterday near the flag station, Riverdale, on the Greenwood Lake branch of the Erie railway.

They were crossing the tracks in a sleigh when struck by the train. Their names were Levi Lyons and his daughter Ella. The train was delayed by the accident more than an hour.

This was the second fatal accident on the same branch of the Erie railway within twenty-four hours.

A brakeman who had been in the employ of the company a few weeks, Tuesday afternoon fell between the cars of a freight train at Pompton and was cut in two.

Electrocution for Women.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 12.--Governor Roosevelt has declined positively to commit himself on the question of the execution in the electric chair of women.

The question has arisen in the case of Martha Place of Brooklyn, whose sentence of death was affirmed by the court of appeals.

He said that he had no views at present on the subject. Each casemight have a different phase and until it was presented to him he should not give an opinion.

To Launch the Albany.

London, Jan. 12.--The United States cruiser Albany, sister ship of the New Orleans, purchased here previous to the war with Spain, will be launched at Newcastle on Saturday.

The United States charge d'affaires, Mr. Henry White; Lieutenant Colwell, United States naval attache, and a number of distinguished Americans will attend the ceremony.

The Albany will be christened by Mrs. Colwell and will sail for the United States in April.

Kean to Succeed Senator Smith.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 12.--James Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth, has been selected by the Republican legislative caucus as the party candidate for United States senator to succeed James Smith, Jr., who now represents New Jersey at Washington.

As the legislature is Republican, there is no doubt of his election.

Acting Governor David O. Watkins has been elected as speaker of the House.

THEY WERE GENEROUS BANDITS.

Paid Off a Mortgage and Then Robbed the Sheriff.

Those who are conversant with the ways of the Southern people are aware that at the close of the war it was a frequent occurance for "ol' massa" to leave a little plot of ground to his slaves who had served him faithfully, or in some other way provide for their future. This was the case with Aunt Jennie Harris, who was left, by the will of her old master, quite a comfortable home in Missouri, between Harrisonville and Pleasant Hill. But with the usual negro prodigality, which could never realize that an end might come to their fortune, Aunt Jennie placed a mortgage on her home for $1,400. Time passed and the very day when the mortgage fell due came around and there was no provision for paying it off. Notice had been received that the sheriff would call that day at 3 o'clock and if the money was not forthcoming the mortgage would be foreclosed and the piece of ground taken away from her. So that morning she sent her two sons into town to see if they could raise the amount by a second mortgage. This was in the fall of 1878.

While they were absent two men rode up and asked for a drink. The old auntie waited on them, and while doing so told her trials and tribulations, not pausing until they were in possession of every fact of the case.

The two men appeared interested in her story and alighting from their horses asked if she could get them some dinner. With the hospitality born in the colored race of the old regime she hastened to kill and fry a chicken, bake some sweet potatoes and mix up a corn pone.

"What's yo' bus'ness?" inquired the old colored woman, with easy familiarity.

"Oh, we are cattle buyers. Riding around the country buying up cattle."

"Wha' yo' b'on?" was the next question.

"In Scott county, Kentucky."

"Fo' de Lawd! Dat wha' I cum frum," and auntie redoubled her energy in getting up a delecatable dinner during which she explained again and again, with many a moan, that the sheriff was to be there at 3 o'clock that afternoon to foreclose the mortgage if she did not have the money to "lift" it, and her doubts of her boys ability to raise the money in town.

It was an excellent dinner just such a one as none but a Southern house servant can get up, and when it was eaten one of the men asked:

"How much is the dinner worth?"

"Fo' de Lawd," auntie replied, "yo don't suppose one Kaintuckian want to charge another fo' a dinnah?"

"Well, I'll tell you how much we consider it worth. Just $700 apiece." And counting out the money they each handed her $700.

Then followed one of those scenes never witnessed probably except when an old slave is the chief actor. The old woman never doubted the sincerity of the men. She fell on her knees and prayed, shouted, "hallelujah" and called down all manner of blessings on them.

"Is yo' angel?" she asked.

"No," one of them replied. "We are flesh and blood. You say the sheriff is to be here at 3 o'clock?"

"Yes, massa."

"And will come down that road there?"

"Yes, massa."

"Well, you make him sign your papers all right and give you a receipt before you count out to him the money."

The old negress promised faithfully that she would and the two men rode away.

At 3 o'clock the sheriff called and when he learned that the money was ready for him released the mortgage, took the money and started home.

Half a mile from the cabin as he was passing through a strip of woods two men—the cattle buyers—stepped out and relieved him of the $1,400.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Modern Tea Drinking.

Tea drinking has become very fashionable among us of late years almost as much so as it was in England a century ago; but the prevailing customs at the table are different. The "teacup times of hood and hoop" had their own etiquette, of a sort not likely to be revived. What should we think now of a fashionable lady who cooled her tea with her breath?

Certain other customs may be remembered in this country among us who had grandmothers trained in the ceremonies of a later day. One of them consisted in putting the spoon in the cup to show that no more tea was desired; another was that of turning over the cup in the saucer for the same purpose.

Etiquette also demanded that the tea should be tasted from the spoon and that the hostess should then inquire, "Is your tea agreeable?" Certain scrupulous old ladies ask that now, and the question savors of a more sedate and gentle day than this.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Old Oil Clock.

An interesting specimen of the old oil clock used in the seventeenth century was shown at a clock exhibition in Berlin. This particular clock consists of a tube of glass in the outer receiving frame, on which the hours from eight in the morning until six in the evening are indicated. The glass tube is filled with oil, and the wick in the receptacle consumes each hour just a certain portion of it, which can be seen by the numbers on the outer frame, and the time of day accordingly. Of course, this oil clock never had a reputation for accuracy, but in those days there were no trains or steamships and the doctrine that time is money had not been propounded.

Curfew Will Ring.

The good people of Vineland are in a state of high nervous tension over the agitation developed from the proposition to inaugurate the curfew bell in that place. After a highly exciting time the Council has decided that it must ring, but in the meantime the citizens have been in fierce conflict, in which ministers denounced each other and women joined in the acrimonious discussion over the proposed law. The movement for the adoption of the curfew ordinance was led by the W. C. T. U. When the Council met Tuesday night there was a large crowd on hand to support and oppose it as each faction looked at the matter. A woman led off in favor of the ordinance, and what followed is best described by a newspaper correspondent, who was "on the spot." The reporter's version is this:

Pastor Gifford followed with a bitter arraignment of the ordinance. Said he: "I oppose the curfew because it interferes with my rights as an American citizen, my rights as a parent, and, consequently, because it is unconstitutional."

"These remarks of a fellow-clergyman make me ashamed of my profession," cried Rev. W. E. Mann, the Congregationalist minister, a champion of the curfew; "I am disgusted with the man who stands for the Gospel of Jesus Christ and righteousness that will oppose the curfew and stand on the side of immorality."

"If Mr. Mann charges me with being on the side of immorality, I hurl back the accusation! I pay 100 cents on the dollar. I do not chew, nor smoke; drink no coffee, tea, or any other stimulants. Can other ministers here better that standard? I say the curfew ordinance could never be enforced if passed."

"You are teaching the boys unlawfulness and deviltry," interrupted Rev. J. G. Entrekin.

"That's not true," replied Mr. Gifford.

"I am ashamed of one certain pastor," answered Rev. Mr. Entrekin, as he took his seat.

"Mr. Gifford has done his church no good," cried Charles Keighly, the shoe manufacturer.

"We will stand by him and attend his church," was the quick retort of a score of voices from one part of the hall.

"The Bible says there shall be little children playing in the streets," said Mr. Gifford. "A large majority of signers of that petition for the curfew have no children to prevent which they have damned their souls by breaking the laws of God and man."

And more and more of the same. From the story of the Council meeting it is evident that there was need not so much of a curfew bell for the tots of the town, but of a good dose of horse sense for the men and women who got so wildly excited about it. The dissension and the enmity that has been stirred up and aroused by the agitation of the matter will do more harm to the elders than all the curfews in the world will do good to the juveniles.

Before the meeting closed, however, the Councilmen, who had been listening to the debate of their constituents with mild and somewhat amused countenances, passed the ordinance unanimously. Vineland is the first town in New Jersey to adopt the old puritanical idea, and her experience with it will be watched with some slight fears as to its complete success in view of the stormy voyage the ordinance went through before reaching a safe port.

NEWGATE AND OLD BAILEY MUST GO.

Newgate and the Old Bailey are about to be torn down, and thus London's historic prison and historic court will live hereafter only in history and fiction. For seven centuries these buildings have been the scenes of trials and executions. Some of the greatest patriots and some of the worst criminals England has ever known have received sentence in the Old Bailey and ended all their earthly sorrows at Newgate.

Root Them Out.

A committee of Vineland citizens, headed by Adolph Roeder, are sending out a circular to the papers of the State calling attention to the practice of justices of the peace sending large numbers of complaints to Grand Juries of various counties only to have the majority of them thrown out by the inquest as being worthless and trivial. A paragraph of the circular says:

A crying need is a change in our laws that will allow petty cases to be tried at home. As matters now stand justices are obliged to hear only one side of a case and with the limited knowledge thus obtained and the inducement of a fee, send many cases to the Grand Jury, entailing heavy costs on the taxpayers, and individual inconvenience. Witnesses are summoned two and three days before the Grand Jury and then perhaps not heard. Before the case is ended perhaps two or three days are spent in attending court. Some of these witnesses are known to be people who depend on daily toil for bread, and the expense and loss of time to them is a serious hardship.

The "crying need of a change" can be met best and most effectively by attacking the justice of the peace system as it prevails in this State, and rooting out the Dogberries who obtain moderate judicial power from it—which too often is used in a direction that the spirit of the system does not condone. There is a growing sentiment in the State against these petty courts and it is only a matter of time before the Legislature will be called upon to abolish them. If the Vineland citizens would have their influence count let them turn it in that direction.

Tom Watson, the fiery populist, who has been a member of Congress and was a candidate for Vice President in the last Presidential campaign, is looked upon by those who do not know him as simply blatant demagogue with an oily tongue and a smacking of general information backed up principally by plenty of "nerve." Such opinions do the Georgia man an injustice, because he is really a gentleman of scholarly attainments, as is shown in the fact that he has just completed a two volume history of France. So competent an authority as George Carey Eggleston declares the history to be a fine work.

The Newark News says that the evil referred to by President of the Senate Reed of allowing bills to drag along until the close of the session, then to be dumped in a body on the Governor's desk, could be partially overcome by the passage of a law such as in force in some States prohibiting the introduction of any new bills for at least two weeks prior to the Legislature's adjournment.

It is yet too early to hear much about the third house at Trenton, but it can be depended upon that in due time it will be present in all its force and sleekness

Assemblyman Murray has captured one of the best chairmanships of the lower house of the Legislature in heading the committee on banks and currency.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Frame, the famous Scotch comedian and humorous, appears at Music Hall tomorrow night, with his own imported company of singers, pipers and dancers, and indications point to a well filled house and delightful entertainment. Lovers of mirth and melody may be assured of pleasing enjoyment. Mr. Frame's recent performances at Chickering Hall, New York last week, won for him unqualified praise, confirming the high econiums bestowed on his efforts, by the press of England, Scotland and Canada. He is said to be a performer of rare mert and possesses the power to please in extraordinary manner. A hearty welcome undoubtedly awaits him here from all classes of amusement seekers.

Seekers after pleasure who journey from the suburbs to the city often find themselves in a dilemma because of the impossibility of catching a train that will set them home at a decent hour and at the same time permit them to see a theatrical performance to its end. To these the continuous performance houses have a special value, for, by coming a little earlier, the whole show may be seen and one can arrange to leave at any hour one desires and be sure of having seen all there is to be seen. The Proctor continuous houses have their programme arranged so that patrons may be always certain of seeing a good show no matter at what hour they come. For the week beginning January 16th the bills are particularly attractive. At the Pleasure Palace, East Fifty-eighth street, Lexington and Third avenues, Henry E Dixey, the clever and graceful comedian heads the list with a new monologue giving opportunity to his versatility, and he is surrounded by a coterie of vaudeville performers of approved ability. At Proctor's Twenty-third street Theatre a novelty is promised in the Eastern debut of Streator Zouaves, a crack western military organization who give an exhibition of lightning drill, bayonet exercise, wall scaling, etc., which is said to be little short of marvelous. In addition S. Miller Kent and his company will appear in a new comedy.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she could not sleep incessantly and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, January 12.—Hazelwood Craig, who was one of the New Jersey Reserves on board the Badger, brought home with him a Spanish handkerchief from one of eight Spanish soldiers who were captured and gave themselves up as prisoners to the American boys. The handkerchief is a common cotten one, with pictures in red, around the border, and a large colored picture in the centre, worth perhaps five cents. An officer on board the Badger offered the man as much as $7 for it, but the man refused that offer and gave it up instead for some food.

Walter G. Runyon had charge of Isaac Brokaw's funeral yesterday, and drove with the funeral party to Springfield, twelve miles, in the piercing cold.

Rev. E. S. Jamison contemplated taking a trip this week, but has been obliged to defer the trip owing to the illness of Mrs. Jamison.

Miss Lottie Taylor and Mrs. J. W. Griggs will spend Sunday with Mrs. Griggs' sister, Mrs. Robinson, in Newark.

The new freight house is nearing completion, and is now entirely roofed over, and ready for shingling.

Rev. Frank Fletcher will preach in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Plainfield, Saturday morning.

Isaac Stites, the blacksmith, has been so busy lately that he has had his father helping him.

Dr. Brakeley has received his spring shipment of wall paper, and can show some pretty patterns.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stover, of Piscataway, are visiting relatives in Philadelphia.

Mrs. William Mead has returned from Newark where she has been visiting.

Miss Mary Morse will spend next week visiting relatives in Sing Sing, N. Y.

Miss May Campbell, of Jersey City, is visiting Miss VanNest.

Miss George Day spent Tuesday visiting in New York.

A big crowd was on the lake yesterday skating.

The pay car is due Monday.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.

Scotch Plains, Jan. 12—The Waltham (Mass.) News printed the following Monday: "Rev. J. R. Braker, the new pastor, occupied the pulpit at Beth Eden church yesterday and made a favorable impression on the congregation that gathered to listen to him. The text was taken from that portion of the chapter of Acts which relates to the incident of the vision of Cornelius at Cesarea and of Peter at the home of Simon Getana in the city of Jappa, by the seaside."

In the contract case of Emery against MacDonald in Judge Clark's court, yesterday, judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for the full amount with costs. MacDonald, who lives at Summit, N. J., some time ago made arrangements with Emery for the entertainment of a stage load from that place. Emery made elaborate preparations, but the evening came and went but no MacDonald or party came. Emery held MacDonald responsible as he was the one who had contracted the bill. When case was called a short time ago, MacDonald asked for an adjournment which was granted and yesterday when case was called no MacDonald was present. Judge Clark gave the plaintiff for the full amount and elocution was ordered to be levied.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hall, of Fanwood, have returned from a short visit to Waltham, Mass., where they went to hear Rev. J. S. Braker's initial sermon before the Beth Eden Baptist church of that place. Mr. Braker's pastorate of his new charge has started very successfully.

The many friends of Henry O. Drake, who has been very ill at his home on Westfield avenue, will be glad to learn that he is improving very nicely and will soon be able to resume his position again.

Albert Gibbs is detained at home by a badly-sprained ankle, the result of slipping upon the ice while working around the Central Railroad yards at Jersey City several days ago.

Miss Kizzie Naegle, of Plainfield, has been visiting her cousin, Miss Helen Whitenack.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Jan. 12—The funeral services of the late Frederick Bruton took place this afternoon from his former residence on Summit avenue at 1:30 o'clock, and were conducted by Rev. George A. Francis, pastor of the Baptist church. Interment took place at Hillside avenue, Plainfield. Mr. Bruton leaves a wife and one child. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum of Cranford.

Revival services are being held at the Methodist Episcopal church each evening during this week.

The Westfield fire department will elect a chief engineer next month.

SCENES FROM ROME.

MOVING PICTURES OF POPE LEO IN THE VATICAN.

Seventeen Thousand Views, Divided Into Nine Scenes, Presented at Washington—His Holiness' Stipulations—Explanatory Lecture.

An event of unusual importance to the Catholics of Washington was the presentation the other night, at Carroll Institute hall, before an audience representative of social, political and ecclesiastical life at the capital, of the moving pictures of Pope Leo XIII, recently taken at the Vatican in Rome and reproduced with lifelike effect by the biograph. The exhibition was given to an invited audience and in honor of Archbishop Martinelli, the apostolic delegate to the United States, and among the prominent churchmen present were Mgr. Chapelle, apostolic delegate to Cuba; Mgr. Conaty of the Catholic university, Bishops Donahue and Curtis, Rev. Dr. Whitney, president of Georgetown university, and Rev. Dr. Gillespie of Gonzaga college. The diplomatic corps was well represented, and there were also present members of the United States senate and house of representatives and many prominent business and professional men of the District.

The charm of the Vatican filled the audience with reverence, for the moving pictures were so true to life that the pope, in the midst of the beautiful surroundings of his home life, seemed transported to the hall itself. The exhibition was wonderful, evidencing the care and pains taken in securing the series of pictures. In all 17,000 pictures of the pope were presented, these being divided into nine scenes. The pictures were secured by Mr. W. K. Dickson of the biograph company last summer, and their preannounced public presentation in the United States attracted no little attention. Cardinal Gibbons was recently given a private view of the scenes in Baltimore and expressed his pleasure and approval of the exhibition.

The pope granted sittings for the pictures with the understanding that they were to be reproduced in the United States in such manner that all of his subjects who desired to see him as true to life as possible might do so, especially the poorer classes, who are unable to take a trip to Rome. The first pictures of the exhibition showed Cardinal Gibbons blessing the students of St. Mary's college in Baltimore the other day. The scenes at the Vatican show the pope in the gardens, attended by the papal guards. The pope moved before the camera unaided, in spite of his advanced age, and his peaceful expression is shown with vivid realism. The gardens of the Vatican and loggia of the chapel are shown, in some views the pope appearing in his carriage, in a sedan chair, and seated on his favorite stone bench.

Rev. Thomas H. Malone, editor of the Colorado Catholic and a well known orator, delivered the explanatory lecture. In speaking of the Vatican he said the institution saw the building of the Coliseum at Rome and lived through the empire of pagan Rome. The papacy overcame all obstacles until it ruled over a great spiritual kingdom, which included the whole world. The papacy has seen the salvation of civilization in Europe, and all great historians state that it has been the potent force in history.

Father Malone declared that to the world of today the personality of Leo appeals particularly as in every way acquitting one to represent in the closing decade of this century of democracy that august dynasty which has endured through the convulsions of well nigh 2,000 years of human history, and which still stands as a sublime embodiment of indestructible power.

"Leo," said he, "has with singular keenness grasped the meaning of our institutions; has understood our character; has sympathized with our aims and aspirations; has faith in our destiny, and has time and again given evidences of his love for us and his interest in all that concerns us, and we, on our part, feel drawn by ties of personal affection to the venerable pontiff of the faroff Eternal City. Thousands of his American children, who could never hope to make a pilgrimage to him, will feel grateful to the gentle father who has made it possible for them to feel almost as if they had looked upon him in life, and to know the thrill that comes from the consciousness of standing in that august, venerable presence.

"There have been three 'grand old men' of this century. Two of them—Gladstone and Bismarck—have passed away, but the greatest of the three is still a power in the world, and he is dear to every American heart. A strong tie of personal affection unites his American children to Pope Leo, and as they look upon the frail figure and the face that already seems to be reflecting back the glory of the other life many a heart will be touched with a sense of pain and sadness. But, on the other hand, none can escape a thrill of pride and admiration at the picture of sustained power that is here presented."

The apostolic delegate expressed himself as delighted with the pictures of the pope.—Washington Star.

The Steam Bishop.

The Providence Visitor calls attention to the fact that Mgr. Chapelle is not the first American prelate to be sent as delegate to the West Indies. Away back in 1835 Bishop John England was clothed with authority by Gregory XVI as apostolic delegate to Santo Domingo to restore Catholic discipline, revive the decaying spirit of religion and enforce obedience to the laws of the church in that somewhat disorderly republic. He retained the post for a time, and as the pope's representative was received with much distinction by all classes. The expedition he showed in settling affairs amazed the Romans, who dubbed him "il vescovo di vapore," the steam bishop.

REWARDED BY THE POPE.

Splendid Moral Courage of Don Macario Ossa of Santiago.

A young infidel in Santiago de Cuba named Pletiado recently stood up to make a speech at a public assembly; but, counting too much upon the non-religious principles of his audience, he began to speak in the most disrespectful and audacious manner of our Lord and the Blessed Virgin, when one of the first gentlemen of Santiago, Don Macario Ossa, rose from his seat and made an indignant protest against the insult. He then knelt down on the platform and made a solemn act of reparation in presence of all. So eloquent and soul stirring were his words that all present were struck with awe and reverence and listened with bowed heads, while the young atheist slunk away and has not been heard of since. For several days the house of Don Macario Ossa was besieged with visitors—ladies, gentlemen, priests—all coming to congratulate him upon his courage in braving human respect, for his audience was by no means composed of the most practical Christians.

The archbishop sent him a heart of gold, and the Catholic journals were full of his praises. When asked how he came to speak with so much eloquence, he answered: "I do not know. I do not remember even what I said." He exposed himself to mockery and insult, but in reality received only praise for his noble conduct. Needless to tell the immense amount of good his example has done. It will be a long time before another will dare to offer public insult to our Lord in Santiago. The sequel proved that it was not for want of faith, but through lack of moral courage, that there were not more protests against it. His holiness Leo III, "motu proprio," names Don Macario Ossa knight of the order of Pia in recognition of his noble conduct.—Church News.

HER MAJESTY'S CRUCIFIX.

Queen Victoria's Gift to a Humble Carthusian Monk.

The crucifix with which Queen Victoria's name is associated has its place in the convent of the Grande Chartreuse. This may seem strange to the uninitiated, but it is true. It is a beautiful silver crucifix and has its place among the convent's treasures. It was given by the queen to a humble Carthusian monk of English nationality when her majesty visited the Grande Chartreuse some years ago. She conversed with this monk in his cell, the conversation turning upon serious matters. The royal visit at an end, the monk saluted his sovereign, and the queen of England left the cell.

Shortly afterward the general of the Carthusians called to him the religious in question and handed him a beautiful silver crucifix. It was Queen Victoria's gift to the English monk in remembrance of her visit to his cell. "Our rule forbids us to possess such things," said the superior, "but keep this beautiful crucifix by you for a time at any rate." The monk withdrew and returned almost immediately, handing his superior the crucifix with a piece of paper having the following words written upon it: "Regina dedit, regula abstulit, sit nomen Domini benedictum" (The queen gave it, the rule withdraws it; may the name of the Lord be praised).—Catholic Times.

Need of the Layman's Hearty Support.

A hearty and enthusiastic lay support is necessary for the onward march of the church. The labors of the clergy are too often not respected by the masses. They are set down as paid duties of the priesthood or as clerical opposition, while the world listens when the layman speaks. The favorable impression of the American people can be best obtained by the hearty work of the layman, and he showed his influence at the lay convention at Baltimore some time ago. While Catholics are numerically as strong as ever, or stronger, they have not the social, commercial or political strength of former times, and the examples of pioneer priests and other martyrs should serve as examples to inspire higher ideals and greater sacrifices for the church. Catholic newspapers, magazines and books should be read and their authors encouraged.—Reading Circle Review.

Autocrat of the Beavers.

Rev. Father Gallagher of Beaver island, Michigan, is dead. For 32 years he has been known as the autocrat of the Beavers. The island has a population of about 800 people of Irish nationality. The good priest was not only their spiritual but likewise their temporal guide. He was governor, legislator, mayor, judge and jury. The people came to him about all their affairs. His judgment was never appealed from. He was a grand, noble old man, and his people all dearly loved and respected him and now sincerely mourn his death.—Memphis Catholic Journal.

An Unusual Spectacle.

The very unusual spectacle of four sisters of one family entering a religious order at the same time was witnessed the other day at the novitiate of the Sisters of St. Francis, Mount Loretto, Staten Island, N. Y. The young women are the daughters of Bernard McNally, a well to do farmer who lives near Crompton. The youngest of the girls is about 20, and for several years they have kept a dressmaking and millinery establishment in a house owned by their parents at Crompton. One daughter remains at home with the old folks.—Boston Herald.

Prepared by His Holiness.

The holy father prepared lately an inscription to be set up in memory of one of his old friends, recently deceased. For the guidance of the stonecutters he arranged the spacing, points and lines of the epitaph with the utmost precision.—London Catholic Times and Standard.

CONDUCT OF WILD HORSES.

Fear of Wolves, Speed of Colts and the Habit of Shying.

Another animal which, when in a state of nature, lives in droves, is the horse. It is almost as defenseless as the sheep, and when a herd of wild horses is attacked by wolves there is no escape but in flight. In its wild state the horse's natural habitat is on the open plains, not in mountainous regions, but on the steppes of Asia, and when attacked by wolves its only safety lies in its superior speed. If the young foal were not as swift as its parents it would fall an easy prey to its pursuer, and so, within a few generations, the wild horse might be utterly destroyed by its enemies. The curios thing is that the foal is quite as swift as its parents. When one looks at it, even in its domesticated condition, it seems to be all legs, and one is surprised to see how easily the slight body is borne along on those long legs beside the mother, even when she is running at her swiftest rate. In that fact lies the safety of the wild horse from destruction, and the thousands of generations in which that useful animal have been domesticated have brought no change in the peculiar conformation of the foal's limbs, though it is no longer needed for its original purpose.

Another curious thing is, that one of the faults of the horse of which we are apt to complain, we mean the habit of shying, is the survival of an old habit which was useful and necessary when its ancestors were still roaming wild upon the plains. Then every horse was constantly on the outlook for an enemy, and it did not look only with one eye. It habitually kept turning its head in all directions, so as to catch the slighest sound which would indicate the presence of danger. Not only when a wolf was seen did the herd take flight; any sound, as of the wolf breaking through the long grass, caused an instantaneous stampede, and something of that habit still survives. The horse seldom fears the objects which it sees unless they appear suddenly, but the sudden appearance of some light thing driven by the wind, or some slight sound that perhaps may not be heard by his master, may cause an instant and involuntary shy, such as the poor brute would instinctively make if he were still upon the plains. How unjust it is, and how utterly stupid, to punish his terror by whipping him for such a fault! To do so is to make him only so much the readier to shy again, remembering—and he is sure to remember—that, even if there has been no reason for his involuntary shying, there is something to dread immediately afterward. The only sensible way to deal with this remnant of wildness in the domesticated horse is to stop and let him feel that there is nothing to fear, and so break down the remnant of his old and perfectly natural habit of fright from possible danger.—Our Animal Friends.

BY HEIGHT, NOT BY AGE.

How the Fare of Children on European Railways is Measured.

Nearly every one knows that the rule on railway trains and other public conveyances which provides for the carrying free of children under 5 years old, and of charging half fares for those between the ages of 5 and 12, often results in statements from the parents which are as trying to a normal conscience as the affidavits made by many tourists regarding dutiable goods among their belongings.

Sometimes these answers result in unpleasant controversies between conductors and passengers, but usually our national tact and good nature help along the adjustment without undue friction. In parts of Europe they have a way of fixing this matter so that no one has cause to quarrel about it.

Instead of going by a child's age, as to what rate of fare it shall pay, they go by size. The collector is provided with a 5 foot rule, and he rates the children by this. Any child under 24 inches in height travels free, while those who measure between 24 inches and 51 inches pay half fare. All who measure more than 4 feet 3 inches pay full fare.—New York Sun.

Looking Into the Future.

"I guess I might as well quit school, Papa," said the boy. "Why, my son?" "Oh there ain't any use going except to help my little boy when I grow up, and if they have changed the way of doing things since you were a boy so that you can't help me now, it's likely I'm just wasting my time getting ready to help my little boy." He got the help he wanted, but it was a good thing he didn't hear what his father had to say about new fangled school-books after he had gone to bed—Chicago Evening Post.

"What's funny about it?"

"It's all typewritten in the neatest style till it's nearly finished, and then I guess he got tired, or his machine broke, or something, fo it's signed, 'Yours affectionately, Hiram Higginside,' in the ugliest scrawl you ever saw."—Chicago Tribune.

"Th's," said the police judge the other morning, "is one of the most aggravated cases of assault and battery ever brought to my official notice. How could a big, able-bodied man like you artike a deaf mute?" "Do you's m'ane that he could n'ather sp'ake nor h'are?" "That's precisely what I mean." Provinz Westpreußen.

Danzig. Auf eine Petition der städtischen Behörden zu Pillau um Anlegung einer Torpedobootsstation hat das Reichsmarineamt geantwortet, daß die Marineverwaltung jetzt nicht die Absicht habe, bei Danzig einen Kriegshafen und in dessen Nähe eine Torpedobootsstation einzurichten. Der Pillauer Hafen genüge als Stützpunkt für Torpedoboote und kleine Fahrzeuge. Der beste Schutz der heimischen Küste werde durch den Ausbau unserer Flotte gewährleistet.

Elbing. Die Strafkammer hat im Wiederaufnahmeverfahren den Korbmacher Neumann aus Marienburg, der wegen Verleitung zum Meineid zu einer einjährigen Zuchthausstrafe verurtheilt war, freigesprochen. Neumann hat die Strafe bereits verbüßt.

Kösen. Das Bismarck-Denkmal auf der Rudelsburg ist jetzt mit einem kunstvollen Eisengitter umgeben worden. Das stilvolle, von Professor Linnemann in Frankfurt a. M. entworfene, in der Hametan'schen Kunstschmiedewerkstatt angefertigte Gitter zeigt in gleichmäßiger Vertheilung 108 Wappenschilder mit den vergoldeten Zirkeln der verschiedenen Korps, welche mit Eichenblättern umgeben sind. Die Schönheit des Denkmals hat durch das Gitter bedeutend gewonnen.

Mühlhausen. Das Weberehepaar Fischer aus dem hiesigen Landkreise hat am 4. Oktober d. J. den alten Vater der Frau mit einem Dreschflegelholze in der unmenschlichsten Weise mißhandelt und bis zum anderen Morgen eingesperrt. Der Greis wollte zum vierten Male heirathen, daher der Haß und die Zwietracht im Hause. Das Gericht verurtheilte den Ehemann zu vier Jahren, die Frau zu drei Jahren Gefängniß.

Provinz Schlesien.

Oppeln. Während vor dem Schöffengericht gegen einen Schaffner und einen Pferdeknecht aus einem benachbarten Orte verhandelt wurde, fiel es dem Gerichtshof auf, daß ein scharfer Stallgeruch das Gerichtszimmer erfüllte. Es wurde festgestellt, daß die beiden Angeklagten Wäsche und Kleider nicht gewechselt hatten, ehe sie vor Gericht erschienen. Das Gericht sah hierin eine Mißachtung des Gerichts und verurtheilte die beiden Leute wegen Ungebühr vor Gericht zu 5 Mark Geldstrafe.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Altona. Hier wurde ein gewisser Friedrich Wilhelm Fischer verhaftet, der verdächtig ist, in Bergedorf die Ehefrau Kiehn ermordet zu haben. Fischer, der bereits acht Jahre im Rendsburger Zuchthause gesessen hat, soll erst kürzlich in Wilhelmsburg einen äußerst verwegenen Einbruch verübt haben.

Kiel. Die gleichzeitige Durchschleusung zweier von entgegengesetzter Seite kommender Panzerdivisionen an der Westmündung des Nord-Ostsee-Kanals ist dieser Tage zum ersten Male vorgenommen und glatt vollzogen worden. Die Panzerschiffe der ersten Division trafen von der Ostsee, die Panzerschiffe der zweiten von der Nordsee bei der Brunsbütteler Schleuse ein. Erstere benutzten die Nordschleuse, letztere die Südschleuse.

PRESERVING MILK BY FREEZING.

Can Be Kept an Indefinite Length of Time.

The ocean steamers all serve ice cream at dinner and buy a supply for the round trip in New York. The same is true of clams and oysters. They stow the shellfish away in a tank which is half full of rocks and seaweed. They draw off all the water every morning and refill the tank with a hose from the sea, so that it is perfectly easy to keep them in good condition for several weeks. They keep lobsters in the same way.

Ice cream is more difficult to handle. It takes about eighteen hundred pounds for the round trip for a passenger list of 250. It is put up in cubes of one quart each, which are wrapped in oiled paper. The boxes are then stowed away in tin cans or chests which hold enough for a single dinner. These are sealed and piled up in the refrigerator, where the temperature is kept even the whole year around. The steward tells me that ice cream that is left over from one voyage is used on the next. He has known it to keep in good condition for two or three months.

In Denmark some one has discovered a process by which milk can be preserved in a similar manner by freezing it into blocks, and the process is said to be a great success. Fresh milk in cans cannot be kept longer than forty-eight hours without losing something of its flavor, but it is claimed that milk frozen by the new process may not only be preserved an indefinite length of time if kept in an even temperature, but is entirely free from disease germs, as if it had been boiled.

A company has been formed at Copenhagen with a capital of $50,000 to perfect this process and erect a plant capable of turning out 110,000 pounds a day, which can be shipped to any part of the world in vessels that have a refrigerator capacity.—Chicago Record.

HOW THE EMPRESS PAID HER RENT.

Gave a Full Length Portrait of Herself to the Owner of the Place.

While traveling in Spain a number of years ago the writer was entertained at dinner in Jerez by an Englishman who was the owner of a fine hunting estate on the south coast of Spain, where he usually spent the summer months. In the spring of 1882 the Austrian Consul called on Mr. D— and said that his mistress, the Empress Elizabeth, understanding that he proposed spending the season in England, greatly desired to rent his place.

Mr. D— said he would not rent his place to any one, but he would feel highly honored if Her Majesty would occupy it for the summer.

When he returned with his family in the autumn his wife received a note from the Empress, saying that she would pass through Jerez on a certain day, and desired to breakfast with her. Her Majesty expressed her indebtedness for a delightful summer, and urged that she be allowed to make some recompensation for the place, but the offer was gracefully refused. At length the Empress said:

"Is there nothing I can do to show my appreciation of your kindness and courtesy?"

"Well," replied Mr. D—, "if on Your Majesty's return to Vienna you will send me a small photograph with your autograph, I shall be pleased to possess it."

Several months passed without the appearance of the promised portrait, and both Mr. and Mrs. D— rather unwillingly arrived at the conclusion that the illustrious lady had entirely forgotten them and her promise, when a few weeks later an enormous box arrived, containing a finely framed full-length oil painting of the Empress executed by the Austrian Court painter, among the first artists of Europe.—New York Observer.

A Binding Chinese Oath.

We are accustomed to all manner of swearing—that is, of course, legal oath-taking—in this country; but we do not recollect hearing of so queer a medium of attestation as a "guillotined black cockatoo." That is what the police of a country district in New South Wales had to provide the other day for a finicking Chinaman, who obstinately declined to swear on anything else. Headless fowls were brought, but in vain; even a black swan, a luxury surely for a Chinese witness, was declined. After many days a dead cockatoo of the required hue was discovered in a hut of one of the other "heathen," as they call the Celestials—who mulcted the officials 10s for a fast decomposing bird. Then the solemn and peculiar oath was duly administered, when the difficult witness declared that he knew nothing about the case, and sat down smiling.—London Chronicle.

AN AMERICAN ASPIRANT

CHAPTER II.

"Mademoiselle has the voice of a rossignol," announced Purrini.

"At home we always say she sings like a lark," remarked Aunt Mildred. "What is a rossignol?"

"I know," said Mary, who was eagerly thumbing an eloquently misused pocket dictionary; "r-o-s-s-i-g-n-o-l—nightingale."

"I never heard a nightingale," said Aunt Mildred unenthusiastically. "The question is, professor, will she be able to sing in grand opera?"

Purrini rubbed his hands together and lifted his eyebrows quizzically.

"There are 2,000 American girls in Europe today," he affirmed, with apparent irrelevance, "who are studying for grand opera. If mademoiselle succeeds, it will be all the more a triumph, will it not?"

"I always thought I'd like to sing like a Patti or a Melba," announced Priscilla. "It seems so easy for them to fire off those little roulades and then dip down like swallows before the footlights and then run off the stage like schoolgirls who have done nothing whatsoever but amuse themselves."

"H'm-m!" murmured Purrini.

"A friend of mine told me that one of the De Reszkes told her," cried Aunt Mildred shrilly, "that the American voices are the finest in the world. Do you think it is true, professor?"

"I have never been in America," remarked Purrini evasively, "but it is none the less quite possible."

"How nice these foreigners are," thought Aunt Mildred, "so suave if a little noncommittal. Their manner is far more elegant than ours. To hit straight between the eyes the way we do at home is so unpleasant."

"Let me see," mused Priscilla out loud. "There will be the four lessons a week at 25 francs a lesson, and the diction lesson at 10 francs, and the French lessons at 5 francs, and ultimately the acting lessons. Is that all, professor?"

"C'est tout," Purrini assured her affably, with unconscious irony.

"How many months do you think it will take for me to perfect myself?"

"That depends upon the intelligence of mademoiselle."

"About a year?" suggested Aunt Mildred encouragingly.

Purrini frowned suddenly and fiercely. Then he remembered who and what he was and concealed the frown with a spasmodic grin.

"Possibly," he said.

"What is a diction lesson?" questioned Mary.

"The art of learning to sing in French. It is totally different from speaking, you know."

"I don't see why," remarked Aunt Mildred obstinately.

"Mon Dieu, qu'elle est bavarde, cette vieille!" muttered Purrini as he turned and showed them to the door. "A Lundi, alors, mademoiselle?"

"Yes, I will come for my first lesson on Monday," said Priscilla.

"I think," she said later, aloud, as the three walked slowly up the Rue de la Paix, glistening with magnificent equipages, odoriferous of iris from Guerlain's famous perfumery, brilliant with exquisitely dressed women and the frou frou of fashion and folly—"I think it will probably take me about two years to get there." She pointed to the Grand Opera facade, from which streamed the French flags. There had been a fete the day before, and all Paris had gone holidaying. Priscilla was already imagining, girlishly, the delighted aspect of her rapt audiences, the strange new feeling of power which would be hers with the fulfillment of her hopes, the cablegrams which would speed across the ocean, the celebrity she would become. She saw a familiar pretty face, well known on both continents, flit from a carriage into Doucet's doorway. Somebody in the passing crowd turned and whispered a name. It was an American name which had got both continents agog because of its owner's beauty and vocal aspirations.

"Two years," repeated Aunt Mildred. "So much the better. That will give me time to look around a bit at the galleries, order some stunning gowns to take home with me and dip lightly into the French language. Would you mind walking home alone with Mary, my dear? I feel like an English frump in these traveling togs. Ah, there is Mr. Stornmouth, thank fortune! He will escort you and Mary home, I am sure."

"Delighted," said Stornmouth. He was lifting his hat. He was superbly well groomed. He wore a small bunch of Parma violets in his buttonhole. His fine head was surmounted by a tile instead of a traveling cap.

As Priscilla looked up at his greeting and flushed vividly with pleasure she wondered why he appeared so different now from what he had seemed on the steamer. He looked older—to be depended upon. She liked him. Ever since last night, when he had placed them in that queer little yellow omnibus at the St. Lazare station, she had wondered wistfully when she should see him again.

Aunt Mildred nodded, smiled, waved a gloved hand and disappeared through two beveled glass doors presided over by a miniature page in buttons.

"Let's walk up the boulevard," suggested Stornmouth, "and then around to the Rue de Rivoli, to Colombin's, the tea place. Everybody goes there. You will see your worst enemy and your best friend and fill up your inner woman. Tell me, how are you?" His eyes had met Priscilla's. A glad light had welled up in his in spite of his 35 years' self government.

"I have been to Purrini's," announced Priscilla. "He says I have the voice of a rossignol."

"They all say that," returned Stornmouth. "I wonder if the singing teacher exists in Paris who does not liken any new voice to the voice of a nightingale. Nightingales are rare enough, in all conscience."

"He said," cried Mary, sticking her inquisitive little head across Priscilla, so that Stornmouth could hear her voice better, "that she would sing in grand opera."

"Oh, no, he did not," Priscilla contradicted peremptorily. "I particularly remember he did not say that. He only did not discourage me when I said I wished to sing in grand opera. He recognized just possibly"—this with a palpably malevolent intention, the candid eyes clouded, the sensitive lips pressed tight together—"he realized happily that when a girl sets out to do anything in this world the most powerful obstacle she has to overcome to ignore, is the superfluous discouragement of her friends."

"Look at the woman in that carriage," said Stornmouth, with a quizzical gleam in his eyes. "She is a prima donna, if you will. She sings at the El Dorada, down on the boulevard exterieur. She has diamonds as big as birds' eggs. There is not a man in Paris, from a cocher to a crown prince, who does not know every glance of her eyes, every note of her voice, as well as he knows his last year's record at the Grand Prix."

"But she is a horrid, bedizened old thing!" cried Priscilla, who had stared ardently, looked away shamefacedly and was now biting her lips furiously.

"That's fame," he remarked uncompromisingly. "It nearly always stamps a woman or a man that way." Stornmouth was unusually reserved. He possessed an Anglo-Saxon contempt for interference. Today, in spite of himself, it must be confessed, he appeared singularly devoid of his ordinary tact.

"I should hate to see a man, any man," he continued, a trifle hoarsely, "gazing at your little face through an opera glass, child. I heard some men last night at the vaudeville discussing an actress' 'points' after the fashion of a couple of horse jockeys on a race course. I couldn't blame them. The woman had set herself up to be gazed at. They gazed."

Priscilla lifted her head very high indeed and answered not a word. She wore a perfectly fitting suit and a saucy little hat with a red wing in it. She looked like a fearless child—she was.

It was 4 o'clock. The fountains were flashing brightly in the autumn sunshine as the three strolled down the Rue Royale toward the Place de la Concorde. Glittering equipages with high stepping steeds and superbly appareled occupants were rolling up the Champs Elysees.

They walked around to Colombin's, took a cup of tea, absorbed some lukewarm, soggy and buttery muffins in a tiny room forged with women dressed in the height of fashion, who chattered like magpies over last night's balls, Delna's new role at the Opera Comique, the appearance of prominent personages at the Palais de Glace, which is "awfully bad form after 5 o'clock, my dear—I should not think Blanche would have done anything so inconvenante"—heard a mixture of Anglicisms, Americanese and Gallicisms and then started for home. Mary regretfully followed. She had longed for hot toast after she had delightedly consumed her muffins, but her companions both seemed absentminded and in a hurry to get out of doors again. They crossed the Tuileries gardens, the Place de la Concorde, and were walking up the Champs Elysees before Priscilla was at all like herself. She had been stiff and unnatural.

"There is a friend of mine here, a singer," she explained defiantly as they passed the Palais de l'Industrie. "Her name is Constance Brandford. Her stage name is Brilla. I will trouble you, Mr. Stornmouth, to walk with us as far as the Rue Lincoln. I am going to call on her. We can go home in a cab."

"I know Constance Brilla," said Stornmouth unexpectedly. "She was a friend of my sister."

"Oh, indeed!" from Priscilla unencouragingly.

"She has been over here seven years," said Stornmouth. "Is it possible the poor thing is pegging away yet?" he added commiseratingly.

Priscilla turned and confronted him. Her cheeks were stained with a vivid crimson borrowed from her oppressed enthusiasms revolt. She began with fine sarcasm. "You have perhaps an objection also to Brilla 'treading the boards,' as you call it?"

"Not the least in the world," replied Stornmouth instantly.

"It is more than probable," continued Priscilla, as if she had not heard him, "that you have taken it upon yourself to make undesirable remarks to her about her future every time you have laid your eyes upon her."

"Nothing of the kind," responded Stornmouth in a tone of surprise. "Why so?"

"It appears to me," cried Priscilla, "that you are one of those persons who interfere with almost everybody."

"Oh, that is your impression, is it?" said Stornmouth. "Well, you are not complimentary."

"I did not intend to pay you compliments," said Priscilla. "I abhor compliments. I merely stated a truth. For a man who is tolerably successful and who has a number of friends—you have told me that you were blessed in friends, have you not?—it seems to me that you take more time and experience a greater delight in interfering with other people's business than any well bred person I ever knew."

Priscilla was laboring under the impression that she was very neatly hitting Stornmouth over Constance Brilla's shoulders and that in so doing she was successfully concealing her own chagrin at Stornmouth's disapproval of the course she wished to pursue. She had reckoned without her host. Stornmouth read men with an intuition which was proverbial. He understood most women with keen sympathy. He had the manliness to acknowledge in the present instance that his discretion had deserted him.

"If I have presumed for one instant, Miss Delno," she began in a dry tone of voice Priscilla had never before heard from him, "I beg your pardon. You are too pretty to go on the stage—that is all; too pretty and too sweet. Oh, forgive me"—Priscilla had drawn up her slight figure a little and had begun to answer him—"I am speaking to you exactly as your own brother would speak if he knew what I know and understood the continent as I do. I will retire from my position of mentor. We will be comrades. I will suggest nothing. I will only look on."

"Not even that," said Priscilla in a high, strained voice.

Stornmouth started and glanced sideways at her. She was very pale, and she had gripped Mary's hand fast. "Not even that, if you please, Mr. Stornmouth. I suppose you think I am very foolish. I know I am a great deal younger than you are," this with a little wicked gleam of her eyes, which suddenly roused Stornmouth to the consciousness that she was made of fire and flame, as well as of unusually desirable beauty and sweetness, "but even so I dislike being patronized. You have patronized me ever since I met you. I don't care an iota what you know of the continent. It seems to me your contact with it has made you very—remarkable. It may be clever to be cynical, but to a girl like me it is vastly unpleasant. I think then the more that the less we see of one another the better."

"As you like," returned Stornmouth shortly.

Priscilla could not believe the evidence of her ears.

Constance Brilla lived on the fifth floor of a mansion in the Rue Lincoln. Priscilla, Stornmouth and Mary walked the remaining few blocks in frigid silence.

"Come," said Stornmouth—he was holding out his hand; they had reached the doorway which led into the court—"come, Miss Priscilla, I am going back to America in a few days. We may never see one another again. We must not part like this, must we?"

"Yes," said Priscilla. She was feebly striving to remember where she had read that the reason women never accomplish anything is on account of the male sex; that they always stand in the way of achievement, just out of the possibility of their superior strength, if not desirability. She weakly felt as though she were putting a big prop away from her, but she had concluded to "live for her art," like Michael Angelo and Raphael. This was a hard tug, to be sure, but Stornmouth might as well recognize first as last the absolute, unfaltering integrity of her high minded intention.

Stornmouth straightened himself up suddenly. He was very tall and broad and fine, Priscilla thought.

"It seems to me," said he slowly, "I never can quite forget that crossing of ours. It was storm bound, tempest tossed. The sun did not shine once, but somehow I never had a pleasanter trip."

Priscilla was silent.

"I am very happy to have met you, Miss Priscilla," continued the manly, ringing voice. "Do you wish me to carry any message to your father?"

"I can write," said Priscilla.

"And sing?" suggested Stornmouth irrepressibly, with a mischievous twinkle. This was the last straw.

"How dare you?" cried Priscilla. "You are laughing at me!"

Stornmouth followed her into the little court for one instant. Mary had run a little way ahead.

"No," he said, "not laughing at you, child; looking at you." A strong, firm hand fell on her shoulder and gripped it fast as it swung her round to the light. Another gentle hand lifted her chin softly and raised her lovely speaking face. "Goodby," said Stornmouth's voice. "Goodby."

The courtyard door fell with a clang.

"They say she's in," said Mary's voice. "Why, Priscilla!"

"The idea," said that perverse maiden with a singular smile, "of a man taking you at your word." With this enigmatical remark she dried her curiously moist eyes on a wisp of a pocket handkerchief and turned to climb the stairs.

"I think he is a horrid old thing," said Mary.

"You are a snip," remarked Priscilla. "In point of fact, if there is one word I detest in the English language it is goodby."

"Why do you use it, then?" asked Mary.

Nothing to Work On.

"Fellows, I tried to get that blooming mind-readah, don't you know, to come up to the club some evening and give us one of his deuced queeah entertainments. By Jove, he said he couldn't come."

"Did he have any reason, deah boy?"

"Why, he said he couldn't make a success of his efforts where there wasn't any material to work on."

"I wonder what the deuce he meant by that?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Problem Play.

"I believe you describe your new piece as a problem play?" said the friend.

The crack bowlers of the Westfield A. C. took three games straight from the Cranford Country Club Tuesday night in the Central Journal League. The games were rolled on the Westfield alleys. The home team was in fine form and rolled some remarkable scores, all the team contributing. The result of the three games is to place Westfield tie with Elizabeth for third place in the league and to anchor Cranford all the more securely in last place. The Westfielders were rolling in their old time form, Voehl especially doing some remarkable work. The individual scores were as follows:

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Chief Grant has resumed his position after a short battle with grip.

Senator Charles A. Reed is in Washington for a few days on business.

Miss Addie Roberts, of North avenue, who has been ill with grip, has recovered.

Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw, mother of Mrs. A. L. Force, 82 Duer street, is very ill. She is unable to recognize any one and her recovery is improbable.

SETTLEMENT NOT SATISFACTORY.

A. D. Thompson Declines to Accept the Amount of Loss Fixed on Building.

After much negotiation and trouble the insurance on the A. D. Thompson building, which was burned two months ago, was fixed yesterday by the adjusters appointed by Mr. Thompson and the insurance companies, Mr. Thompson claimed his loss to be $16,000, but the adjusters signed a statement making it $8,000. This agreement is not satisfactory to the owner of the burned building, and he will carry the case to the courts for settlement. James Manning, who represented Mr. Thompson among the three adjusters, signed the agreement under protest.

Death of Mrs. VanArsdale.

Mrs. Ellen P. VanArsdale, wife of Joseph N. VanArsdale, of 217 Lee place, died this morning after a long illness with paralysis. She was 65 years of ago and was well-known in a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon next at 1 o'clock from the house. Interment will be at Somerville.

Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given at Mrs. Dantz's home last night in honor of her son, Frank Dantz. The following were present: Miss Bertha Philpitt, George Bates, of Brooklyn; Miss Mamie Philpitt, Edward Smalley, Corra Dantz, I. Maire, Frank Dantz, Miss Lu Windham, Charles Case, Mrs. Fawn, August C. Windham and Mr. and Mrs. Dantz.

ON WAY TO RECOVERY

story. According to the instructions of the railroad officials, the body was placed in a casket and sent home on one of the late afternoon trains.

Every sign of the wreck in the vicinity of the tracks has now disappeared. All the metal wreckage has been placed on cars and carried away. The scattered woodwork of the passenger coach has been burned. Yesterday afternoon, the last scraps were collected and burned. Today, there is not a trace in the neighborhood of the "tanks" to tell of the frightful disaster that took place there Monday afternoon.

The last body to be identified was that of a stout man, apparently about fifty years of age. When first found, the authorities had an idea that his name was Keenan and that he was in some way related to Martin Keenan, who was severely injured and taken to the hospital. A number of the citizens from Mt. Carmel and Shamokin failed to identify him as such, however.

Yesterday, it was reported that a citizen from Shenandoah, Pa., was missing and that it was believed from the descriptions sent out that his was the remaining and unidentified body. Late last evening the son of the missing man, Edward O'Donnell, of Shenandoah, Pa., came to Bound Brook on the Lehigh Valley and promptly recognized the body as that of his father, Patrick O'Donnell, of Shenandoah. The body was shipped there at once.

INVESTIGATING THE CAUSE.

No Inquest to be Held, but the Evidence to be Presented to the County Officials.

Charles R. Moke, of New Brunswick, is one of the coroners of Middlesex county, and as such took official charge of the bodies of those who were killed in the wreck of the Lehigh Valley trains at West Dunellen last Monday.

County Physician Long, of New Brunswick, on his arrival at the scene of the wreck, gave it as his opinion that an inquest would not be needed, or, if it were, that it would not be required so have the bodies viewed, and he gave permission to have them removed. They were taken to Bound Brook, where Mr. Moke had them prepared for burial. He also did everything in his power to obtain the identification of the bodies.

There has been some tendency to attribute the failure to hold an inquest to the fact that Mr. Moke was a member of the firm employed by the railroad company to look after the dead, but this is denied by the Coroner's friends. Under an enactment of the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders, the County Physician decides in each case whether or no an inquest is necessary, and in holding or not holding an inquest the Coroner acts under orders from the County Physician.

Dr. Long, the County Physician, was of the opinion that no inquest was needed to determine the causes of the death of the victims of the wreck. As for the causes of the accident, he stated that an investigation is to be made by the criminal official of the county, Prosecutor John S. Voorhees.

Dr. Long yesterday afternoon placed the result of his investigation in the hands of the Prosecutor. Mr. Voorhees said that he and the county physician would conduct a searching investigation into the causes of the disaster, with a view to laying the matter before the next Grand Jury in case the results of the investigation warranted such a course. He and Dr. Long went to the scene of the wreck yesterday afternoon and evening. This is the second visit the Prosecutor has made to the place. He was one of the first on the scene Monday afternoon.

Mr. Voorhees states that the county's investigation will be set on foot as soon as a conference can be had with the officials of the road. Every one having any knowledge of the way in which trains were being run will be called upon for testimony. "In case gross carelessness of any official or employe of the road is shown," he said, "I shall endeavor to secure the indictment of the person or persons guilty of it. Of course if no such carelessness can be shown, the only way in which the company can be made responsible is as defendant in civil proceedings.

Steam Plug Blew Out.

A plug in one of the steam pipes in the First National Bank building blew out yesterday and caused the janitor and Justice Mosher, whose office is directly below, considerable trouble. The plug could not be found, and until the steam was turned off, the water was pouring out at a great rate, and ran through the floor spotting the ceiling below.

A Postage Adder.

A novel system of paying postage without the use of postage stamps has been adopted by the German government. The postal authorities rent to persons or firms doing a large mail business a machine called a postage adder, which stamps an official mark on all letters passed through it and registers the amount of postage due. It works in much the same way as a gas meter. It stamps on the letter the date and hour and amount of postage required. The stamping of an envelope takes less than two seconds, or at the rate of two thousand per hour. The new apparatus is designed especially to save labor and time to large firms or to persons who have a large correspondence. An additional advantage is that it is not necessary to cancel the postmark of the postage adder at the post office. On consulting the adder, the postage due is seen at a glance, and when the amount is paid there is no further trouble.—Golden Days.

Pity for the Dog, Not the Man.

In a well known street in London a beggar was often seen plodding about with a small dog. The dog was held by a piece of chain and had round his neck a placard with "Pity the blind," in large letters. Mr. T—, passing one day, dropped a sixpence into the man's outstreched hand. "Hellos!" he cried, as he was turning away, "was that a half-sovereign I gave you?"

"No, sir—no," answered the beggar; "only sixpence."

"So," said Mr. T—, "you are not blind, then, after all?"

"Bless you, sir, no!" he replied. "You see, the placard refers to the dog. He's blind—not me!"—Tit-Bits.

Surprise for a Chicago Tourist.

The stocky man with the cinnamon-colored beard, who was enjoying his first view of a Spanish bull fight, turned to the guide and interpreter whom he had hired by the day to show him the sights and said:

"Who is that chap that sticks the animal with the sword and kills him?"

"Ze toreador," replied the guide.

"How much does he make a day at such work?"

"Oh, feefty—seexty dolls."

"Great Scott!" I've got men in my racking house in the United States that can do that trick as well as he can, and they're mighty glad to get $30 a week!"—Chicago Tribune.

Always Under a Flag.

The Augusta, Ga., News tells of a woman in that city who has never been from under the Confederate flag since it became her flag. Whether walking, eating or sleeping, there is always a Confederate flag over her head. While walking on the streets there is always a flag in her hat, and no matter how many hats or bonnets she has, there is always to be found a flag pinned on the inside of the crown. On the headpost of her bed is s[illegible] fastened a large flag of the [illegible]ate States. The flag is as [illegible] for her as three meals a d[illegible] says she has never surrender[illegible] never will.

TRACING THE BLAME FOR THE DISASTER

Railroad Officials Visited Muhlenberg Hospital Yesterday.

STATEMENTS WERE TAKEN.

ALL INJURED WILL RECOVER, IT IS BELIEVED.

Rick's Condition Is Som what Improved Although Very Serious—The Borreca Child May Recover After All—Statements Regarding the Wreck Made By Injured Ones at Hospital.

Every vestige of the wreck at the scene of the Lehigh Valley Railroad disaster Monday afternoon, near West Dunellen, has disappeared. The bodies of the victims who met death at that terrible catastrohpe have been consigned to their final resting places, while the injured all seem on the way to recovery. The difficult work of placing the blame where it belongs is now in progress.

Yesterday afternoon, Superintendent Spriggs and several of the other officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad visited the Muhlenberg Hospital and took the statements of the two engineers who are confined there by their injuries. Engineer Rick, of the Bound Brook local, was not in condition to do much talking. In fact, it was first believed that he could not live long. He has rallied since, however, and was just able to say that he had received orders to go on and would be able to clear himself later. Engineer Pendergast was much improved and told the officials that he had preserved the message that would clear him.

The two firemen were interviewed by the railroad officials and their statements taken. Some of the other injured gave short statements. The physicians would not allow any lengthy interviews for fear of retarding the patients' recovery.

The prospects are very bright at present that all the injured will recover. Engineer Rick is resting much easier than he was and the physicians are quite hopeful. They had believed that he could not live twenty-four hours longer. Despite the fractured skull, there is a decided improvement noted in the condition of little Henry John Borreca, the four months old child whose life was at first despaired of. It is now the impression that the child may recover.

The other patients are all improved and will undoubtedly recover in time, although it may be two months before some will be able to leave the hospital.

At Shamokin, Pa., yesterday the funerals of Rufus and Henry Weikel and Warren Merkel were held simultaneously. They were all victims of the wreck. Business through that town was generally suspended. A large crowd was present at the funeral.

Miss May Schminskey, the young woman who was killed while eloping with Jacob Joseph, Jr., will be buried Sunday. The body of young Joseph will be taken from Shamokin to Mananoy City for burial.

SLEPT ON INTO ETERNAL LIFE.

Quiet and Peaceful Death of Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw.

Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw, mother of Mrs. A. L. Force, died last evening at her home, 82 Duer street, after a short illness with paralysis. She was around her home as usual until Monday evening, when she was prostrated to the bed from which she never arose. She was perfectly conscious and a great sufferer until about 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Then she fell into a stupor from which she never aroused. All that medical skill and good nursing could do was done for her, but the fatal stroke came yesterday afternoon and she quietly slept away into the joys of Heaven about 9 o'clock.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Force, two sons, George and Robert, survive her. The latter reside in Newark. Mrs. Bradshaw was a member of Trinity Reformed church, which she regularly attended until too infirm to do so. She was a very active worker in the church as long as she was able to be, and worked very hard to assist in cancelling the mortgage debt which was paid off several years ago.

Her funeral service will occur from her late residence Monday afternoon next at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Schenck officiating.

Mrs. Bradshaw was born in England, but came to this country when a mere child. She has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Force, for twenty-one years.

Keeping Tramps.

The Board of Freeholders have given the Sheriff of Somerset county permission to keep tramps over night at 25 cents a head.

AIMS AND ASPIRATIONS.

THAT IS WHAT SHOULD BE CONSIDERED BY MEN IN LIFE.

Inspiring Points Made by Rev. W. R. Richards in His Talk About the Pharisee and Sinner Who Went Up to Temple.

The union evangelistic meetings were continued again last night in the First Presbyterian church. The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Richards, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., took charge of the after meeting. A chorus choir, led by L. H. Biglow, Jr., assisted in the singing, and there was more interest manifested last night in the meeting than before.

The Scripture lesson was the story from John's Gospel about the two men who went up into the temple to pray—the Pharisee and the sinner. This was read by Rev. C. E. Herring. Rev. Dr. Richards chose that story for his theme.

To illustrate the wide difference in the careers of men, he spoke of the different paths that two children, born amid the same surroundings, brought up with the same advantages and given the same opportunities, will tread. One will achieve honor and fortune; the other may end on the gollows. But the real interest to men, the speaker said, are not their conditions in life, but their aim and aspirations.

The two men in the parable seemed to go up into the temple of God for the same purpose, but one went there to insult the Almighty; the other to offer up his humble prayer.

But those self-righteous men did not die with the Pharisee of old. They are in the church of God today. The publican also is in the church today. He comes up to ask God for forgiveness, and goes home with the consciousness of a blessing from Him.

There are only two men spoken of in the parable, said the speaker. They represent the two classes, those who are saved and those who are lost. In closing Dr. Richards urged all present, who were yet undecided which of the two classes he or she belonged to, to make up their minds then and there, for, he said, there was no middle ground to stand upon.

LIKE MAYOR WILSON.

DEMOCRATS WILL PROBABLY RENOMINATE HIM AGAIN.

Leaders in Both Parties Are Showing Political Activity as the Time for Borough Election Approaches.

At the spring election to be held in North Plainfield in March at which time the Mayor and three Councilmen are to be retired and others elected to take their places.

The party managers are already conferring with the object in view of naming candidates for the places that will be vacated. Several active Republicans have been named as possible candidates for the Mayorality by their friends, although there is no certainty yet as to who will receive the nomination. A. V. D. Honeyman, H. E. Needham, Charles Place and others have been prominently mentioned in this connection. Thus far the Democrats have not any one in mind except the present incumbent, Mayor John F. Wilson.

It will be remembered that Col. Wilson was spoken of as a probable Democratic candidate for Governor last fall. He stands high in his party's esteem and has made a good record during his administration.

The retiring Councilman are Messrs. McLoughlin, Woolston and Ball. Another matter of interest will be the disposition of the question of consolidation which will come up at the spring election. It will be presented to the people for consideration, but what form it will take has not yet been determined.

Lecture on Land of Shakespeare.

Plainfield ispromised a treat in the lecture which Prof. Smyth will deliver Monday evening next under the auspices of the Young Ladies Mission Band of the Presbyterian church. The lecture, "The Land of Shakespeare," will be illustrated by stereopticon views from Prof. Smyth's own photographs taken in Warwickshire. Tickets may be obtained in drug store.

To Finish the Parsonage.

On the evening of January 24th, an entertainment will be given in Grace M. E. church to secure money to furnish the new parsonage. Alfred E. Pearsall and Miss Marie Budworth, of Westfield, will appear and entertain the audience.

New Freight Cars.

The C. R. R. of N. J., has placed orders for 4,000 new freight cars of a heavier pattern and larger capacity than those in use at present, and at a cost of $2,000,000. They have recently broken up 15,000 old freight cars.

200 BUILDINGS TO BE MOVED ON COUNTY ROAD.

JERSEY CITY MAN GETS CONTRACT.

Engineering Feat Necessitated by the Construction of the New Union County Boulevard.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Jersey City, Jan. 13—In connection with the construction of the new boulevard between Elizabeth and Plainfield, W. K. Clyne, of this city, has been appointed by the Union County Board of Freeholders the official expert on the moving of about 200 residences now standing directly in the line of the proposed improvement. The buildings to be moved are for the most part frame, but several substantial brick structures will have to be dealt with. According to the present plans the buildings will, on an average, require to be moved about eighty feet.

About 130 skilled men will be employed in the undertaking, and work will begun simultaneously in the centre and at both ends, operating from the centre to each end. Each building will be raised bodily from its foundations by jackscrews, then placed upon prepared ways and so shifted to its new location.

The entire work will be supervised by Mr. Clyne. His new invention for equalizing the strain the moment it is applied will be used in the present instance. The undertaking is causing considerable interest in engineering circles on account of the new method to be employed. Should it prove a success it will be applied to the removal of a very large hotel at Far Rockaway, L. I.

The work of removing the 200 dwellings on the line of the new boulevard must be completed by June 1st next.

Tramp Almost Frozen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, January 13.—A couple of tramps who have been making their headquarters in the woods near South Cranford were driven out by the cold Tuesday night. They tried to make their way to the Italian lodging house in this place, but were so chilled that they could not get there, and were found by George Morris about 10 o'clock beside the road, between here and Lennox. They were trying to shelter themselves with some branches they had succeeded in breaking from a cedar tree. Morris took them in his wagon to the Italian's house. Their hands and ears were badly frozen.

Relative of Conductor Price.

Conductor Leon Price, of the Bound Brook local train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad that collided with the Hazelton express last Monday, is a relative of Mrs. John H. Ross, of Park place. Mr. Price is now at Bound Brook under treatment for injuries received, and Mrs. Ross called on him yesterday.

GET NOTHING TILL THEY HAVE EARNED IT.

New Proposition for the Establishment of Silk Mill.

STOCKHOLDERS ACCEPT IT.

THE COMPANY WILL BE INCORPORATED NEXT MONDAY.

$10,000 Worth of Stock to be Issued, One-third of Which Will Remain in the Treasury Until the Profits Reach $10,000 and Then the Promoters Will Own the One-third—Will Receive $25 Per Week.

Messrs. Young and Bullock, the two Paterson silk men who have been working among the business men here with the idea of organizing a silk mill company, met several of the subscribers last night in the Board of Trade rooms, and came to a full understanding with them in regard to the plans under which the two men and the new company are to act. Many of the members of the company did not fully understand just what agreement the two promoters would be willing to make. Some dissatisfaction was expressed at the last meeting with the original plan submitted, so last night another proposition was made and accepted.

It is that the new company issue $10,000 worth of stock. Two-thirds of that will be subscribed for by the incorporators, and one-third left in the treasury. When the earnings on the $10,000 are $10,000, the earnings will be divided into thirds, one-third of which will go to the two men, Young and Bullock. In this way Young and Bullock cannot draw out their share until the earnings equal the capital stock, which, they claim, will be in three or four years. All this time they will be drawing the salary of $25 a week.

Already $4,000 worth of the $6,666 worth of shares have been subscribed for. The certificate of incorporation has been received, and the names of the subscribers are being placed on it as fast as possible. They expect to file it and be incorporated by Monday, then they will meet and elect their directors who in turn will elect officers. There will probably be five directors on the board.

There Will be Silence in the Court.

(Special to The Daily Press)

New Brunswick, Jan. 12.—Two deaf and dumb persons are the principals in a breach of promise case which is set down for January 18th. The complainant is Annie Adams, of Metuchen, and the defendant is S. Harry Riggs, of Burlington. An interpreter of the language of deaf mutes will be present to explain their testimony to the Court.

FARMER AND HORSE FELL INTO DEEP HOLE.

PLIGHT OF SCOTCH PLAINS FARMER.

Voss Failed to Notice That the Earth Had Been Removed Beneath Car Tracks in Irvington.

John Voss, a farmer of Scotch Plains, met with a peculiar accident while driving along Springfield avenue, Irvington, Wednesday night. His horse fell into an excavation near Washington avenue and Voss was thrown into a brook nearby. He escaped serious injury, although rendered unconscious for a time.

Voss had been to Newark and was driving up Springfield avenue on the west bound car track. He failed to notice a large excavation which has been made for the new county bridge which is being built over Skinkle Brook, near Washington avenue.

He drove directly over the railroad ties which support the trolley track over the brook and excavation.

The horse was going at a fair rate of speed, and had proceeded fully seven feet across the ties, stepping from one to another, when it fell between the track supports. The collar of the harness caught on one of the ties and the horse was suspended until cut down later.

Ropes and lanterns were procured from the nearby houses and Joseph Ryan then fastened a rope about Voss's body. The farmer was hauled to the ground.

The harness was then cut. The horse, which by this time was gasping for breath, was allowed to fall to the bottom.

When an attempt was made to get the horse out of the excavation, it was found that the animal had become wedged between a large water pipe that was about three feet above the bottom of brook. It was necessary to dig the earth from around the animal in order to fasten ropes about it. A shed, which contained the tools used by the workmen in making the excavation, was broken open and willing hands went to work to release the animal. It was fully an hour, however, before the horse was raised to the street by means of ropes and planks. It was cut it several places, but did not seem to be badly injured.

Voss went to his home last night.

An Injured Junior.

Arthur Tregembo, of Shenandoah, Pa., one of the injured victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck, who is detained at the hospital, is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and is being looked after by Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. He is also a volunteer of the late war.

To Brighten the Pulpit.

Mrs. W. B. Lowry, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is soliciting money from the members with which to purchase artificial flowers for the pulpit.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

HOLDER-MILLIGAN NUPTIALS CELEBRATED YESTERDAY.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Performed the Ceremony—The Couple Were Unaccompanied—Wedding Trip to Washington.

Yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride, No. 419 West Fourth street, took place the marriage of Miss Ella Pearson Milligan, daughter of Mrs. Esther L. Milligan, and Hubert Nevius Holder, son of John Holder, of Westervelt avenue. The wedding was a quiet one and was attended by only the immediate families of the contracting parties.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, who, thirty years ago, performed the wedding ceremony when the bride's mother was married.

In the parlor where the marriage took place the decorations consisted chiefly of beautiful palms banked up in one corner of the room There were also similar decorations in the dining room, where a wedding dinner was served after the marriage.

The bride wore a dark blue traveling gown trimmed with dark blue velvet, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. A feature of the bride's wedding gown was the point lace collar worn. This collar was worn by the bride's mother when she was married thirty years ago.

The bride and groom were unattended, and following congratulations and the wedding dinner, they left the city for Washington, where they will spend the honeymoon. On their return they will reside at 419 West Fourth street.

The bride was employed for a number of years at Edward White's dry goods store, and her companions remembered her nicely in presenting her with a handsome buffet. There was also a large combination desk and book case, the gift of the groom's parents. Included in the presents was glassware, silverware, furniture, and many useful articles that give strong evidence of the popularity of the bride and groom in a large circle of friends and acquaintenances. The groom is engaged in the contracting business, and was formerly associated with Sheriff Kirk. He and his wife have the best wishes of their many friends for a prosperous and happy journey through life.

STREET WORK FOR YEAR

PLANS BEING MADE BY CITY OFFICIALS IN CHARGE.

Notices to Lay New Sidewalks Will Be Served on Many Property Owners—Park Avenue Storm Sewer Discussed.

A meeting of the street committee was held last night and the work to be done on the streets during the coming year was thoroughly discussed. It is so early yet that nothing can be attempted for a couple of months, and more explicit plans will be made before work is begun.

Street Commissioner Gavett presented quite a batch of flagging notices, copies of which have been sent to people to which no heed was paid. They were not complied with last year and will be taken up again in the spring. The properties are principally on East Second and Third streets, West Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets. A few pieces of curbing that have been neglected will be ordered laid.

The needs of the various streets were discussed and it was decided to begin early and take steps towards getting the Park avenue storm sewer ready. The contract work on the macadamizing of Franklin place from Fifth street to LaGrande avenue, will also be pushed. This work is to be done by assessments, an ordinance to that effect having been passed late last fall.

A Library Party.

Mrs. Frank Bowley, of 32 Sycamore avenue, will, this evening, give a "Library Party" at her home for the benefit of the Church of the Redeemer. A large number of invitations have been sent out and every person attending is supposed to represent the title of a book in some manner or method of dress. Prizes for the best representations will be given. The first prize will be a chocolate layer cake, and the second prize will be a box of Huyler's best candy. The booby prizes will be candy canes.

Club to be Incorporated.

A meeting of the Neapolitan Social and Athletic Club was held last night to reorganize for some good hard work this winter. Officers were elected as follows: President, William Osborne; secretary, William Parker; treasurer, George Henderson; steward, Ferman Sharp. There are about 50 members of the club now, and City Judge Runyon is getting out a certificate of incorporation for them.

PLAINFIELD SOCIETY RECEIVES A SURPRISE.

Unexpected Marriage of Percy H. Stewart.

WERE MARRIED IN FLORIDA.

HE WAS ENGAGED TO MISS COCHRAN TWO YEARS AGO.

Then the Engagement Was Broken and the Society World Wondered Why—Illness in the Cochran Family Sent Them South—Mr. Stewart Left Town Without Any Announcement of His Marriage.

The announcement in yesterday's Daily Press of the marriage of Percy H. Stewart, of West Seventh street, to Miss Elinor Cochran, of New York, caused general surprise in local society circles. The news came entirely unexpected to even the members of Mr. Stewart's own family circle in this city. The only facts known here were contained in a telegram that came yesterday announcing the marriage.

Miss Cochran is the daughter of wealthy parents who lived at Yonkers, N. Y. She is a bright, vivacious girl, popular in society and with many friends in this city where she has visited. Mr. Stewart's attentions were quite pronounced two years ago and the engagement that followed was generally expected. A year and a half ago, however, the engagement was broken without explanation and the friends were left to guess what the trouble was.

Mr. Stewart is a popular young man in this city where he has a host of friends. He frequently went out in society but took no prominent part in its functions. He lived with his father on West Seventh street. A few days ago he left Plainfield. No particular importance was attached to the fact.

There has been illness in the Cochran family and so they went south this winter to Jacksonville, Fla., to avoid the rigorous winter of this section. Now comes the announcement of the marriage of the young people without any of the details. The return of the young man and his bride is awaited with interest.

VISITORS WERE WINNERS.

Elizabethport T. A. B. Won From Plainfield Catholic Club.

Last evening the famous T. A. B. bowling team from Elizabethport came to Plainfield and went up against the team from the Plainfield Catholic Club. Before they left town they carried off the honors and went home with them. The home team was discouraged over their defeat, for on the previous evening in practice large scores were made and every man felt sure of victory in the match game. They were doomed to defeat and there was not a man on the team that could turn the tide. The team is not wholly discouraged, however, for they hope to retrieve lost honors at no distant day. Below will be found the scores of the game:

MORE CARRIERS PROMISED.

Postoffice Department Says that Plainfield Will Get Additions.

T. W. Morrison wrote to Congressman Howell sometime ago with reference to Plainfield securing more letter carriers, and last night Mr. Morrison received a letter from the Congressman, of which the following is an extract:

"With reference to the lack of carriers in North Plainfield I would say that I have been to the Postoffice department regarding this matter and was informed that more carriers would be allotted to Plainfield with the beginning of the new fiscal year in July next. The disposition of the carriers will rest with the postmaster, and if he is seen I have no doubt but that he will make a fair apportionment so that North Plainfield will have its share. Should this not be done I can take up the matter with the Postoffice Department again if advised."

Going Out of Her Teens.

Last evening Miss Katheryn Deike, of Grove street, entertained a number of her friends in honor of the celebration of the nineteenth anniversary of her birthday. The evening was pleasantly passed in playing all kinds of games and in a social way. During the evening refreshments were served and at a late hour the guests departed wishing the hostess many happy returns of the day.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION
THE DAILY PRESS PROVIDES IT.
SPARE MOMENTS MADE TO COUNT.

THE DAILY PRESS has perfected arrangements with the Plainfield Business College and the Gregg School of Stenography, of Plainfield, whereby complete scholarships in each institution have been placed at its disposal These scholarships will be awarded to the persons securing the highest number of new subscribers to The Daily Press within the time prescribed and under the rules printed below. The scholarship in the Plainfield Business College will go to the person securing the highest number of subscribers, and the scholarship in the Gregg School of Stenography to the one securing the second-highest number of new subscribers.

A consolation prize of a handsome-bound International Webster Dictionary, with complete reference index, will be given to the third highest standing contestant.

Read the following rules carefully, and then jump in and try to win:

1.—The first prize shall be given to the person securing the greatest number of bonafide new subscribers to The Daily Press between 8 o'clock the morning of Monday, January 9th, 1899, and 6 o'clock the evening of Monday, March 6th, 1899. The second and third prizes will be awarded to the person who secure respectively the second and third largest number of new subscribers between the dates mentioned above.

2.—Any subscriber secured by any contestant for the prizes who fails to take the paper for at least four consecutive weeks following the date of the commencement for such new subscription, will not be counted in the contest.

3.—Any subscribers whose names are now on our subscription list when the contest begins and are subsequently ordered off to be handed in later during the time of the contest by any of the contestants, shall not be counted.

4.—All names of new subscribers, secured by the contestants, shall be sent to C. F. Stout, circulation manager of The Daily Press, preferrably on regular subscription blanks, which can be obtained upon personal or written application at the business office.

5.—The standing of the various contestants will be announced in The Daily Press, Monday, April 3d, 1899, four weeks after the close of the contest in order that all the stipulations of the contest may have been complied with.

This contest is not confined to Plainfield and North Plainfield alone but is open to Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Dunellen, New Market, and, in fact, any place where there are young people who will be glad of this opportunity to utilize their spare moments in such an advantageous manner.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

CALLED MILES A LIAR

Gen. Eagan Before the War Investigating Committee.

A VIGOROUS ARRAIGNMENT

Pays His Respects to the Yellow Journals and With Tears in His Eyes Said the Major-General Commanding Should be Drummed Out of Army and Barred by Every Club.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--Commissary General Eagan, in the course of his testimony before the war investigating committee, called Major General Miles, commanding the army, "a liar, who lied in his throat, lied in his heart, lied in every part of his body; who perpetrated a gross scandal, and who should be drummed out of the service and imprisoned and should be avoided by every honest man and barred by every club."

He characterized his interviews as "filth."

General Eagan had been recalled to answer regarding the charges of General Miles that "embalmed" and processed beef was furnished to the troops on the field.

General Eagan had prepared a typewritten statement covering this side of the case and was allowed to read it. General Eagan referred to the fact that General Miles refused to be sworn and said he was the only one of five hundred witnesses who had so refused. General Eagan said that he preferred to be sworn.

General Eagan began by calling attention to General Miles's appointment of Major John D. Black, a civilian, as his chief of staff, and said this was largely responsible for the trouble that followed.

He said that Major Black had been furnished five thousand dollars before starting for Porto Rico, had apparently not known enough to provide himself with a check book and had not left his signature with the secretary of the treasury nor made any other preparation for availing himself of the funds at his command.

There were experienced disbursing officers in the island who had in the aggregate over six hundred thousand dollars in their possession, and yet General Miles complained that there were no paymasters in the island so that the soldiers had no money with which to buy food for themselves. General Miles called on the department to put fifty thousand dollars more in the hands of Major Black, and this General Eagan declined to do, putting ten thousand dollars to Major Black's credit in New York.

Papers Disappeared.

General Eagan referrerd to the mysterious manner in which papers disappeared from the files of the war department. He said that while General Miles was at Tampa he wired to the commissary general to know what stores and supplies were on hand at Tampa and some other point. General Eagan replied in the usual way. Though at that time the railroad tracks at Tampa were piled with millions of rations, General Eagan said he was astonished the following morning to see in the reports of certain papers that General Miles had severely reprimanded the commissary general, the chief of ordnance and the quartermaster general for the unprepared condition of their respective departments.

General Miles had no right in law to deliver such a reprimand, and witness at once incloised the clipping to the adjutant general's office, requesting an inquiry as to the authenticity of the report.

No such reprimand was ever received by him and the general commanding had taken no notice of his inquiry nor even taken the trouble since then to declare the unauthorized character of the press statements.

It was such indifference as that which gave license to the yellow journalistic knaves who had misrepresented and hounded government officials throughout the war.

General Eagan subsequently had tried to get his letter of inquiry and press clipping from the adjutant general's office, but it was nowhere to be found.

"In this interview he lied again. He should be characterized as the most prodigious liar of the nineteenth century. The statements are filth and only such filth as would appear in the New York Journal. I beg the pardon of the commission for any reference to this sheet, but we are dealing with a filthy matter. I would say that the proprietors of the New York Journal, New York World and New York Herald should be indicted and tried for treason for their conduct in this war."

General Eagan referred to General Miles's testimony that he had "telegraphed the department from Porto Rico for complete and proper rations," and said that if the commissary general's office received any such message he should have considered it the request of a "very ignorant and ill-informed person."

Continuing, General Eagan, referring to General Miles's expressed preference for native beef, of which he said there was plenty, asserted that there were no cattle whatever in the neighborhood of Santiago. The native beef that General Miles referred to, General Eagan characterized as stags, runts, bulls and overworked cattle. The use of such animals the department never would allow.

General Eagan, quoting General Miles's allegations that in his judgment there was some serious defect in the refrigerated and canned beef, said General Miles would not say this was anything more than his judgment.

General Eagan became excited as he referred to General Miles, and the tears came into his eyes when he remarked, regarding the statement of General Miles that Canned meat was furnished for experiment:

The Lie Passed.

"He lies! He lies in every hair of his head! He lies wilfully, maliciously. If he lies, and I say he does, he should be drummed out of the army and incarcerated in prison. This statement is an absolute falsehood a gross libel, and he should be held to account for it.'

"Whoever," said General Eagan, "calls it embalmed beef is a liar."

Citing the reports submitted by Gen. Miles in corroboration of his charges, General Eagan submitted whether or not his course of securing these reports would not be construed as seeking adverse reports.

"General Miles was asked by your committee how tinned fresh beef became a part of the army ration. His answer is: 'You had better ask the secretary of war or the commissary general. I think they can tell you. I know it was sent to the army as food and the pretence is that it was sent as an experiment.'

"General Miles, in saying that this food was sent to the army as "a pretense for experiment,' says that which implies corruption, which ninety-nine out of every hundred people will understand to mean corruption, because it was 'a pretense of experiment,' he says, not even giving credit to me for furnishing it as an experiment, but that I furnished it under the 'pretense of an experiment.'

"This is a serious charge and should not be made by any man lightly, nor without ample evidence to support it. Taking the statement in the sense that was probably intended, the sense that will be accepted by the country at large, the sense that already the press, almost wholly, of the United States has accepted it--indeed, some of that press because of it called for my dismissal from the army and my court-martial, I answer that it was not furnished under the pretense of experiment, nor even as an experiment, and when General Miles charges that it was furnished as 'a pretense of experiment,' he lies in his throat, he lies in his heart, he lies in every hair of his head and every pore of his body; he lies wilfully deliberately intentionally and maliciously.

"If his statement is true that this was furnished under 'pretense of an experiment' then I should be drummed out of the army and incarcerated in state prison. If his statement is false, as I assert it to be, then he should be drummed out of the service and incarcerated in prison, with other libellers. His statement is a scandalous libel, reflecting upon the honor of every officer in the department who has contracted for or purchased this meat, and especially and particularly on the commissary general--myself. In denouncing General Miles as a liar when he makes this statement I wish to make it as emphatic and as course as the statement itself.

"I wish to force the lie back into his throat covered with the contents of a camp latrine. I wish to brand it as a falsehood of whole cloth, without a particle of truth to sustain it, and unless he can prove his statement he should be denounced by every honest man, barred from the clubs barred from the society of decent people, and so ostracised that the street bootblack would not condescend to speak to him, for he has fouled his own nest, he has aspersed the honor of a brother officer without a particle of evidence or fact to sustain in any degree his scandalous, libelous, malicious falsehood, viz.: That this beef or anything whatever was furnished the army under 'pretense of experiment.'

In conclusion General Eagan said: "If I have used harsh language it is because of the falsehoods and the charges which, if true, would call for my dismissal from the army in disgrace, and because it is necessary to call a spade a spade.

"I wish to say in conclusion that either General Miles or I should be dismissed from the army. Either he is right or I am right. If he is right and can prove his statements I should be put out of the army. If I am right and he cannot prove his statements, then he should be put out of the army."

MILES WILL IGNORE EAGAN.

Says U. S. Uniform should Teach Instincts of a Gentleman.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--General Miles was seen at his handsome new home in N street Northwest. He was placid and seemingly not disturbed by the onslaught made upon him yesterday by Commissary General Eagan. In reply to an inquiry as to what course he intended to pursue toward General Eagan he smiled and said:

"What course should a gentleman and the general of the army pursue toward a man who uses language fit only for the slums. I shall simply pursue my usual avocations and pay no attention to one who seems to forget that he wears the uniform of the United States army and that that dignity should carry with it the instincts of a gentleman. If the secretary of war chooses to take cognizance of General Eagan's language, well and good. I certainly shall not do so.

"This is not the first time that General Eagan has been in trouble. Not many years since he was court martialed for an offense committed as a disbursing officer of the government The sentence that he received, however, was so light that it was overruled, and that was the last of it. He was in trouble also on another occasion, while a commissary of subsistence.

"I have not volunteered in the controversy going on over the beef furnished the army in the Spanish-American war. I was asked to go before the investigating committee and did so. Being before the committee I felt it my duty to state facts as I understood them and to furnish such corroborative evidence of my statements as I had at hand.

"Let it be borne in mind by the country that out of the army of 325,000 men enlisted in the late war with Spain only fifty-two thousand saw actual service. The remainder never left the camps.

"Governor Roosevelt writes me that the steamer that carried his men to Cuba also carried some of the embalmed beef, and that the stench of it so filled the ship that it nauseated the men. The gentleman mentioned as being a resident of Philadelphia, writes me that he has a can of the beef furnished by Commissary General Eagan and that if the investigating committee desires to examine it he will bring or send it. The commander of the Brooklyn troop will also be glad, he says, to tell what he knows of the subject in controversy.

"It is remarkable that during this entire investigation every one seems to have been called except the privates who were compelled to eat this embalmed beef. Hundreds of these men can be found who would be willing to be heard, and I am satisfied that they would tell the truth and nothing but the truth."

OUR POSSESSIONS EAST

Gen. Otis Says Conditions Are Improved at Manila.

NATIVES ARE RETURNING.

Feeling of Security Stronger Among the Natives Who Are Returning to Manila --City Quiet and Business Active--Iloilo Situation Also Thought to be Less Critical.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--The war department made public yesterday this dispatch from General Otis at Manila which was received early in the morning:

"Conditions apparently improving. Citizens feel more secure. Many natives returning. The city quiet and business active. OTIS.

Several other dispatches from General Otis received at the war department are of the general tenor of the brief message made public by the department. In one of these General Otis expresses the belief that if the status quo is maintained for a few days longer all danger of a conflict will be averted.

This bit of intelligence has brought more comfort to the officers than anything else from General Otis. The belief was entertained with reference to the conditions at Manila and in the island of Luzon, but the military authorities have interpreted it as having a general application, with quite as much bearing on the situation at Iloilo as on that at the capital of the islands.

The advices from General Otis have strengthened the view of the administration that Aguinaldo is the moving spirit in all the mischief that has been caused among the Filipinos, and that with the ambitious young chieftain removed from contact with his people, there would be a speedy acquiescence by the insurgents in the desires of the United States.

Some of the dispatches from General Otis related to supplies which he desires. Despite his optimistic feeling concerning the situation, he is taking no chances in dealing with any emergency, and wants many stores as soon as possible.

Brigadier General A. W. Greely, chief of the Signal Service, said yesterday that while he had not been officially advised of the name of the officer designated as press censor at Manila by General Otis, he was satisfied that it was Colonel Thompson, the chief signal officer on the staff of General Otis. Colonel Thompson is the senior officer of his corps at Manila, and has had considerable experience as a telegraph censor. He was the first military censor at Key West at the beginning of the war with Spain.

General Greely said it would not be necessary to establish a censorship at New York over cable messages to Manila. All cable dispatches for the Philippines must come through Manila, and the censor there can control everything. No cipher messages received at Manila for anybody except United States officers will be delivered.

The administration is not pleased with the actions of the Filipino junta in Washington, and this feeling has not improved since it became evident that Aguinaldo was assuming an attitude of active hostility toward this country.

Such an attitude on the part of the insurgent leader places the junta here in a position very similar to that of the former Spanish diplomats in Washington who lingered in Montreal after the breaking out of the war.

Future of the Filipinos.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--The declaration by Senator Foraker that he did not understand that anybody intended to deny the Filipinos, except temporarily, the right to establish a free republic, and that he knew the president had no such intention, has excited as much comment as if it were an entirely new proposition and placed the policy of the administration in a new light.

Senator Foraker is not usually looked upon as the mouthpiece of the president, but in this instance he has very clearly stated what some of the most earnest expansionists understood to be the attitude of Mr. McKinley, with respect to the treatment of the Filipinos.

One of the leading expansionists in the Senate, and a leader on the Republican side, said yesterday that he had never understood the president to occupy any other attitude than one consistent with the granting of independence to the Filipinos whenever they can establish a responsible and stable free government.

"It is not known now," he said, "to the president or to any one else what the Filipinos want, or whether it will be possible to establish a free republic there. This has all yet to be determined. If it shall prove that the Filipinos are capable of self government it will, I believe, be very gratifying to the president and to most of the men who are denominated expansionists. The first thing is to ratify the treaty. The next thing is to determine what is the best thing to be done, both for the Filipinos and ourselves, and then do it. It may be found that for a long time yet we shall have to hold possession of the whole group of islands, but the purpose to give the people a government of their own choice will not even then be abandoned."

Gen. Gomez's Travels

Remedios, Province of Santa Clara, Cuba, Jan. 13.--General Maximo Gomez has been enthusiastically feted in the towns he has visited in this vicinity.

At a breakfast at Caibarien, given him by the Spanish residents, General Gomez toasted President McKinley. General Gomez will probably go to Santa Clara, stopping at intermediate towns.

He is understood to be hurt because the United States government officials have not invited him to Havana.

Hotel Fire in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 13.--Fire did ten thousand dollars' damage to the Hotel Imperial yesterday morning. The guests were aroused and all managed to escape.

A consumptive patient, who made use of Ripans Tabules, found his weight increased but was made anxious because expectoration ceased, and feared on that account that harm would result, but on consulting a physician he learned that Ripans Tabules do not affect the conditions of the lungs in any material degree, but if they do so at all they have more tendency to favor expectoration rather than to suppress it. Consequently there is no reason why a consumptive should discontinue the use of Ripans Tabules because expectoration has ceased. Furthermore, in lung troubles an increase in weight is the best indication of improvement, and as the Tabules regulate the digestion they increase nutrition and are doing the very service required to produce best results.

A new style packet containing FIVE RIPANS TABULES is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (60 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (FIVE TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

CLARA BARTON HONORED.

Senate Begins the Consideration of the Peace Treaty in Executive Session.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--The Indian appropriation bill was reported from the committee on appropriations by Senator Allison, who gave notice that he would call it up for consideration to-day.

Mr. Hale, Republican of Maine, introduced a joint resolution authorizing Alberto Montoya of Colombia and Ricardo Yglesias of Costa Rica to be admitted to the Naval Academy at Annapolis; also authorizing the secretary of the navy to change from one to three years the terms of enlistment of men who enlisted in the navy for the war with Spain.

The change is to be made on the written request of the men.

The Senate insisted on its amendments to the District of Columbia appropriation bill and agreed to a conference.

The Senate joint resolution tendering the thanks of Congress to Clara Barton and the officers of the Red Cross Society for their humane and beneficent services, was reported upon and passed.

While it was pending the suggestion was made by Mr. Morgan, Democrat of Alabama, that, under a rule of the Senate, the women of the Red Cross would have a right to the floor, from the fact of having received the thanks of Congress, and Mr. Gray, Democrat of Delaware, suggested pleasantly:

"Well, we would not run away if they did come."

Half an hour was given to the calendar of private pension bills, when all of them, sixteen in number, were passed.

On motion of Mr. Davis of Minnesota the Senate then went into executive session for the consideration of the peace treaty with Spain.

The Subsidies Bill.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.-The Senate committee on commerce held an important hearing on Senator Hanna's bill for the encouragement of commerce by granting subsidies to American shipping.

Ex-Senator George F. Edmunds made the first statement of the day, explaining the bill at length, and the reasons for its introduction.

He said that the subsidies proposed were so small that capitalists could not afford to enter upon an enterprise simply for the sake of earning the subsidy, but could only do so largely on account of other considerations.

He urged the importance of having our own vessels, in case of a European war, saying that if, for instance, Great Britain and France, or Germany and France, or Germany and Russia, or any other two powers, one of which may be engaged in carrying American goods, should engage in a war, the situation would become very awkward. It would be especially so in case the exigencies of war should compel a transference of the business.

He contended that this could not be done under existing circumstances, and that we would thus be left without means of transporting our commerce.

Named by the President.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--The president has sent these nominations to the Senate:

Treasury--William J. Grant, collector of customs for the district of Cape Vincent, N. Y.

Postmasters--New York, Mary L. McRoberts, Tompkinsville; Davis G. Montross, Peekskill; George E. Johnson, North Tarrytown; Justus B. Abbott, Gouverneur; Frank R. Utter, Friendship; William B. Leroy, Cohoes; John D. Smith, Catskill; Bryant S. Palmer, Carmel; Andrew W. Craig, Camden; Theodore C. Fletcher, Babylon; H. R. Every, Athens.

New Jersey--Albert H. Bradshaw, Lakewood; Benjamin B. Ogden, Keyport; Adam Kamdle, Elmer; Marcus Mitchell, East Orange; Richard T. Beckett, Clayton.

PORTO RICO'S PRESENT NEEDS.

Father Thomas Sherman's Report of the Islands Condition.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--Assistant Secretary Melkeljohn made public yesterday, through the division of customs, and insular affairs, Father Thomas E. Sherman's very interesting and instructive report to General Brooke of his recent trip through the island of Porto Rico.

Father Sherman left San Juan on October 19 and visited Arecibo, Utuado and Lares, and from thence proceeded south to Adjuntas alone and unarmed, without witnessing any disorder.

Subsequently Father Sherman visited Coamo, Aybonito, Cayey, Caguas, Aguas, Buenas, Juncas and Humacio. All of these towns he found in perfect peace, and full of the sense of security.

Late in December, Father Sherman says, he visited the towns of Visques, Fajardo and Carolina, with the same result.

As far as his observations went, Father Sherman says that he found the people of Porto Rico gentle, docile and kindly, and that the Spaniards living there rejoice with their Porto Rican friends in the change of sovereignty.

The disorderly element is a very small fraction of the population of the island. There is some timidity expressed on the part of property holders, but this is largely due to the paternal system to which they have become accustomed.

Charged With Fraud.

New York, Jan. 13.--There was a sensational termination of the bankruptcy proceedings of James and Allan Macnaughton when just as recess was announced, the brothers were arrested on a charge of fraud, and subsequently held in $25,000 bail each by United States Commissioner Shields.

James Macnaughton was formerly president of the Tradesmen's National Bank and his brother Allan Macnaughton, former president of the wool exchange, was a director in the bank. The complaint on which the warrant for their arrest was issued was made by David H. Bates, president of the Thadesmen's National Bank.

Carnegie Buys Another Mill.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 13.--Andrew Carnegie has just bought the steel plate mill of the Bethlehem Iron Company. The price is said to be $1,000,000.

ANTI-QUAY MEN MEET

Forty-Three Senators and Members in Conference.

ALL SIGNED NEW PLEDGE.

John Wanamaker Decined to Have His Name Considered—Steering Committee Appointed and Adjournment Taken to Monday Evening When a Line of Action Will be Decided on.

Harrisburg, Jan. 13.--A conference of the Republican senators and members who refused to take part in a senatorial caucus until Senator Quay is acquitted of the conspiracy charges pending against him in the Philadelphia courts met yesterday.

Senator Flinn of Allegheny presided and made a short speech congratulating his colleagues on the growth of the movement against Quay.

He said there was no possibility of the senator's re-election and that there would be no wavering among the members of the legislature opposed to his candidacy.

A new pledge binding the signers not to vote for Senator Quay until he is acquitted was adopted and signed by the forty-three senators and members present.

A committee of ten senators and ten members was appointed as a steering committee, to act with the committee on procedure, to regulate the work of the organization.

Congressman John Dalzell of Pittsburg, Charles W. Stone of Warren, Colonel E. A. Irvin of Clearfield, Charles Tubbs of Tioga, J. F. Downing of Erie, Judge John Stewart of Franklin, and Colonel George F. Huff of Greensburg were named.

The name of John Wanamaker of Philadelphia was suggested, but at his request it was withdrawn.

The organization will meet again next Monday evening to agree upon a line of action on Tuesday, when the Senate and House will vote separately for senator.

Democrats Name Jenks.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 13.--George A. Jenks, the Democratic candidate for governor in the late campaign, is the choice of the Democratic senators and members for United States senator. He was nominated by acclamation.

Ex-Lieutenant Governor Chauncey F. Black of York was named by his friends, and polled fourteen votes to sixty-five for Jenks.

Before the result was announced Mr. Black's friends withdrew his name and moved that Mr. Jenks be made the nominee by acclamation.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the appointment of a steering committee to consist of two senators and five members, of which the chairmen of the Senate and House caucuses shall be members.

Mr. Creasey offered a resolution asking all Democratic members to pledge themselves to attend regularly all the joint conventions for the election of a United States senator and report at all times for the nominee.

The resolution was laid on the table.

Aldridge's Successor.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 13.--Governor Roosevelt has sent to the Senate the nomination of Colonel John N. Partridge of Brooklyn for the office of superintendent of public works.

Colonel Partridge's name was suggested by Seth Low and both elements of the Republicans gave approval--some Democrats also, among them St. Clair McKelway.

Employes of the street railway with which Colonel Partridge is connected sent a special petition of recommendation to the governor.

After these indorsements the appointment was decided upon because the governor is convinced that the man selected will have the best interests of the state as much at heart as the governor himself.

Yale's Presidency for W. L. Wilson.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 13.--A letter from a friend of William L. Wilson, formerly a member of Congress from this state, at one time president of the West Virginia University, later a cabinet officer, and now president of the Washington and Lee University, received yesterday by Professor C. H. Berkeley, who was one of Mr. Wilson's associates in the faculty of the West Virginia University, says that Mr. Wilson has been approached concerning the presidency of Yale College.

The letter says that he is to succeed Dwight, who leaves at the end of the school year.

Depew Will Wear Senatorial Toga.

Albany, Jan. 13.--Chauncey M. Depew will be the next United States senator from the state of New York. He will succeed Edward Murphy, Jr., on March 4 next, and then another victory for Republicanism in the Empire state will be effected.

Mr. Depew was made the unanimous choice for senator in the Republican joint caucus of both branches of the state legislature last night and when Senator Krum, chairman of the caucus, made the announcement, a roar of applause greeted it.

The legislature will elect Mr. Depew on next Wednesday and the Republican machine of course will prevail.

Mr. Dingley Continues to Improve.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.--The favorable change in Representative Dingley's condition continues, and this morning he is reported better, with the heretofore dangerous symptoms showing some abatement.

At eleven o'clock last night the following announcement was made by one of his sons:

"Mr. Dingley is resting quietly. His pulse is good. If no complications set in he will continue to improve."

Cervera Does Not Forget.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.--A box was received here yesterday by Lieutenant Commander E. K. Moore, direct from Madrid, Spain. The box was from Admiral Cervera, and contained several presents for friends here, including Mr. Moore and Admiral McNair.

The box had been held at the New York custom house for some days.

HOT FIGHT IN SUGAR PROBABLE.

The Trust Will Evidently Attempt to Crush the Arbuckles.

New York, Jan. 13.--Henry Havemeyer, president of the sugar trust, has just been given autocratic powers by his associates. He will conduct the fight against the trust's rivals as the fight was never conducted before. He has the power to expel any officer of the company for dereliction of duty. He has not only fifty million dollars, but twice that sum at his disposal to be used to crush the trust's opponents. At this moment he is the most talked about man in Wall street and he is going to show what brains and money can do when it comes to smashing rivals.

The trust claims that the Arbuckles frequently sell sugar at less than the cost of making it.

The Arbuckles deny this and say that there is a good margin of profit at the lowest price which they have ever reached.

Mr. Heike, an old employe of the American Sugar Refining Company, and formerly its auditor, in the absence of President Havemeyer, yesterday said:

"I cannot discuss the affairs of the company, but I will say that this talk of a war fund of fifty million dollars is all moonshine. There is no change in the sugar situation."

"Is the fight between your company and the Arbuckles to be continued?" he was asked.

"Well as to that, all there is to say is that they sell sugar, and so do we. It is true that sugar is selling at a figure as low as it ever was, but how long the price will be kept down I am unable to say."

On the Stock Exchange yesterday American Sugar sold at 126 at the opening, went to 126 1-4, fell off to 125, then went up a half point and later to 125 3-8.

Sharkey Willing to Meet Fits.

New York, Jan. 13.--Sharkey is willing to fight Fitzsimmons, although he would not object to another opportunity, with proper inducements, to "thrash that Corbett." Corbett is ready to meet the sailor.

When Sharkey read Fitzsimmons's statement demanding a fight, his first impulse was to at once cover Lanky Bob's $2,500 forfeit, but O'Rourke, his manager, would not allow it.

The latter said that Sharkey needed a rest, in view of his long spell of training in preparation for both Corbett and McCoy, but that in due time he would take the lanky Australian at his word.

"Sharkey wants to fight Fitzsimmons," said O'Rourke, "but he needs a brief rest. When Tom has had a rest he'll get after the Cornishman for keeps. He has already received a decision over Fitzsimmons, which, with his victories over Corbett and McCoy, entitles him to the heavyweight championship.

"In the meanwhile Fits could well devote his time to a match with either Corbett or McCoy."

Society's Co-operative Shop Fails.

New York, Jan. 13.--Society has stepped out from under the Ladies' Tailors' Co-operative Shop, which it planned to uphold with many thousands of dollars in subscription and patronage, and the whole affair has come clattering down.

It had been intended by society to aid the ladies' tailors in what it considered the most feasible way, by giving them plenty of work at good wages in wholesome workshops.

The strike of the tailors and their appeal for help had brought it about, and society was for a time highly enthusiastic over the idea of a co-operative shop.

The Ladies' Tailors' Union stipulated that all those working in the new shop should be approved by the union, that the cutter should receive wages of $25 a week, and the tailors $22 a week, and lastly that the cutter be not permitted to hold his place longer than one year.

Society looked upon this as an attempt to prevent the shop managers from employing such men as they chose, without regard to the union.

Fire in Dunmore, Pa.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 13.--Fire originating in Harrington's hotel, a large frame building at Dunmore, yesterday, destroyed that building, and then, communicating to Odd Fellows' Hall, a three-story brick structure, occupied by several secret organizations burned out its interior.

Little paraphernalia belonging to the societies was saved.

Harrington's family and all the hotel help were shut off from escape by the stairways and had to be rescued from upper windows.

Frozen plugs handicapped the firemen. The loss is $18,000, partly insured.

Rev. Tom Dixon to Quit.

New York, Jan. 13.--Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., has decided to abandon pulpit work and will resign the pastorate of the People's church next Sunday morning at the Grand Opera House.

There are rumors that the People's Church has not been prosperous for some time and the organiation may collapse when Mr. Dixon leaves.

He will make his home in Cape Charles, Va., where he has a summer residence.

Rev. Mr. Dixon has been regarded as the Talmage of New York.

Dr. Abbott's Successor.

Brooklyn, Jan. 3.--The members of Plymouth Church have heard the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, the young Chicago divine, who in all probability will soon fill the pulpit made famous by Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. Lyman Abbott.

On Monday night next the congregation will decide whether or not to call Dr. Hillis.

Dr. Hillis is said in his speech to resemble that of the late Phillips Brooks.

Big Battle in Arabia.

The Turkish troops stormed and captured the insurgent position at Shanel on November 28.

About four thousand insurgents and two thousand Turks were killed and

Nervous Dyspepsia

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicines. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are effected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of gas, and sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box from his pocket said 'Try Stuart's Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand." 19eod9

XMAS HAS GONE,
Maybe some of your teeth have, too. If it don't cost anything to find out all about them. Poor economy to buy dyspepsia medicine and go with poor or no teeth. The longer you neglect them the more trouble they'll cause you when they begin. The pain of having them put right is all a delusion. Free consultation invited.

Big Reward at Last.

This seems to be a great year in New York and Jersey for paying off long-standing debts in party politics. The selection of John Kean by the Republican legislators for the United States Senatorship comes as a final reward for the Sage of Urinso after many years of "turn-downs," both in conventions and at the polls. Yesterday the Republican members of the New York legislature named Chauncey M. Depew as their candidate for United States Senate, and, of course, that is equivalent to an election. Depew's name has been before the Republicans for two or three decades every time there has been a big office to be filled, but somehow he always failed to be in on the windup until this year. The value of the plum both are getting now is compensation for all their past disappointments and humiliations.

The Governor's Secretary.

The Elizabeth Daily Leader is authority for the statement that Editor Charles McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, will probably not be Governor-elect Voorhees's private secretary. The Leader fails to state the why and wherefore of such a decision on the Governor's part, but if the rumor is true pressure of other political claims is doubtless the cause of Editor McBride's failure to "get there." It has been largely through the splendid editorial efforts of the genial Elizabeth newspaperman that Voorhees has reached his present high place, and if Mr. McBride really wants political preferment it is probable that the Governor will see to it that his editorial friend gets it before all the good things are gone.

Poor Opinion of Justices of Peace.

The Asbury Park Press raises a loud voice against the Justice of the Peace system in New Jersey, and describes the steps for organization taken by the petty Dogberys as "about the nerviest move we have heard of in many a day." The Asbury Park brand of Justice of the Peace must be a particularly bad one, for The Press says: "Nine Justices out of ten are unworthy of the power which they now have over the common citizen. They are neither learned in the law nor selected because of any special fitness for the position. One does not have to go outside of Asbury Park and Neptune township to find absolute proof of the above assertion."

The New York Commercial, which speaks in sympathetic tones for all trusts, does not look at the agitation against the monster corporations in New Jersey as likely to amount to anything. It says there is no sentiment among the Republicans for a change in the laws relating to the incorporation of trusts, and significantly remarks that lawyers as a rule can be expected to oppose legislation curbing the formation of trusts, because the present laws and the natural inclination of capitalists to seek the State as a legal asylum constantly holds out the opportunity to legal

HOISTING OLD GLORY AT HAVANA.

At noon on Sunday, January 1, all Spanish flags were lowered from the staffs of the fortresses about Havana and Old Glory was run up in their stead. The scene at the governor general's palace was one long to be remembered by those who witnessed it. The flag staff was bare, the Spanish standard not being hoisted that morning. It was an impressive moment as the Stars and Stripes glided up the flag pole and unfolded before the gaze of the thousands who were looking on.

lights of getting big fees.

The sentence of Game Warden Tooker to ten years in State Prison on the conviction of manslaughter in killing an Italian boy who was violating the game laws, ought to prove a wholesome warning to the men clothed in authority not to be too free in the use of firearms. We have no doubt but that the sentence was deserved and just. In the trial of an officer of the law for any crime he has committed while doing public duty, the culprit is given the benefit of every doubt and even more. Tooker had that advantage in trying to clear himself of guilt, but he failed to do so.

It has been computed that if the United States continues to build up its navy upon the plan begun at the last session of Congress which involves an expenditure of about $30,000,000 a year for new ships, the cheapening in the cost of construction that could be effected in our shipyards through the passage of the bill now in Congress providing bounties and other compensations to American merchant ships, would reimburse the Government for every dollar it expended upon our merchant marine.

Because the excitement about the Lehigh Valley railroad disaster has died out do not think that the nurses at the Muhlenberg hospital are no longer handicapped in treating the large number of injured survivors. The good samaritans at the hospital are in need of many things that can only be secured through the generosity of the townspeople.

A bill has been introduced into the New York State Legislature providing for ninety-nine cent gas. The author must have worked in a department store once upon a time.

Borough politics commence to warm up notwithstanding the cold weather.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The new Mayor of Plainfield, in alluding to sewerage in his message, refers to the suit instituted by Mrs. Elias Milliken, for damages to her property through the proximity of the sewer beds, as one of the most important the city has had to defend in many years, and thinks it ought to be defended well "in order to avoid establishing a precedent for others to make similar claims for damages." He does not ask for its defense in accordance with the rights of the individual under the general law even, but assumes that any pecuniary damage the city of Plainfield might be called upon to pay to any of its citizens for damage to their property through a nuisance established and conducted by the city is of paramount importance. Under such a view the right guaranteed to the citizen by law is only secondary, and the court is appealed to through cupidity rather than that of justice.—Dunellen Call.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The famous Scotch comedian and humorist, Frame, will make his first appearance at Music Hall tonight and will undoubtedly be greeted by a well-filled house. He will be seen in a number of specialties which has gained for him an enviable reputation in the country of his birth, in England, Canada, and in New York at Chickering Hall last week. He will be accompanied by his own company of vocalists, dancers and pipers, presenting a high-class entertainment of unqualified merit. As an exponent of genuine Scotch characteristics Mr. Frame is without a rival, and his performances are themes of delight and hearty appoval.

"School for Scandal" will be the attraction at Daly's Theatre, New York, for one week only, beginning Jan. 16th, with Miss Rehan as Lady Teazle, one of her most popular impersonations in her vast repertoire. "The Taming of the Shrew" will follow for the week of Jan. 23d. Mr. Daly has received so many letters requesting Miss Rehan's appearance as Lady Teezle and Katherine that he has decided to give these few performances previous to the production of the Drury Lane Theatre success, "The Great Ruby," which is now in active preparation to follow. Miss Rehan as Lady Teazle will be supported by the principal members of the Daly Company cast as follows: Mr. Richman as Charles; Mr. Clark as Joseph; Mr. Varrey as Sir Peter; Mr. Owens as Sir Oliver; Mr. Ritchie Ling (with the original song) as Sir Harry; Mrs. Gilbert as Mrs. Candour; Miss Mary Cargill as Lady Sneerwell. Only matinees Wednesday, Jan. 18th and Saturday, January 21st.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she could not eat and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Judgment Rendered.

Judgment was rendered yesterday afternoon in Justice Nash's court in the case of the American Exchange National Bank against Frederick F. Chase, for $183 15 due on a note. City Judge Runyon represented the plaintiff.

WHAT DO THE CHILDREN DRINK? Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about 1/4 as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Dunellen, Jan. 13—Miss Virginia Tunison spent yesterday in Plainfield visiting friends.

The new 50-horse power boiler which Gray & Garrison have bought for their stone crusher in the mountains, was hauled up their Wednesday and placed in position. The boiler was placed on a truck and it required eight horses to draw it.

The board signs on the depot have been changed from their position on the front of the station to the sides, so that the passengers in passing trains can see what the name of the station they are passing is.

Miss Ida Simon, of Plainfield, has taken up her residence in the borough. She has rooms over over Dr. Brakeley's drug store.

Miss R. Swackhamer, of Whitehouse, who has been visiting Mrs. Harry Swackhamer, has returned home.

William Lanee has returned to Junction after a visit with his aunt, Mrs. William Keuhn.

Miss Lulu Adams has returned from Somerville where she has been visiting her aunt.

A social will be given Thursday evening in Apgar's Hall, on North avenue.

Mrs. Jane Apgar is ill at her home with an aggravated attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snowden are happy over the arrival of a girl baby.

Mrs. S. Ace, of Stroudsburg, is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Craig.

Mrs. E. S. Jamison is recovering from her attack of the grip.

T. C. Bodine is confined to the house with an attack of the grip.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, January 13.—Mrs. Catherine Gresser died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Miller, Wednesday morning. She had been ill with the grip which developed into pneumonia. Mrs. Gresser made her home with her daughter, and leaves, beside Mrs. Miller, a son. She was seventy-six years of age. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock from the house. Interment will be in the cemetery at Samptown.

The ice on the lake was literally covered with skaters yesterday afternoon. The ice is in fine condition, and as there is no one to object to the young people enjoying themselves, they have good times.

Several car loads of the wreckage from the recent disaster at West Dunellen, were side-tracked here for two or three days. They have just been removed.

Edson Davis, Willard Randolph, Howard Snowden, Charles Blackford and William Ackerman have recently joined Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

A. Burdick has recovered from his attack of the grip and has returned to work again.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, January 13.—District Deputy Samuel Robinson, of Plainfield, installed the newly-elected officers of Goodwill Lodge, K. of P., last evening. Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, of which Deputy Robinson is a member, attended the installation, and a very pleasent evening was spent by Goodwill and its visitors. The officers installed were: C. C., John R. Haskard; V. C., Robert Jahn; P. C., James Guttridge; M. of F., Theodore Bruckman; M. of E., Henry Cook; K. of R. and S., E. L. Hand.

The horse owned by Marsh, Ayres & Co., of Plainfield, caused some excitement in town yesterday afternoon by attempting to runaway, and for a time it looked as though it would accomplish its purpose, but before going very far the driver regained control of the animal and a bad runaway was averted.

The pulpit of the Episcopal church is still vacant, no regular pastor having been called as yet, but services are being held each Sunday, the pulpit being occupied by a supply or by Harry Robinson, of Fanwood, who was assistant to Rev. Mr. True during his pastorate.

The prayer meeting in the Baptist church will be held as usual this evening, and while the church is still without a regular pastor, a leader will be chosen from the membership of the church.

The Misses Hayes, of Fanwood, are planning to go with the Honeyman tourists on their trip to the Holy Land the first part of February.

About twenty-five applications have been received for the vacant pastorate of the Baptist church.

K. E. A. O. to Banquet.

The members of the K. E. A. O. have made arrangements to give a banquet Wednesday night, January 18th, in the City Hotel. Covers will be spread for all the members of the order in this city, and the banquet will be served at 9 o'clock.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion build up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Guaranteed.

WHITE'S WHITE SALE
THE WHITE GOODS EVENT OF THE SEASON.

Encouraged by the marked success which has attended our previous Muslin Underwear sales, we have made a large purchase for this occasion. Our orders were placed during the makers' dull season. The work has been most thoroughly done, materials and trimmings are of the best, the fit, finish and size generosity is the same as if the garments were made under your own supervision—by your own home seamstress—and the prices are less than you would pay for bare materials.

NIGHT ROBES.

Every feature of this sale is special, but more special than other features will be the nightgown selling. They are among the best creations of master makers and are daintily trimmed with the prettiest laces, ribbons and embroideries. Prices 25c, 49c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

WHITE SKIRTS.

Some plain with rows of tucks, some with cambric and embroidery flounces with lace insertions; all cut very full, nothing scant about them but the prices—25c, 35c, 49c, 75c to $1.25.

CORSET COVERS.

Trimmed with embroidery, torchon laces, or clusters of tucks with insertions, perfect fitting, high, square or V shape necks, made of fine cambric. Who would bother to make them when you buy at these prices—15c, 25c, 29c, 39c, 50c

DRAWERS.

Made with yoke bands, deep hamburg embroidery, umbrella, flounces or rows of tucks. As some of the best numbers are somewhat limited as to quantity it is advisable that you be among the early choosers as these lots cannot be duplicated at these prices—17c, 25c, 39c and 50c.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC.—Where am I going?—Ps. cxix, 57-64.

The One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm is the longest and most elaborate of all the psalms. It is an alphabetical psalm, having a stanza composed of eight verses for each of the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Each verse consists of two numbers only, each of which begins with the same letter of the alphabet. The subject of the psalm is the law of God, and it is practically an expansion of the Nineteenth Psalm. The author is unknown.

The topic suggests the idea that life is a journey, a going either toward God or from God. The psalmist in the topical reference declares that he is going toward God, directed by His law and testimonies. If we want to travel in the same direction, the word of God is our only true guide. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." The only way to go God's way is to follow His law. What we might call the steps in this way are pointed out in the topical reference.

1. The first step is consideration and decision to go God's way, as pointed out by His law (verse 57), "I have said that I would keep Thy words." This decision shows that there has been due consideration of the question. The psalmist has doubtless earnestly considered the matter as to which is the better way to go, with the law of God or against it, and has wisely concluded that he will keep God's word. This is the first step toward traveling with God. We must decide to do so, and after due consideration who can fail to come to the same conclusion? Personal interest, duty, destiny, demand obedience to God's law. If men considered the matter more thoroughly and earnestly, more would decide to go God's way. Thoughtlessness is largely the cause of godlessness. If we thought more upon our ways, we would more readily turn our feet unto God's testimonies.

2. The second step is the study of God's law. The law of God must be studied and known to be practiced. If we were blind, no light could guide us. Ignorance is blindness. It requires knowledge of God's law to make it of value to us. We should study it prayerfully, systematically, earnestly and constantly. Then we are in position to follow the direction it points us.

3. The third step is the practice of God's law. "I thought on my ways and turned my feet unto Thy testimonies. I made haste and delayed not to keep Thy commandments." Consideration, decision and study are valueless without action, without practice. The prodigal son thought, decided and acted. He said, "I will arise and go to my father," and he also "arose and went." Practice alone will make our decisions effective.

Two incidental characteristics of one traveling God's way are thanksgiving and association with those of the same manner of life. "At midnight I will arise and give thanks to Thee because of Thy righteous judgments. I am the companion of all them that fear Thee and of them that keep Thy precepts" (verses 62, 63). Child of God, going God's way, go and do thou likewise.

Bible Readings.—Gen. v, 24; vi, 8, 9; xvii, 1; II Kings xx, 1-6; Ps. i, 1-6; xvi, 8; xix, 14; xc, 12; cxvi, 9; cxix, 67, 105-112; Mic. vi, 8; Mal. ii, 6; John xiv, 1-7.

In Time of Trouble.

The presence of loving friends is a great help in time of trouble. While the Christian knows the help of God in the time of trouble he craves also the touch of a human hand. The Master took His three disciples when He went to His Father in prayer in Gethsemane. Human sympathy is wondrous help in trouble. If Paul could sing in the Philippian prison, yet he craved for the presence and sympathy of Titus and Timothy at other times. Christianity is not stoicism, that counts the craving for sympathy a weakness. The heart that knows most of the Saviour's presence, in the hour of trouble, appreciates most the loving sympathy of Christian friends.—Christian Intelligencer.

God's Will.

If we could always remember the absolute beneficence of God's will, we would oftener say, "Thy will be done," not with a sob of renunciation, but with a smile of happy faith. When we once realize that God's will is always and inevitably for our best interests, then our wills must lose themselves. This realization comes only through a deep knowledge of God, such as is gained alone by prayerful study of His word. And the result? Such perfect joy and energy and peace and power as earth has seldom seen. — Maytie Darrow Crane.

Something to Do.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you temperance and self control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Always Safe.

It is always safe to take it for granted that as yourself so others are trying to do their best. Shortcoming is no sign of short willing. Sweetness is never whipped in.—J. F. W. Ware.

The Shadow of Idleness.

Vice sometimes appears to me as the shadow of idleness. I do not feel horror when I see sin and misery, but shame for the sake of God.—Tennyson.

Often Mistaken.

And God Will Help.

Choose right, and God will help you to do right.—Church Standard.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 15, "Where Am I Going?" Text, Ps. cxix. 57-64.

"I thought on my ways and turned my feet unto Thy testimonies."

It is a bad sign when we don't want to be alone, when we are determined not to think. There is such a thing as brooding over the past and becoming morbid, despondent and utterly discouraged if we shut ourselves in from the world too long and think only of ourselves. But it is surely as bad for us to stifle all conviction and repress feeling and confuse all purpose in a continual whirl of worldly excitement.

It is also possible that we may be so full of work, even religious work, that we dissipate the deepest spiritual impressions. Time is needed for meditation. No growth in grace is adequate which doesn't base itself on earnest thought. It is particularly irksome to many minds to bring the thought in from wandering, fix it on some one subject and think. Especially is this true when there have been wrongs committed and duties neglected. It is painful to turn the searchlight upon one's own conduct, feelings and intentions. But it is safe, and there is safety in no other course. Take time to know yourself. Analyze your motives, see how much of your zeal is pride, how much of devotion is love of excitement, how much your freedom from temptation is due to shirking God's work, how much self indulgence has taken the place of self denial.

Take time to think out the Bible rules and apply to the problems of your own life. Some of the questions are as complicated as any algebraic equation. How can you solve them unless you think soberly and earnestly?

"I made haste and delayed not to keep Thy commandments."

That is the only safe way. "Put not off until tomorrow what today can do as well" is an old adage and a safe one to follow, especially in regard to all religious duties. Intuitions are strongest at the first, and the more they are examined the dimmer they grow. Most of the impulses to right come as intuitions and should be followed immediately. Delay blunts the edge of purpose and loses the opportune moment. While the iron is hot we must strike it or fail to shape it as desired.

An English Leader.

One of the most widely and favorably known of the younger generation of English Wesleyans is Rev. Hugh Price Hughes. Some years since he rose into particular prominence in connection with aggressive mission work in the west end of London, in a field particularly difficult. Services in St. James hall were instituted and the most skillful methods of evangelistic work employed. Associated with him was Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, well known on both sides the ocean by his quaint writings on spiritual themes. Mr. Hughes has an abundance of force and tact and has succeeded where a less positive man would have met absolute failure. He is editor of one of the most influential Methodist weeklies, and altogether one of the most conspicuous members of the Methodist church in England. He has made a visit to this country and became known to a large circle of Epworth Leaguers. The cut represents him as he appears at Grindelwald in his frequent trips among the Swiss Alps.

REV. HUGH PRICE HUGHES.

Start Early.

The new year has opened and active work in all departments of the League should be at once instituted if not already well under way. The end to be aimed at is the development of sincere piety. This should be simple, genuine and intelligent. All departments are needed for the highest success. A regular course of services is the most useful. If a meeting can be held once a week and the books of the reading course used, it will give a good start. There is a book for each department. "The Founding of a New World" is written for the spiritual department and deals with the first 300 years of the Christian church. Let this form the basis for discussion for 30 minutes of the session. A chapter can be read aloud or the events described can be presented in a short paper, address or conversation. Maps, pictures, blackboard and other books can be used to explain more fully the incidents of the early Christian life. Songs, prayers, testimonies and exhortations can fill another half hour and the result of the short hour of service be a quickening of the intellectual and spiritual pulse of every member.

Leaguers at School.

A host of our members are absent from home at school. Remember them specially in prayer this week. Pray that they may be kept from falling. Peculiar temptations surround them. Home restraints are removed. Unwonted freedom of action is given. Experience has not rendered them cautious and wise. Homesickness may press them to seek companionship not of the best. New truth may unsettle old faith. Old habits of devotion may be broken by pressure of new duties. Pray for them!

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNANIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text—And His disciples believed on Him—John ii: 11. Jan. 15.

The marriage in Cana, was, likely, not any different from any other Jewish wedding in its plan. The time for it was according to Jewish custom, the day being Wednesday. The place appointed for it was in the home. The company in attendance were relatives and friends. In all this it was like other weddings. It was a time of rejoicing and feasting. Usual refreshments were provided for the company. Mary, the mother of Jesus, was there, and this fact would lead us to conclude that religious customs and ceremonies were carried out. But the special feature about the wedding was the fact Jesus was invited and his disciples. He may have attended other weddings during his youth, yet not as he attended this. He was entering upon his public ministry, not any longer to be as the son of Mary, but as the Son of God, and his disciples were more than mere friends. They were his followers because they accepted him as the Messiah. And because Jesus accepted the invitation to that wedding, we see that he put his endorsement upon social life, and upon marriage. He chose to make that occasion memorable by performing there his first miracle. Public men are sometimes anxious with regards to a first appearance, that it should be upon a scene in society, and with accompaniments worthy of themselves, or their own conceptions of themselves. Jesus proved his superiority to human vanity and weakness in performing his first "sign" in a lowly home at a villager's wedding. Christians should be the happiest, most social beings on earth, yet they must keep the presence of Christ with them, or they may be led into worldly folly.

The miracle proved Christ's absolute power over nature. It teaches that his resources are equal to the kindness of his heart. It teaches further that he expects man to do his duty. It teaches us to observe Christ in his works. It was not wrong for Mary to desire the miracle, or the exaltation of Jesus, only as she desired to make a show of him as her son. Her true humility and modesty is seen in her submission to his instruction. It was a new unfolding to her to be shown "that her relationship was no ground on which she might make application to Jesus, and that her former claims on that ground had passed away. And that in all matters connected with his work she was no more to him than other believers. That he was her Lord, and the thing which he was about to do was not done for the reason for which she desired it." The water was made wine. This was done by his mere will. It was done with the greatest ease. It was done openly. It was done immediately. There was no break in the festive joy; no disappointment on account of failure; no anxiety on account of delay. It was done perfectly. The wine was pronounced 'good,' not extraordinary. God in miracles is not superior to God in nature; God's works, however performed, are divine and uniform, and all his gifts are good. The quality of the wine was good, and the quantity was kingly. 'Too much,' says some one. Yes, too much for a peasant, but not for a king. There was enough for the guests, and enough to spare, as his wedding-gift to the young pair to commence life with."

Obedience on the part of the servants was necessary. They were to see that he performed a miracle. They were to fill the water-pots with water, and pour out and serve wine. It is thus that Jesus chooses to confer blessings upon men. "He uses some to provide for the wants of others, both bodily and spiritually." While Mary was out of place in directing Jesus, she showed her obedience to his will in directing the servants, which she had every right to do. Obedience on their part would bring joy and satisfaction to them.

Glory. Jesus manifested forth his glory. V. 11. "Does it seem to the reader of this little narrative that this language is somewhat strained—is pitched rather too high? An obscure village, a homely festival, a peasant's party. As the world judges there was no glory in Jesus any more than in his surroundings, his associates. Glory was reflected upon the countenances and the hearts of the assembled company. The master of the feast, the bride, and the bridegroom, may little have known who and what manner of person they had invited and were entertaining in Jesus of Nazareth. But henceforth—surely henceforth! he must have been to them the Divine Friend and Lord. Glory was revealed to Christ's own disciples. Glory was, through his record, radiated to all time and to the whole universe, revealing the character and the ministry of Immanuel."

At the end, as at the beginning, of the public life of Jesus was a feast, and in that guest-chamber there was also the "fruit of the vine." Jesus calls it, "The new covenant in my blood, that which is poured out of you." Luke 22: 18-22. So wine speaks of redemption of life. Gen. 9:4; Lev. 17:11. "As Jesus steps forth from long retirement, he sprinkles the door of the New Dispensation with blood; for in the new order the blood of the grape takes the place of the blood of the paschal lamb. As in Hunt's painting, the shadow of the cross is thrown back until it falls across the shop at Nazareth, so amid these wedding festivities we find the same shadow; we see in symbol that blood of Jesus which is the center of all our hopes and joys, and by which we enter into the holiest of all."

CHAPTER III.

The Constance Brandford whom Priscilla had known five years before had been one of those vivid, bright creatures who had set "all the other girls" by the ears at boarding school, and had finally gone off in a (schoolgirl version) blaze of glory in search of a career. Priscilla had never heard how she had succeeded, nor what she had developed into, but she had scoured home newspapers for foreign correspondence concerning her, and finally had come to the conclusion that she was pursuing a modest if none the less enviably perfect experience abroad.

As she and Mary were ushered across an evil smelling antechamber into a dark and musty salon overfurnished with chairs and sofas evidently bought en occasion, artificial flowers grown dusty, and a clock under a glass case with the hands pointing five hours out of the way, it occurred to Priscilla that Constance had most certainly mastered the art of self abnegation with the rest—the "rest" Stornmouth had spoken of. She had known Constance's home before she had lost her parents and, with their death, all means of support. It had been on the south side of Long Island, with a beautifully clipped lawn in front, a wide eave roofed piazza, a Queen Anne interior, and a little white nest of a room "for daughter," which overlooked a gigantic honeysuckle, a rose garden planted and tended by Constance's own hands, and a glimpse of the Great South bay's blue waters dancing like live lapis lazuli between the toss of silver gray maple leaves at the foot of the garden slope. This was indeed a contrast.

The door opened slowly, and a figure slipped quietly into the room. "Oh, Priscilla!" said a voice.

Priscilla stepped forward quickly and kissed the tired, pathetic little face lifted to hers. Then she reseated herself very suddenly, with a queer tight feeling about her heart.

"Why, Constance!" she ejaculated. "How thin you've grown!"

"Have I?" said Constance's familiar voice indifferently. "Work, I presume."

"Where are you singing?" demanded Priscilla nervously. "I must go and hear you."

"I am looking for an engagement just now," said Constance dejectedly. "It's the most forlorn business in the world."

"Why don't you go to Geoffroy and let him hear you?" suggested Priscilla hopefully. "You have such a lovely voice." Geoffroy was the manager of the Grand Opera.

"It is very evident you have just come over," remarked Constance, with a faint smile. "Where are you going for the winter? To Rome or Nice?"

"Didn't you know?" began Priscilla eagerly. "I am going to sing in grand opera." Then she checked herself suddenly. To her astonishment and chagrin Constance was looking at her with exactly the same expression of benevolent amusement she had seen on Stornmouth's face that first day they had made each other's acquaintance on the steamer.

"Oh!" said Constance. "What for?"

Priscilla blushed. "Because I wish to become a prima donna," she explained a little lamely.

"Why?" asked Constance.

"You should know why," returned Priscilla reproachfully. "You know what it is to have a voice and to be consumed with the desire to sing."

"I know it to my cost," said Constance bitterly. "Go to Geoffroy! I have sung for Geoffroy. I have sung for them all. I have spent all my money, I have used up all my friends, I have exhausted my strength, I have waited, longed, passed sleepless nights, lived through tortured days of imagining, starvation and total annihilation, and still I am looking for an engagement."

"Is your voice gone?"

"No," said Constance. "There are too many of us; that's all. Besides, there is a prejudice against foreigners over here. They don't want us. It is not the way it is at home. We receive anybody who has merit and a foreign reputation. Here it is different. It takes—oh, Priscilla, it takes so many things I have never suspected. It takes the strength to withstand temptation, jealousy, spite, indifference. Besides, there are only ten stages in Europe today worth singing on where the directors pay. They don't desire ladies on them, they say. And yet we girls are coming over and coming over, some for a little work, more for vanity, many for that mad search after an unattainable chimera.

"And yet, when I sing"—the little figure had risen; the gentle oval face, with its pretty uncertain outline and its hopeless eyes, took on a color and life which made it look once more the way it used to look—"and yet, when I sing, everything is forgotten. You don't know what rapture it is to hold 5,000 people with a note or a cadenza, to hear the applause which sounds far off like the patter of rain on a tin roof, to feel that wonderful power in you which comes with the sound of your own voice in a great space where the acoustic properties reward it for its best effort. You can't imagine what it is to feel that, after the days and months and years of strife and strain and inappreciation, you are at last in your only normal condition, the condition of song. All art is an uplift, but it seems to me there is no art so captivating as the art which returns to your listening ears the cadences of your own voice. It is a rapturous, novel sense which puts out forever the memory of past heartaches, albeits only for the time outlived and conquered."

"Don't, please," said Mary. "If you look like that when you sing, you would make me cry."

"When I sing!" Constance repeated. "But you can't imagine how painful all the practical part of the business is. To go around to the agents like a bale of goods to be appraised at one's market value! It is terrible!"

"I thought the agents came to you," said Priscilla.

"So did I," said Constance, "but they don't. You have to beg them for a hearing. And most of them are men—well, such men, Priscilla! I hate them." This she said with a hot flush, which faded instantly to make way for a sudden gray pallor.

"Why don't you take some one with you?" suggested Priscilla.

"I am too poor. Besides, it would do no good. No one can help you but yourself. We live as we die, alone. We sign our own engagements. There is honor among thieves. It is the rarest thing in the world to find honor among vocal agents. They fleece American girls. They consider them their natural prey, and then they laugh behind their backs for having been gulled."

"Why don't you go home?" inquired Priscilla; then she drew herself up short as she thought of Stornmouth.

Constance shook her head. "I will never return now," she said, "until I am a success. You don't mind my being amused now when you speak of singing in grand opera, do you?"

"No," said Priscilla dubiously. "But American girls have sung there."

"When they do," remarked Constance mournfully, "they are so badly treated they are glad to get away."

"I don't mean to be discouraged," she said.

"You will be the only American girl studying in Paris who thinks who is not," returned Constance harshly. "Listen. When you have consented to make singing your profession and are studying, you must not go out nights. Dancing dries your voice. It weakens your vocal cords. You must not speak in the open air after singing. It gives you a sore throat. You must not eat nuts or certain vegetables. It makes you hoarse. You must not worry. It tires your voice. You must walk to keep up your strength. You must renounce all your friends in order to have time to work. You must hope against hope, because you must work against people who are ahead of you through their vile talent for the basest intrigues, with less accomplishments, with utter lack of refinement, with nothing holy or reverent in their purpose, with but one idea in their souls—to be seen. I have sung in Italy for nothing. I have sung in the provinces, where my managers made a fiasco and we were obliged to close the doors. My enemies say I was the cause. It is not true."

"It is awfully mournful," said Priscilla, with a little shudder, "but you are morbid, are you not? It seems to me if you could be heard by the right agent you would get on."

"That shows your ignorance," Constance affirmed sadly.

"What are you studying now?" asked Priscilla.

"I am going over old roles and waiting. We are all waiting. Every six months about four of us get an engagement, and the other 1,996 twirl their thumbs. Our youth is going; our voices are not getting younger."

"I would rather," suggested Priscilla, "go home and sing for my friends."

"That doesn't pay," returned Constance coldly.

"Wouldn't you sing in church?"

"My voice has been trained for the stage. It's the difference between wine and water, singing dramatically or singing otherwise."

"It's funny, isn't it," said Mary dreamily, curiously unaware of the inefficiency of her adjective, "it's funny, isn't it, that the one thing we wish to do in this world is nearly always the thing we can't do or find it hardest to do?"

"That is just the reason we wish to do it," said Constance mournfully, wiping her eyes furtively. "I love the fight, but I can't imagine any one but a poor girl like me doing it unless it is necessary."
